Some of the earliest tulips and narcissi will now be sufficiently started so that they can be placed in heat. Do not figure on getting these in flower for the holidays. There are usually a few, grown from French bulbs, that are seen at Christmas each year, but a certain percentage of these fail to flower, and there is really just as much money in them a month later at half holiday prices. The tulips want a dark case to draw them up; one used for forcing valley will be found just right for this purpose. The narcissi will also do better if kept dark for a few days. La Reine is the earliest of the tulips and Trumpet Major is the first to flower among the narcissi.

Storage of Gloxinias, etc.

To economize space, it is a good plan now to shake the summer-flowering greenhouse tubers, such as gloxinias and tuberous begonias, out of their pots and pack them away for the winter in sand or cocoanut fiber, storing them in a temperature of 50 degrees. Fancy caladiums are better if left in the pots and they want warm, dry winter quarters; 60 to 65 degrees is not too much. Tydeas, gesneras and achimenes winter well where the temperature is 10 to 15 degrees lower and are better if not disturbed now.

Compost for Winter.

We have reached a period in the year when it is well to lay in a good supply of loam, sand, leaf-mold, well decayed cow manure, moss, charcoal and anything else needed in the soil. Although we may get good weather for some time yet, winter may shut down on us at once and it is always best to be prepared for it. We all have experienced some of the pleasures of housing these necessities when they are buried in snow and when zero weather prevails, and we must admit that it is better to get all our requirements under cover while the weather is warm and pleasant.

Primula Obconica.

In order to have Primula obconica in good bloom for Christmas, the plants should be grown in a light, sunny house in a carnation temperature and should be kept as close to the glass as possible. Perhaps you have a lot of small plants which would hardly sell singly. These can be made up into pans, taking care to have each pan a distinct shade. If these are made up now, they will be nicely established before Christmas and the New Year, which is the season when they sell the best.

Primula Sinensis.

A shelf for a few weeks in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees will bring Primula Sinensis along in nice shape for the holidays. The scarlet varieties are always good sellers and these, fortunately, seem to bloom earlier than the white and pink shades. Do not worry if you do not get all in flower for Christmas, as there are many weeks following that date when pot plants of a moderate price will sell. If the plants are well potbound, a pinch of some highly concentrated plant food, like Clay's, Imperial Plant Food or Bon Arbor, will tone them up.

Primula Malacoides.

Several complaints have been received about Primula malacoides damping badly. Correspondents state that they had big, healthy plants, but that now the leaves are rotting badly, and in some cases entire centers have rotted away. For one thing, a mistake has been made in sowing this variety so early. It is a robust grower, and instead of sowing the seed in February or March we should wait until May. The plants then would be of more moderate size and would damp less. However, those who have present trouble should keep their plants in a cool, sunny, airy house and run it cooler than the other primulas; a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees is ample. Never spray overhead, or you will soon ruin the plants, and in watering take care not to pour any into the center of the crown. It is also necessary to run the hands over the plants two or three times a week and if any decaying foliage is found, remove it.

This primula cannot be flowered in good condition for Christmas, but it will be in grand shape for Easter. It is such a beautiful, airy-like subject that we feel sure that any giving it a little special care will be well repaid by the prices they will receive. One more point: This primula is a robust grower and needs about three times as much in the way of stimulants as any other variety.

Schizanthus.

The earliest sowing of schizanthus is now well established in 6-inch pots and already the plants have some flowers open. With the pots full of active roots, they must have lots of water, in addition to feeding twice a week. As they are rather brittle plants, they must have at least one stake each to prevent their breaking off near the pot. Schizanthus will not tolerate anything like forcing. If much heat is given, the shoots will become weak and leggy and the flowers will lack substance. A temperature of 45 degrees at night is sufficiently high and the plants should be well up to the glass. Then they will be dwarf and stocky, and when they flower the foliage will be almost hidden. Make a sowing now and you will have nice plants for spring flowering. Sow in a flat and pot off singly. In addition to their beauty as decorative plants, schizanthus flowers last wonderfully when cut. The best variety for pot culture is Wisetonensis.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

Bedding geraniums, as the weather becomes colder and the proportion of dark days increases, must have more careful watering. It is better to keep them quite a little on the dry side through the coldest months. If kept constantly moist at the root, they make too rank a growth and there is also a greater probability of quite a few damping off. Where a supply of stock plants is on hand in pots or benches—the latter gives the more abundant crop of cuttings—a fresh batch can be secured almost weekly, and now that they can be given a little steady bottom heat, few should damp. Indoor-grown cuttings are, of course, firmer and far less likely to rot than those taken from outdoor plants. If the sand in the cutting bench is rather fine and water does not pass quickly through it, break up some charcoal, pass it through a 1/8-inch or even a 1/4-inch screen and mix it with the sand. This will make a splendid rooting medium.

Plants which are wanted in flower for the holidays must have a house kept at 52 to 55 degrees at night, with a rather dry atmosphere. Keep water off the foliage and flower trusses. As the pots will be full of roots, a pinch of a safe fertilizer or some weak cow manure water, with some soot added to it, will keep the foliage a rich, dark green color. Do not crowd the plants. Place a few upon inverted pots where you want extra fine, well-leaved plants. Pick the plants over twice a week, removing any dead and moldy leaves.

THE KELLOGG STORE.

The accompanying illustration shows the remodeled store of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., 1122 Grand avenue, Kansas City. Extensive alterations were made during the last summer, and an auto truck was purchased for delivery. The greenhouses are located at Pleasant Hill, where the company has some 400,000 square feet of glass. The business is both wholesale and retail.

NASHVILLE, TENN.The Market.

Thanksgiving pleased all. There was a good demand for chrysanthemums for the football rooters, the downtown stores having all the customers they could wait on all the forenoon. The sales had been good for several days before and pretty nearly everything that was good was cleaned up. There were more roses left in the evening than any other flower.

Carnations continue to arrive in ever increasing numbers, but so far have all been cleaned up at good prices. Roses are about as they were a week ago. Plenty of sunshine is bringing them in rather too freely, but the quality helps to sell them. Sweet peas are more plentiful and are of better quality. They are moving readily. The quantity of good single and anemone-flowered chrysanthemums that continue to appear on the market leads one to wonder where they come from and who buys them. They are, if anything, a better lot than we had earlier in the season. The anemone-flowered varieties seem to be the most popular.

Various Notes.

A visit to Lischey's Gardens found everything pretty well cleaned up by the Thanksgiving trade. The proprietor, Joe Brown, says that they grow pot plants mostly, but that they are enjoying a good cut flower trade. They have their houses well filled either with stock plants or young stock. They have done a heavy fall's business this year in shrubbery and bulbs.

A visit to the Joy greenhouses after Thanksgiving showed that where everything was full to overflowing a week ago, house after house is empty. The chrysanthemums were all sold but a few that had been reserved for a special occasion. Everyone was busy replanting. Several of the houses are already planted to sweet peas, others to violets. For the peas the soil in the mum benches is simply spaded and well mixed with manure, a little bone meal added and the seed planted.

I called on Geny Bros. about eleven o'clock Thanksgiving morning, and the store was thronged. By one o'clock about everything was sold that was fit to sell and the store closed for the day. I spent a part of a day looking over a few of the Geny growing houses this week. Everything was in the pink of condition. I was especially impressed with the Asparagus plumosus nanus. They do not allow it to run more than three or four feet at the most, giving as a reason that by keeping the leads pinched back they get more green, of a better color and quality.

The Stief Jewelry store opening was almost a flower show. The most elaborate design was one made by Joy, in the shape of an old Gothic triple crown, placed above the elevator door. The lower band of the crown was six and one-half feet in diameter and three and one-half feet deep. From the base to the apex the crown was eight and one-half feet tall.

The McIntyre store is about completed and it presented a pretty appearance Thanksgiving morning. They kept open and did a big business all day long.

Haury Bros. say they did the biggest Thanksgiving business ever. Every one is pleased with the day's business and all are getting ready to do it over again Xmas. F. B.

DETROIT.The Market.

Thanksgiving trade broke all records. The chrysanthemum business was away beyond expectations and the general report is that everything cleaned up. The business for this day usually develops late, and this year was no exception; at the last minute it was a hustle to get just the grade of stock with which to fill orders. Yellow and pink mums had the call and the fancy stock came in for a heavy demand. There was no oversupply at any time and a shortage developed at the last minute. Medium grade mums sold well, as they always do, and cleaned up about as fast as they were unpacked. Pompon mums had a great call, with the heaviest demand running to yellow and bronze. Helen Newberry, our favorite white pompon, ran a close second. Roses were also in good demand and all stock in this line was cleaned up on sight. Beauties were also sold in large lots. Carnations were short and orders had to be cut to give everybody a part of what he needed. Violets were not called for so heavily as expected and this can be accounted for by the heavy run on the pompons. Valley was in strong demand and the wholesalers had a busy time filling their local and out-of-town orders. Sweet peas were in and enjoyed a steady demand. Stevia was to be had and moved right along with the other stock. Paper Whites made their appearance, as did Romans, and all had their supporters. Greens of all kinds sold well, with the heavy call running to fancy adiantum, of which there was a good supply.

The holiday, all in all, was the best Detroit has ever enjoyed at this season of the year and we are all looking forward now to a record-breaking Christmas business.

Various Notes.

Geo. Bayer, of Toledo, consigned heavily to this market for Thanksgiving. His Bonnaffon mums were choice and the fine pompons will be remembered.

Thos. F. Browne hit the market right with his big mums and kept them coming right along, two and three loads daily.

Albert Stahelin cleaned up his Bonnaffons and made a record-breaking finish, with 2,000 blooms on the morning of November 27.

Michael Bloy has no complaints to make on the business this year and sold his large lot of mums to good advantage.

Fred Breitmeyer wound up his mum season with Thanksgiving and is well pleased with the business.

Robert Klagge has a nice cut of medium sized mums and also was heavy on good roses and valley.

E. A. Feters was a heavy buyer of pompons last week and reports a satisfactory business.

Albert Pochelon worked nearly all night Thanksgiving eve and is taking things easy this week.

Walter Taepke, in addition to the big rush, had a large funeral Thanksgiving day.

Philip Breitmeyer was hard at work all last week and is still a busy man, with several large decorations.

Schroeter reports a fine Thanksgiving trade and has an artistically arranged window this week.

Louis Charvat reports heavy wedding business for Thanksgiving and also a good general demand.

Norman Sullivan, in his new store, has some fine window displays and is building up a nice business. H. S.

WINTER WINDOW BOXES.

The popularity of window boxes for summer decoration promises shortly to be equaled by their popularity in winter. In winter, necessarily, evergreens are the principal plants used, but it has been found that a considerable variety of stock is available. Though boxwood still is used in larger quantity than anything else, other handsome evergreens can be used, either singly or in a combination of varieties, producing a larger range of effects. So large has the business become that some of the nurseries making a specialty of evergreens for window boxes now supply the boxes with the plants established in them. These they can sell to retail florists who have themselves no facilities for handling and filling the boxes, thereby largely increasing the use of this form of winter decoration.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.The Market.

Stock of all sorts has been scarce since Thanksgiving. The warm weather preceding brought an abundance of flowers for the holiday. However, the weather since has been quite cold and cloudy and things have not matured so well. Roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums have gone up in price. Chrysanthemums are pretty well cleaned up, only a few remaining. There are still a few good pompons to be had.

from Boston, and stevia from Connecticut were added to the list of cut flowers last week. Trade in general has been good. Immortelles are in demand this fall. They have almost doubled in price.

Various Notes.

Mark Aitken did a good Thanksgiving business. He finished cutting his mums last week. His violets are getting scarce, but with the new crop they will again be plentiful.

The Flower Shop, on Worthington street, reports a fine trade for the end of November. It was all sold out of stock at the close of Thanksgiving day.

William Schlatter & Son say that this year's Thanksgiving trade was ahead of last year. Their specialties were sweet peas and poinsettias.

Osterman & Steele were far ahead of last year in their receipts for November 28. They had some specially good stevia last week.

T. F. Sheehan was entirely cleaned out of flowers November 28, which would indicate that trade was more than satisfactory.

N. F. Higgins reports that trade was the best ever. He is showing some good cyclamens, primroses, azaleas, Lorraine begonias, and Scotch heathers.

Meacham & Hassell did a fine Thanksgiving business. They had a run on pompon chrysanthemums.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is shipping some good pompon chrysanthemums Richmond Warner made a business trip to Palmer, Mass., last week.

Visitors: Robert Greenlaw, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; A. Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Fred W. Pettit, of F. E. Palmer, Brookline, Mass. E. C. A.

HARTFORD, CONN.The Market.

The general opinion of the trade is that Thanksgiving was the best ever. In some lines the demand exceeded the supply, especially on the best grade of roses and violets. Some good White Killarney came in on long stems and sold readily. Killarney was short in stem, but anything in the shape of a rose sold. There were plenty of yellows, but they all cleaned up. Beauties were scarce, but of good quality, and had there been more of them they doubtless would have sold. Specials brought from $6 to $10 per dozen, retail, while specials of other varieties brought from $3 to $4 per dozen. Carnations were plentiful and sold well. Beacon was more in demand than any other, with Pink Delight and Winsor close seconds. Fancy grades fetched from $2 to $3 per dozen, retail. Mums came in heavily, but the quality was not of the best. The poorer grades hardly paid for the handling. There were quite a few sweet peas and they sold well. Valley was good and just about enough to go around. Violets were cleaned up the previous week, so that they were hardly seen. Orchids sold well and were in good demand. Lilies went slowly, but the supply was not large. Greens cleaned up. Some well grown begonias were seen, also poinsettias in pans.

Various Notes.

John Coombs has received a new Ford auto, which will be quite an addition to his delivery department.

Louis Barton is cutting some fine Killarneys at his Elmwood houses. His orders are mostly out of town.

Spears & McManus are receiving some fine carnations from Morgan & Sons, of Glastonburg.

A burglar entered the store of J. A. Brodrib, on Windsor avenue, but only obtained 45 cents for his efforts.

Mrs. Goodman, of West Hartford, picked some fine violets, which found a ready sale at Thanksgiving.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, has started to graft roses and that work will go on until well toward spring.

W. S. C.

CINCINNATI.The Gateway to the South.

The close of last week showed the market to be in a tight condition in every line. This week's opening, however, showed an easing up all along the line because the cut came back to normal. Almost everything ready had been cut close for Thanksgiving, and had sold. There is an active demand that at the time of this writing takes up everything in sight. The list of offerings includes every seasonable rose, carnations in a rather short supply, lilies, callas, chrysanthemums, including many choice Chadwick; lily of the valley, single and double violets, orchids, narcissi, pansies and stevia.

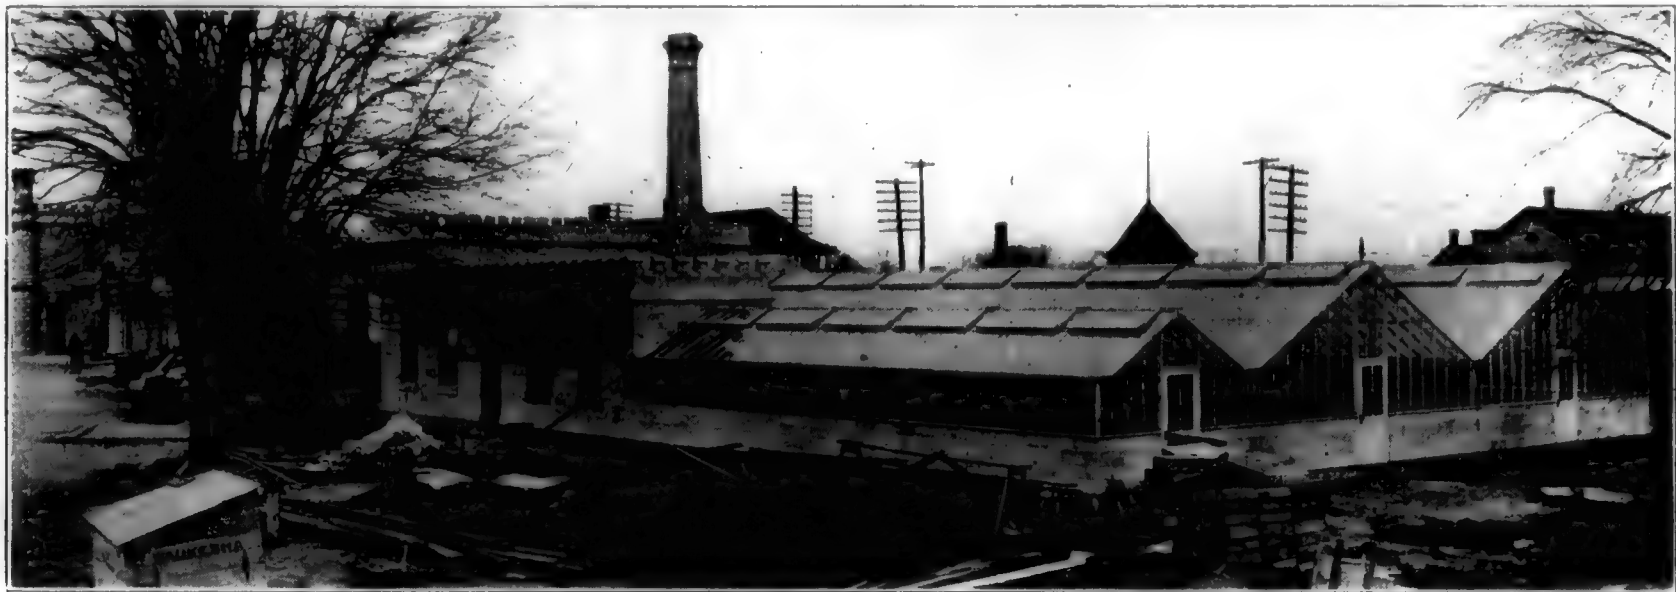

Window Boxes Filled with Evergreens Have Become Widely Popular.

Beauties are much better than they have been and brought a fancy price for Thanksgiving. Carnations are good this week, both in stem and color. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are quite plentiful. Primroses, Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, Jerusalem cherries, azaleas and heather plants sold well at Thanksgiving. Sweet peas, mums and American Beauties to this city.

Miss May French, of Mark Aitken's, made up a handsome and costly casket cover last week, which went to a prominent funeral in Palmer, Mass.

N. F. McCarty & Co., of Boston, are sending good Richmond, Taft and Killarney roses to this city.

New Range Erected by Rosehill Cemetery Association, Chicago.

There is at this early date already a strong demand for supplies and material for Christmas. Right now the demand is principally for accessories. It will, however, soon turn to the actual Christmas decorative material.

Various Notes.

The club meeting Monday evening, December 2, was not well attended, only about twice as many as was needed for a quorum being present. The report of the entertainment committee was optimistic and showed beyond a question that the banquet and lecture by R. Vincent, Jr., at the Bennet House next Monday, December 9, at 8 p. m. sharp, is bound to be a success. Tickets can be obtained from any wholesaler.

Peter Herb, Mt. Healthy, O., is sending excellent pansies and Chadwick mums to C. E. Critchell. Mr. Critchell has received his first bronze leucothoe of the season.

Albert McCullough and daughter, Mrs. Chas. Blackburn, have gone to California for a visit.

E. G. Gillett reports a good Thanksgiving business.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange received some excellent poinsettias for Thanksgiving.

L. H. Kyrk is finding a good market for the double stevia from Geo. Klotter.

J. H. Bode wishes to brand as an untruth the story that has been circulated here that he is to leave the park department and enter the service of the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O.

Peter Weiland was down from New Castle for Thanksgiving. This was the first anniversary of the opening of the Cincinnati sales office.

P. J. Olinger enjoyed a good Thanksgiving business.

Geo. Magrie has made his usual arrangements for his carload shipments of holly for Christmas.

Victor Thomas, Augusta, Ky., is erecting a greenhouse 22 x 118 feet.

Those recently in the city from other points include L. F. Benson, Indianapolis, Ind.; M. Anderson, Dayton, O.; Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer's, Philadelphia, and Robert Groves, Adams, Mass.

C. H. H.

This will be an extremely busy month with J. A. Peterson & Sons, who have, among other holiday specialties, eight houses of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati grown for the Christmas trade, just coming into shape—it is a grand sight and each season attracts many visitors at this date. Only a small part of the stock is sold locally, the bulk being shipped to the retail stores throughout the country. Glory of Cincinnati, as is well known, originated here, and it is Mr. Peterson's boast that it has relieved the trade of the troubles that grew out of handling Lorraine, for Glory of Cincinnati will ship safely and keep well.

CEMETERY GREENHOUSES.

Rosehill Cemetery, Chicago, has just added to its greenhouse facilities the range shown in the accompanying illustration. The new range consists of four houses, a palm house, two plant houses and a propagating house. The palm house is 25x50 and is built south of and connected to an addition to the administration buildings. It has a curvilinear roof covered with ground glass, while large plate glass is used in the walls. South of the palm house and connected thereto are the plant houses, each 25x100, separated by glass partitions and to be used mainly for the growing of pot plants. The propagating house is 13x100 and connects to these houses on the west. The north end is used as a potting house. All the houses have continuous ventilators on both slopes. The layout of the houses allows for a large open court in front of the palm house, which court will be filled with flower beds early in the season. The material for the houses was supplied by A. Dietsch Co., Chicago. The walls have deep concrete foundations and are built of concrete blocks above the ground. The houses, which are built on the Garland iron gutters, thus are in harmony with the administration buildings.

ROOTING FICUS CUTTINGS.

Please tell me whether there is any way to root cuttings from a rubber plant without allowing them to remain on the plant. I have a plant with about 200 cuttings on it. H. C. K.

Cuttings may be taken from a Ficus elastica, or rubber plant, and planted in sand in small pots, and the pots should be placed in a propagating frame where they can be kept warm and protected from the sun.

If given proper care and attention, such cuttings may root in the course of four to six weeks, but it is much safer to cut the shoots halfway through on the tree, and then to bind them up in wet moss, keeping the moss moist at all times until the roots show through, when the cuttings should be cut off and potted up. The latter method gives much the better results, but the tops will not root as quickly now as they will in spring and summer. W. H. T.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

During the week ending Saturday, November 30, the volume of business done by the wholesalers, growers and retailers was unusually large, according to all reports. There were a large number of weddings, receptions, dinners and an unusual quantity of funeral work. The wholesale market was in high glee all the week. There was plenty of stock and it all cleaned up pretty well at good prices. Improvement in quality also was noted.

Chrysanthemum blooms are on the down grade and the market Monday, December 2, was so shy on stock that it looks as though all our local growers are cut out. Roses are coming along finely and the market is daily supplied with good consignments in all grades and varieties. Carnations, too, are coming good, with long stems and excellent flowers. These have been rather scarce of late. Prices are up on the fancy grades; $5 to $6 per hundred is being asked for extra select.

There are several who have taken up growing valley for this market and it can be had in large lots, of good quality. Violets are in great demand, but not enough are coming in and prices are up to $1 per hundred for choice. Lilies are plentiful and had a splendid demand all last week, with prices from $10 to $15 per hundred. Adiantum, asparagus, galax, leucothoe

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. says its first Thanksgiving business was more than was expected. A new Ford delivery car came in handy.

George Schriefer, head of the cut flower department at C. A. Kuehn's, says business was excellent all week, with the supply equal to the demand.

The Riessen Floral Co., Grimm & Gorly and Alex Siegel, downtown retailers, say they had big business all through the week. Everything sold well.

Along Grand avenue the retail florists all report a great Thanksgiving business. Up north Bentzen, Mullanphy and Tower; at Grand and Olive, Waldbart, Myers and the Metropolitan; south, Windler, Eggeling, Bergstermann and Beyer had better business than last year. In the west end Newman, F. H. Weber, F. C. Weber, Ellison, Kalisch, Sander, Foster and Sanders all say it was a great Thanksgiving. Reports from florists in the south and north ends say that this year was an improvement over last year.

Various Notes.

Marie Richerson, formerly with Otto Sander, is now in the employ of Grimm & Gorly, at their Washington avenue store.

The chicken show at the Coliseum last week had charms for a number of florists. Among them were W. J. Pilcher, W. C. Smith, Frank Weber and others.

The marriage license office had a busy week. The 124 licenses issued November 27 must have brought considerable business to the florists, as all report quite a lot of wedding work for last week.

Francis Fillmore, Sr., 87 years old, the S. A. F. The trustees have completed all arrangements to entertain Mr. Vincent and the members on this occasion. W. C. Smith and Charles Young have been appointed as bodyguards for Mr. Vincent during his stay. Special notices are being sent to all members for this meeting.

John J. Wunderli, of the Alexander Floral Co., at Clayton, surprised his many friends when he was married last week to Miss Anna Urban. Mr. Wunderli calls it an elopement to get even with his son and daughter, who both eloped recently and got married.

Max Herzog's place in the south end is in splendid shape. He has a fine house of poinsettias in pots and pans for his own use for the Christmas trade.

Invitations are out for the twenty-third annual banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, at the Washington hotel at 7 p. m. December 13, at which President Richard Vincent, Jr., of the Society of American Florists, will give an illustrated lecture on the London flower show.

Visitors: M. Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Frank McCabe, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. J. J. B.

FLORICULTURE AT LINCOLN.

One of the Illinois cities in which the florists are prospering is Lincoln, where there is a first-class local retail business and an excellent opportunity for a wholesale plant business, of which full advantage has been taken. The accompanying illustrations show, one of them, the range of greenhouses of Gullett & Sons, and the other the interior of one of the houses of cyclamens. Cyclamens are a leading specialty, but a complete line of popular flowering plants is grown for each of the holidays, with a large line of bedding stock following for spring sales.

A FEW FERNS.

How many hardy cut ferns does the florists' trade of the United States consume in a year? It is a question which has been put to a number of those engaged in the fern business, but none of them appears to have any information on the subject. That it runs into hundreds of millions there can be no doubt.

Prior to the last dozen years practically all the ferns used in the trade were gathered in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, but the demand has increased so rapidly that the dealers in the eastern section have been obliged to open new fields, and the south and Michigan, and now Wisconsin, are contributing to the supply. A large part of the eastern ferns now come from New York state and from Vermont. What has at first seemed like an inexhaustible supply has lasted only a few seasons, and each year it becomes necessary to go farther away from the railroads. In the beginning the pickers operated wherever they could find the ferns, but nowadays, at least in the eastern districts, it is necessary for the pickers to pay real money to the owner of the land for the privilege of picking the native ferns. It has become extremely difficult to buy territory near the railroads and the ferns must be hauled a long distance by team. The shippers go into the country for their ferns, get them teamed to the railroad and ship to some convenient cold storage point, and wild smilax sold well. The market is well supplied with all these greens.

Thanksgiving Business.

Henry Berning says the demand and prices were good, with carnations short.

W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. says business was away ahead of last year. The demand for violets, both local and shipping, exceeded the supply.

Geo. H. Angermueller cleaned up early. He had a fine supply of Easter lilies and orchids. The demand was better than last year.

who fell last week and broke his leg, is now resting easy at St. Mary's hospital. Mr. Fillmore is one of our oldest florists and father of F. J. Fillmore.

F. H. Weber reports he will furnish the decorations for the largest social event of the year at the St. Louis Club. A number of orange trees are being brought up from Florida to be used in the decorations.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its last meeting of the year next Thursday afternoon, December 12. The meeting will be featured by the presence of President Richard Vincent, of from which distribution is made as the season progresses. The accompanying illustration shows how the ferns come down to the railroad. G. J. Walker, of Savoy Center, Mass., asserts that it is the largest load on record, having weighed 10,175 pounds and contained 588,000 ferns. This load was hauled from the Vermont woods to North Adams, Mass., and thence shipped to the New England Cold Storage Warehouse, at Pittsfield, Mass.

OBITUARY.

Charles Dingee.

Charles Dingee, one of the founders of the firm of Dingee & Conard, died November 29, at the advanced age of 88 years. The funeral services, which were largely attended, were held at his home in West Grove, Pa., Monday, December 2. The interment was at Longwood cemetery.

Charles Dingee is widely known as a pioneer in the growing of rose plants for distribution through the mail and by express. Far from a large city, Mr. Dingee carried into successful operation the putting of growing roses into gardens and greenhouses all over the country, and even beyond the seas. The aim was to grow the best varieties and to interest the amateur through the medium of the catalogue. The prices charged were so reasonable that the plants were within reach of the most modest purse. The business prospered and Mr. Dingee had the satisfaction, on his retirement a few years ago, of leaving to his brothers-in-law, P. Joseph Lynch and M. Henry Lynch, an immense place thoroughly equipped.

Leopold Landreth.

Leopold Landreth, of Bristol, Pa., died December 1. He was 68 years of age. He was educated at the Pennsylvania Military Academy and at Heidelberg, Germany, and was subsequently for nearly thirty years a partner in the seed firm of David Landreth & Sons, but in 1903 he retired from the seed business, though continuing to reside at Bristol.

William D. Baxter.

William D. Baxter, who had been in business for some years as a florist at 11 Park street, Stoneham, Mass., died of heart failure November 25, at the age of 66 years. He was born in New Ashford, Mass., July 26, 1846. He had been in ill health for some time. He leaves a wife, two sisters, Maria and Ardella, the former of Cartridge, N. Y., and a brother, of New Ashford.

Walter Hart.

Walter Hart, a florist of Pontiac, Ill., died at St. James hospital, in that city, November 25. His death was due to old age. He was born at Norage, England, February 27, 1833, and came to this country with his parents when quite young. They first settled at Aurora, Ill. On removing to Pontiac, in 1875, Mr. Hart was engaged for two years as gardener at the Illinois State Reform School, now the State Reformatory. At the end of that time he resigned to start in business for himself, establishing greenhouses on South Mill street, which he continued for five years, when he moved the business to the north side of the city, locating near where the Brady Coal Co. now has a coal mine. Eight years later he removed to 507 North Ladd street, which has since been his home. He was united in marriage in 1866 to Miss Sarah Springer. To this union seven children were born. Three of them died in infancy. James W., Mary Ann, now Mrs. Pearl Carrier, Adeline, now Mrs. Charles Page, and George R., all of Pontiac, together with the widow, survive him. Besides these, he leaves twelve grandchildren.

G. W. Jenne.

G. W. Jenne, of Fulton, Ky., departed this life November 25, at his home, Floral Hill, in his seventy-sixth year. He suffered a stroke of paralysis in March, from which he never recovered. Fourteen years ago he, with his wife, embarked in the florists' business. In recent years, however, Mrs. Jenne had the entire management of the business. For twenty years Mr. Jenne was a resident of Chicago, where he was engaged as a clothing salesman, and he always spoke of that city as his home.

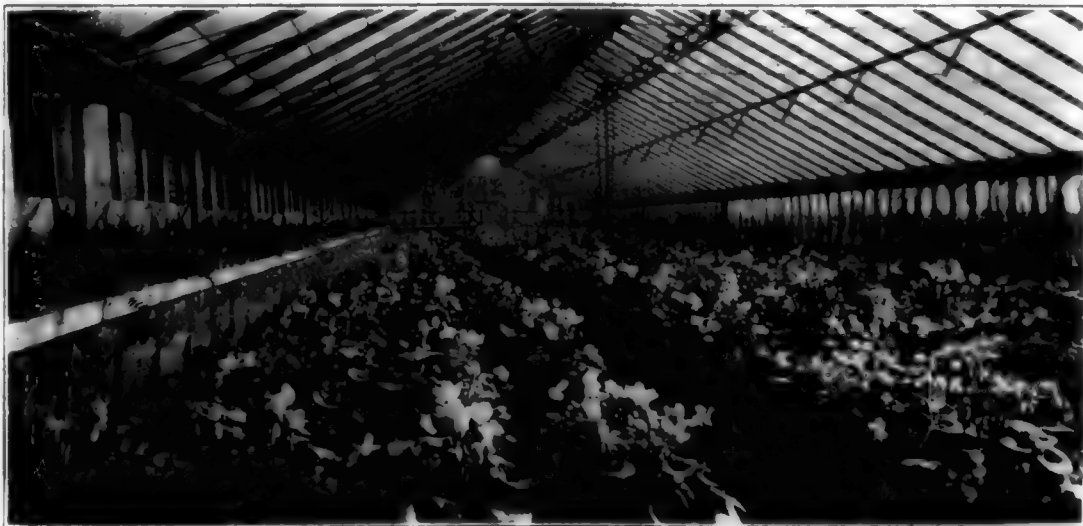

Peter Lauch.

Peter Lauch, a retired florist of Pittsburgh, Pa., died recently at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. L. J. Wuttke, 118 Carrick boulevard, at the age of 82 years. He was a florist on the south side for a number of years. He is survived by three sons, Charles and Sydney Lauch, of Rochester, N. Y., and William Lauch, of New Galilee, Pa., and two daughters, Mrs. John H. Nusser and Mrs. L. J. Wuttke.

Peter Kunst.

Peter Kunst, one of the earliest florists of Grand Rapids, Mich., died November 25 at his home, Crescent street and North Union avenue. He started the business in 1875 which ultimately became the Crescent Avenue Floral Co. He was 75 years old and had resided in Grand Rapids since 1865. He was born in St. Philipsland, Netherlands. Associated with him in business at the time of his death were Peter and Cornelius Kunst, his sons. Besides these and the widow, Mrs. Nellie Kunst, he leaves two other sons, Louis and John Kunst, and a daughter, Mrs. Nellie Kramer. He leaves ten grandchildren.

Sidney, N. Y.—Harry Thorndycraft has completed a new greenhouse in his gardens on River street.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.THOSE who look ahead are preparing big stocks of spring plants. There won't be any too many ready on time. Be ready early.DON'T pay money to traveling subscription agents. Review representatives all are well known in their respective communities.NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.RUSCUS is the great seller in the supply line this year. Jobbers say the limit of the supply of the natural article will keep it from being run into the ground, the way the Christmas bell was.THE offerings of new roses this season are unusually important, and there are reports of other novelties to come which will add still further to the variety the trade will be able to set before the public.IT is the almost universal report that the Thanksgiving trade was the best on record and the business following the holiday was in pleasing contrast to the old rule of stagnation following a special flower day. The trade looks forward to Christmas with sanguine expectations.THOSE who met George Mount, the venerable British rose grower, on his recent tour of the United States, which extended to the Pacific coast, will learn with pleasure that almost immediately upon his reaching home he was elected mayor of the ancient city of Canterbury.FROM the reports of city correspondents all over the eastern half of the country it appears that the pompon mums have had a big season, although in some of the larger cities the supply was so greatly increased that the prices of other years were not obtainable. West of the Mississippi the pompons have not yet cut so large a figure.THIS issue, published on the sixteenth anniversary of the first edition of The Review, breaks all records for regular editions, both in number of separate advertisements and in space occupied.
There are five double page spreads—several times four of these big, impressive ads have appeared in one issue, but this is the first edition to carry five.IN 1912 the manufacturers of greenhouse building material have found more difficulty in filling orders than in getting them, with the result that several are planning large additions to their capacity, which inevitably means a still greater increase in glass area for 1913, as there is no doubt of the ability of these enterprising gentlemen to keep their machinery busy should a necessity confront them.

THE TREND OF COMMENT.

Publishing a trade paper is a peculiar job; a trade periodical should never knock, its energies should be devoted to boosting; but when boosting is carried to excess it destroys the feeling of confidence which readers must have in a trade publication if it is to have a vestige of value as an advertising medium. Consequently it is of special importance to note the trend of the comments in the day's mail:I have four houses planted with geraniums and am building another for stock plants. The Review sells all I can grow.—J. P. Siebold, Lancaster, Pa., November 28.Enclosed find check for $1.80 and many thanks.
The best results from any $1.80 I ever spent.
It brought me orders from the lakes to the gulf and east to New York state. There is no salesman as good as The Review.—W. C. Wheelchel, Danville, Ill., November 16, 1912.Our advertisement in The Review sold a large quantity of paper for us. The orders came in saying, "Send us a dozen rolls of paper-like you advertise in The Review."—L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, December 2, 1912.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is the consensus of opinion that Thanksgiving business was the best ever; certainly, it exceeded the expectations of most of the wholesalers, although the reports of the local retailers are by no means so enthusiastic, perhaps due to the difficulty they had in procuring their supplies of stock at anticipated prices.While the business was excellent, the supplies of stock were not so large as frequently has been the case at Thanksgiving. The out-of-town demand proved exceptionally strong and prices were forced higher than generally had been expected. It was impossible to fill all the orders even where the buyer was willing to pay whatever was asked.Following Thanksgiving, receipts were light, demand continued strong and prices held firm. Apparently the out-of-town buyers who have local supplies of chrysanthemums have cleaned these up and are now looking to the Chicago market for larger quantities than heretofore. Practically everything cleaned up at the close of last week and at prices that were the best of the season to date. On both carnations and roses it was impossible to fill all orders, and valley and orchids also were short of the demand.The present week opened with continued brisk business, but with larger supplies of stock. Beauties are coming in more heavily than a week ago and rose crops also are on the up grade. The quality of Beauties and roses is exceedingly fine, the proportion of long stems being large. Carnations show little increase in supply. It is the general report that the carnation plants are full of buds but that there is not much that can be cut to meet the present excellent demand. However, a number of wholesalers note that the orders for carnations are lighter now that the buyers have found out what prices are.
There is a limit beyond which many stores will not buy heavily, because of their inability to sell the stock at a profit. The chrysanthemums were pretty well cut out for Thanksgiving.
Some growers say they still will have some for Christmas, but the supply is greatly diminished and will shrink steadily from now on. Cattleyas have been in special request the last few days and there has been difficulty in fill-

OUR ROSE CROPS ARE ON

YOU CAN GET OF US ALL THE ROSES YOU NEED AND THE QUALITY WILL MEET YOUR APPROVAL

There are several good reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season: In the first place, it is well known that better Roses cannot be grown; in the second place, we have a full line—the largest in the market; and, thirdly, we have this year fully doubled our supply—from new glass—so can take good care of a large number of new customers.

BEAUTIES

It is well known that our supply of Beauties is the largest and by far the steadiest in the west, and probably in the entire United States, while the quality is all that the most critical buyer could ask. Avoid the possibility of disappointment by ordering direct of us. A specially fine crop now being cut.

ORCHIDS

Our Cattleyas are coming in stronger just as the general autumn crop throughout the country is passing off. We shall have fine Cattleyas in increasing quantity from now on. You always can get Cattleyas if you order here.

VIOLETS

If you are not getting your share of the corsage work, probably it is because you do not use our Violets. There are none better to be had, and unless your competitor uses ours probably his Violets are not so good as yours will be if you order of us.

CARNATIONS

The stock is good. The flowers are the equal of anything to be found in this section and the stems are all that you would ask. From now on our Carnations should occupy a prominent place in your store.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Still can supply first-class Mums in considerable quantity. Expect the supply to last for some little time yet. The late varieties are fine.

Poinsettias are ready to cut on receipt of your order.

CHRISTMAS

Buyers who appreciate the high quality of our stock are insuring themselves against any possibility of disappointment by placing Christmas orders with us now. What will you need?

ing orders except with the small-flowered varieties, which are not popular.
Gardenias, too, have been in demand, but the supply of these is as erratic as the demand and the two seldom coincide. Gardenias are one crop not overdone here; eastern stock is received in considerable quantity. Violets, which now are of fine quality, are selling at the best prices of the season and have cleaned up since Thanksgiving. Easter lilies have turned scarce, though there are reports of large cuts for the near future. Stevia is everywhere. Paper Whites are more abundant. The moderate supplies of sweet peas sell well.
Small receipts of good antirrhinum move quickly, especially the pink. Some fine bouvardia sells well.

The market December 2 felt the effects of the change in administration.
The county offices were full of flowers and the judges in the Municipal Court were even more lavishly remembered.

November Weather.

November was considerably warmer and drier than usual in the Chicago district, with abundant sunshine, extremely favorable weather for growing.
The mean temperature was 43 degrees, being 8 degrees higher than last year.
The precipitation was 1.45 inches, as compared with 3.27 inches last year.
The duration of sunshine averaged six hours and twelve minutes per day, being sixty-three per cent of the possible
sun. The normal for November is forty-nine per cent of the possible.

Various Notes.

It is announced that January 2, 1913,
the Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, Ill., will open a northwestern branch in Minneapolis in charge of S. A. Jamieson, well known to the trade in this vicinity through his work for the Universal Portland Cement Co. Mr. Jamieson is taking up his new connection with much enthusiasm and it is reported the Garland Co. has plans under consideration for other extensions of its enterprise this season.

Joseph Shouten, formerly with the Geo. Wittbold Co., entered the employ of the E. Wienhoeber Co. December 2 and as ill luck would have it was caught for a two weeks' term of jury service the same day.

O. W. Frese says there has been no breathing spell in the last week. A. F.
Poehlmann is doing jury service.

It is requested that special attention be called to the change in meeting place tributed a car of holly for Thanksgiving.

Joseph Ziska says the demand for wire work was never better, but it is his idea that more thought is being applied to the creation of new designs than in previous years.

Henry Wittbold's staff is experiencing the usual pre-holiday rush on decorations and H. H. Wilkerson says it will be one grand hustle until after Christmas, with department store work, weddings, etc. The arrival of a second car of wild smilax was reported by Mr. Wilkerson.

Fred Stielow, of Niles Center, a director in the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says he is just coming into crop with his new houses of Killarneys and Richmonds. This is the second year for the new houses and Mr. Stielow says it looks like even a better one than the first.

Enchantress, White Enchantress, Victory and Nelson Fisher are the varieties that were favored by Nick Kruchten this year. He consigns his cut to his son, John Kruchten.

A. C. Kohlbrand pointed with special pride to bouvardia, pink and white, on the shipping tables of the E. C. Amling Co. December 2, saying it was the best he ever had seen so early in the season.

P. J. Foley was summoned to court December 2 as a government witness in the Fitzpatrick case, Mr. Fitzpatrick holding twenty-five shares of stock of the Foley Mfg. Co., but Mr. Foley's evidence was in favor of the defendant, who was an old schoolmate.

Bassett & Washburn say they cleaned out of mums entirely last week, the last being cut November 29.

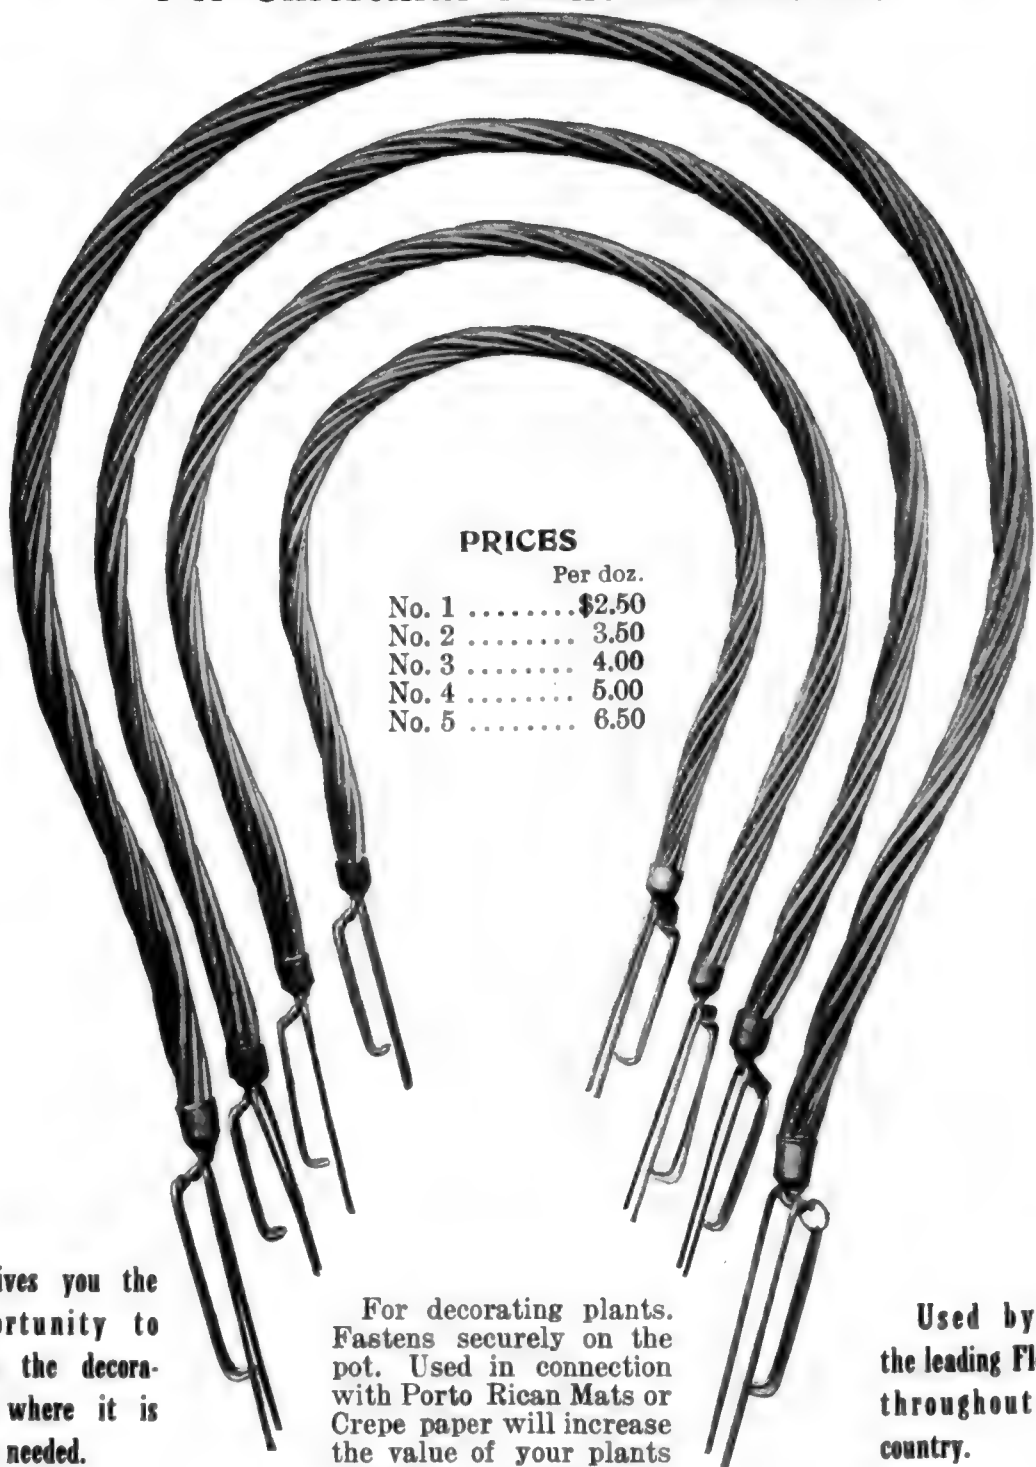

Erne & Klingel report the arrival of their first mignonette November 30. Mr. Erne says Thanksgiving week was the best since they entered the local wholesale field and adds that with Christmas on hand his firm expects to close the year with a fine record.

A visit to the establishment of Sol. Garland, at Des Plaines, showed several houses of carnations which Mr. Garland expects to be ready right after the holidays. His carnations are late, owing to some difficulty early in the season, but when they do come will be about the finest he ever grew. He is shipping an excellent quality of violets and cut two houses of fine mums for Thanksgiving.

"Best Thanksgiving week for a long while" is the way Kyle & Foerster put it.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There was an immense demand for cut flowers and for plants and greens for Thanksgiving. Prices were moderate, except for carnations, which advanced sharply in face of small receipts and the absence of pompons. Chrysanthemums were marketed in immense quantities, most of them at moderate figures. The poor flowers, particularly white, of which there were a good many, were not wanted. Violets were used in great numbers. The average price on doubles and on fine singles was $10 a thousand. Roses sold well, Richmond, white and the novelties a little better than pink. Beauties were not in special demand and prices ruled low. Carnations advanced, bringing nearly double the price of the week before. Other flowers and greens sold well.

The week ending December 4 shows a few striking changes in the market. The Army and Navy football game caused a heavy demand, violets and Bonnaffons leading. Since then yellow chrysanthemums have been rare. Jeanne Nonin is the leading white, and is fine. Valley, although in heavy crop, has been short of the demand. Gardenias are again in favor, selling freely. Cattleyas are firmer in price, except the little fellows, which find small support. Poinsettias have made their appearance. Miscellaneous flowers are in better demand.

Riverton.

Adiantum Farleyense gloriosa, Glory of Mordrecht, commonly called the Glory fern, is growing in the houses of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., in exactly the same temperature as the pteris. There are open sides between the different houses in the same range in which the ferns are growing. Under these conditions the Glory fern looks extremely well, giving promise of nice stock for the holidays. The importance of this cultural condition is that we will now have a fern as pretty as Adiantum Farleyense in the smaller sizes that must prove far more lasting. Adiantum Farleyense remains without a rival in the large sizes, those above 6-inch. The special culture given this variety is shown in the beautiful condition of the ferns; their graceful fronds are perfect in their delicate beauty. Pandanus Veitchii is remarkably well colored and sturdy; the small and medium sizes are most prominent. Areca lutescens is coming back into popularity, particularly in the medium sizes; its grace and deep green color when well grown are charming. There is an entire range filled with perfect, clean Cocos Weddeliana in every size, from the seed pot to the specimen. Specimen cocos are in 9-inch pots, four feet high, with broad glossy foliage, without a flaw. This magnificent range, with its interesting variations in types, always gives the visitor a thrill of pleasure. The supply of kentias bids fair to equal the demand; both are large. There has been no especial run on any one size. The stock looks well.

minalis shows a color suggestive of Christmas, a color bright enough to gladden the heart of every true grower. The crotons feel at home and they show it. Phoenix Roebelenii is in splendid form; its place among the staples is assured. The variegated pineapple, Ananassa sativa variegata, modestly claims a place among the novelties, a claim that no one who has seen this splendid block of plants with their beautiful green and white, pink-crested in maturity, can fail to admit. The stock of ferns of Boston type is lower than usual at this season.

Various Notes.

The demand for Christmas plants, says the Robert Craig Co., has started with a rush. Made-up birchbark hampers are attracting attention. Robert A. Craig's aim has been to get a large plant in each size of pot. The result is that many of the plants are equal to those often seen in the next larger size. The short valley crop abroad will cause higher prices here. The weather is said to have prevented the pips from maturing.

WASHINGTON.The Market.

Chrysanthemums are fast going off the market and this is causing a stiffening of prices and an increase in demand of other flowers. Roses are plentiful and the prices are low, considering the quality. American Beauty roses are in fair demand, with an equal supply. There has been a scarcity of carnations during the last week or so, especially light and dark pink. The supply of single violets is meager, with the result that the demand for Rhinebecks is quite heavy.

During the last few weeks the shipping trade to southern points has been heavy, but has been subject to certain drawbacks in that to some points it is possible to ship by but one train in each twenty-four hours, making deliveries unsatisfactory and sometimes impossible.

The consensus of opinion is that the Thanksgiving trade did not equal that of last year. The social season has now set in in earnest. The season, however, will be short this year, due to the fact that the Lenten season starts early in February. An early Easter will, on the other hand, allow a long stretch until it is time to close the houses for the summer months.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Senator Raynor was notable for the number of fine pieces. John H. Small & Sons alone furnished eighteen large pieces, and the other firms all had a share in the business.

The death of Alvin Mason Lothrop, a member of the department store firm of Woodward & Lothrop, is a matter of deep regret among the trade, to whom he was well known both in a business and a social way. The floral display at the funeral was exceptionally elaborate. A noticeable feature was the number of vases of long-stemmed American Beauties and other flowers sent to the house shortly after the announcement of death.

At the fourth annual Pan-American mass at St. Patrick's church there was an elaborate decoration. Following the services a banquet was held in the adjoining rectory, William F. Gude being one of forty-two guests. Gude Bros. Co. had the contract for the work.

The display windows of Z. D. Blackstone, at Fourteenth and H streets, N. W., were made exceptionally attractive during Thanksgiving week by a fruit picture, done by Walter van der Thanksgiving Trade.

I have not heard a single pessimistic report on Thanksgiving business, which would seem to indicate that it had been pretty satisfactory. We were favored with perfect weather the day before the holiday, although on Thanksgiving itself, a real old-fashioned, driving snow storm prevailed most of the day. It is doubtful if there was ever such a thorough cleaning up of all flowers as this year. On Thanksgiving eve the wholesale markets were bare and flowers which came in November 28 were eagerly purchased. There were no great advances in prices, but everyone seems abundantly satisfied with the volume of business.

Plants did not sell so well as expected. Azaleas and cyclamens were the two leaders. Poinsettias were in heavy supply but did not sell well, nor did Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias. In cut flowers there was a marked shortage of roses of all kinds. Mrs. Chas. Russell realized the highest prices, easily outclassing American Beauty. Richmonds were eagerly bought. All roses sold well, the whites as usual going the slowest. Carnations brought from $3 to $5 per hundred, scarlets and such pinks as Gloriosa and Pink Delight making top figures. Crimson did not sell well. Violets were not equal to the demand. The average price was $1 per hundred. Chrysanthemums made practically their farewell bow. Bonnaillon was easily the leader in yellow and Nonin and White Bonnaillon in whites. Gardenias made $5 to $6 per dozen, cattleyas $5 per dozen, valley $3 to $4 per hundred, snapdragon $3 to $8 per hundred, and longiflorum lilies $12.50 per hundred. There was a tremendous call for asparagus, smilax and ferns. Stevia and Paper Whites were plentiful, but easily cleared out.

The day following Thanksgiving saw a regular bull market, with no drop in prices, and the present week sees a continuance of good business. Some large social events calling for a lavish use of flowers help to keep prices up. Not for many months has business been as satisfactory as it is at present.

Various Notes.

Penn's, on Bromfield street, state that Thanksgiving trade was far ahead of all previous records. In plants, cyclamens and azaleas sold the best, but everything in the way of cut flowers went. A feature in one of their window displays was a life-sized figure of a man stooping over a bed of Penn's famous violets to pick them.

Wm. Caraher, salesman for the Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, easily led all his competitors this season with Trumpet Major narcissi, which he sold as early as November 28.

Look over some of the rose establishments near New York before returning, including the Bedford Hills range in charge of John Pritchard, one of Mr. Elliott's graduates, formerly in charge of the Budlong range at Auburn, R. I.

The most elaborate and costly floral decoration Boston has yet seen was arranged at the Copley Plaza hotel, December 4, for the coming out of Miss Webster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Webster. James Farquhar had charge of the decorations. He had a corps of forty assistants, who were kept hustling for twenty-seven hours.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. easily disposed of all the heavy receipts of flowers for Thanksgiving and business is brisk with them. William Sim's violets are in special demand.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, is cutting some of his invincible mignonette. His carnations are unusually good now. He has a big crop of marguerites coming on and will have Purity freesia by Christmas.

William T. Walke, of Salem, is justly proud of two fine houses of cyclamens. He also has a splendid lot of poinsettias.

The W. W. Edgar Co. sold practically all azaleas in flower for Thanksgiving and disposed of quantities of begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias.

Representatives of the two wholesale flower markets are still discussing a union of forces at the new market at Winthrop Square, and the outlook is said to be encouraging.

The landscape committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and the teachers, Messrs. R. W. Aldrich and P. R. Smith, recently met a number of students at Horticultural hall and arranged for a resumption of the landscape classes.

Joseph Breck & Sons are planning for the entire reconstruction of their seed departments. They will also provide suitable offices for the draughts-

November closed in a most satisfactory manner. The weather for the month was the finest of the year. Stock of all kinds was plentiful all the month and brought fair prices. The last week was satisfactory in every way. The Thanksgiving trade, though not phenomenal, was all that could be expected. Stock was cleaned up nicely and chrysanthemums saw their finish, for which the wholesalers, at least, were thankful. Probably Beauties were the only flowers that did not do all that was expected of them; the increased prices put a damper on their sale. Violets were fine and moved nicely. The same can be said of roses, but carnations were scarce and probably will be so for some time. Paper Whites, Romans, stevia, yellow daisies and baby primroses are the principal additions to the stock. It will probably be a few days before the dealers will learn to accommodate themselves to the use of smaller flowers after using chrysanthemums. December started in with rain and rough weather, and rather a shortage of

Winterson's Grand Novelty "Baby" Christmas Tree

"THE ONE BEST SELLER"

A FEW YEARS AGO we introduced these beautiful miniature trees to the trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 18 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for table decoration but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

HOLLY

I HAVE just completed my contracts with the Holly people of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia for my supply for the season of 1912. I secured my Holly this year to be cut from the swamps in the lower part of Delaware and Maryland, as it is greener and has more berries on than the upland Holly. It will be strictly first-class in every particular. I will have it packed as usual, in regular size cases, 2x2x4, and I positively guarantee it as represented. My first car will arrive here about December 1. The price on orders received early will be $3.00 per case, f. o. b. Philadelphia.

I have my Wreaths made of the brightest dark green Holly possible to secure, wrapped with wire, on 10-inch hoops, and each Wreath has four or five spots of berries. Price, $10.00, $12.50 and $15.00 per 100, according to weight and quality.

My Laurel Wreathing comes from New Jersey. The Laurel is gathered in the swamps, and the Wreathing is made by hand on heavy roping in 50-yard lengths. Price, 3c per yd.

The Mistletoe comes mostly from North and South Carolina and is well berried. Price, $2.50 to $4.00 per barrel; $6.00 to $10.00 per case, according to quality, about 100 lbs. to case.

Lycopodium, in 10-yard rolls, 4c to 6c per yard.

Christmas Trees, 5 to 20 feet high, 75c to $2.50 each.

Send me your orders; state the day you want it shipped, and if by freight or express and by what route or railroad.

All Christmas Greens are sold on spot cash terms, and checks must accompany all orders.

stock, but by the end of the week there will probably be plenty.

The retail shops had a highly satisfactory trade last week. A number of social functions and some funeral work, besides the Thanksgiving business, kept them all quite busy.

Various Notes.

W. C. Beckert, 109 Federal street, now has one of the most up-to-date seed stores in the county. Mr. Beckert has enjoyed a reputation for fair dealing and reliability for years, but has always been rather conservative in his methods. He has now put in a fine store front and rearranged the whole store, and is evidently going to push the business more than in former years.

Why do Barnard's Xmas decorations lead in quality? Because we send our own men from Chicago to the different green countries to superintend the selection, cutting, and packing of Holly, Bouquet Greens, Xmas Trees, etc. They are men of twenty years' experience and are well acquainted with the requirements of the most critical florists. They are instructed that the best is just good enough for our trade.

driving his automobile up Fifteenth street last week, lost control through the failure of the steering gear to work. He just made a circle through a barbed wire fence and through a vacant lot, and, instead of stopping, got the machine reversed and made another complete circle in the opposite direction, missing trees and poles and coming out on the street without doing any damage.

Edward E. Ludwig, who was operated on for appendicitis a week ago, is getting along nicely and hopes to be out in a short time.

A. W. Smith, Jr., has been a victim of grip and has been confined to his home since Thanksgiving.

William Lauch, of New Galilee, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father, who died November 25. William Lauch was in the growing business some years ago, but retired when his son took over the business.

Samuel Cape, 4010 Butler street, is the latest to buy an automobile. He is getting a Packard car for delivery purposes.

Mrs. Elliott, the widow of B. A. Elliott, who was in the florists' business for a lifetime, celebrated her eightieth birthday last week at the home of her son, Ben L. Elliott. Her children were all with her, with their wives and husbands, and spent a delightful evening. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week proved all that was anticipated and the retail contingents were universally happy. There was a good clean up of everything for the holiday, at fair prices. The wholesale trade did not take advantage of the wide demand, and apparent shortage, but held the level of legitimate advance at true value, giving occasion for no faultfinding and disposing of everything at prices that should give perfect satisfaction to all concerned.

The efforts of the publicity committee in behalf of Thanksgiving seem to have borne fruit, and the interest awakened in other cities is growing. The effort to be made for Christmas is expected to develop the scheme into one of permanence.

The shipments on Monday, December 2, were light. Chrysanthemums continue, however, in fair abundance and will until the holidays. Prices are firm and some advance is likely, especially for the prize-winning classes. Cold storage will doubtless be of service in preventing any decline.

All orders carefully filled and delivered to all parts of the city, Arkansas and the southwest

American Beauties have come to the front again, and are maintaining their supremacy. Prices are advancing. All other roses have advanced somewhat and there has been no oversupply of late to contend with. A slight retrogression this week is looked for. Violets sold well all last week and there was no surplus until Saturday; 75 cents to $1 was top for the holiday. This week 50 cents per hundred is the asking price. The market is well supplied with daisies, narcissi, hyacinths and bouvardia. Stevia is too abundant. More sweet peas could be profitably moved. The retail windows are gay with poinsettias, plants and cut. Lilies have advanced encouragingly and valley holds firm. Gardenias are improving in quality and gradually in price. Carnations have sold splendidly, there being no leftovers and none to be had last week under 2 cents, while the choice stock easily brought 4 cents to 5 cents. The novelties of course were even higher at Thanksgiving. The orchid supply was light and prices better than for many weeks.

The tendency is upward. The market generally is in a healthy condition.

Various Notes.

Max Schling had a beautiful decoration at Delmonico's last week and says Thanksgiving business was far ahead of any year since he began business.

Trade seems to be booming on upper Broadway. The immense store of David Clarke's Sons is especially attractive this season.

M. A. Bowe had some handsome designs last week for the late Jno T. Brush, the baseball magnate.

Manager Glass, of H. M. Robinson Co., says "We can never get enough of them," referring to the Mrs. Russell rose.

Mr. Donaldson, of Elmhurst, is at home from the hospital and much improved in health.

The Greek-American Florists' Supply Co. reports a big advance sale of baskets and novelties for Christmas.

All the supply houses are busy and the outlook for the holidays is the brightest for years. J. Austin Shaw.

day. Potted mum plants have sold exceptionally well this fall; everybody had grown twice as many as last year. Pompons have done well; the public seems to have just begun to like the small-flowered mums. Roses have been rather scarce for the last week, but those on the market are fine. Carnations are greatly improving, especially in stem and color. The demand has been much increased and they are bringing a better price.

Various Notes.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business as fine and they had to turn down orders for lack of stock. They say that what consignments they do receive are fine stock.

Ed Ellsworth is now burning oil in his heating plants and finds that oil is cheaper than coal. He recently added a 2,000-gallon oil tank to his equipment.

Samuel Murray was exceedingly busy last week, especially in decorating. Among the weddings for which he decorated was the Sewell-Gardner wedding, for which he used over 100 orchids for corsage bouquets alone.

R. S. Brown became seriously ill several days ago. His rapid recovery is sincerely hoped for.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has cleaned up entirely on mum stock, both cut flowers and pot plants. They figure on growing more pot plants next year.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business during Thanksgiving week was highly satisfactory to everybody. There was plenty of good stock and good prices prevailed, everybody cleaning up practically everything in stock. Chrysanthemums held the public favor, although a larger number of orchids were sold than ever before. Nearly fifty weddings during the week, with a large number of funerals, kept everyone on the jump.

Various Notes.

T. O'Connor has been extremely busy during the last few weeks, the number of wedding decorations being especially large.

George Hunt, father of Charles H. Hunt, with whom he is associated, is favorably spoken of as fire commissioner to succeed himself.

Morris Miller, who has been with Hoffman, at Pawtucket, for several months, is preparing to open a retail store on Westminster street, not far from the one he closed last spring.

William Appleton and Thomas Curley had the larger number of pieces for the funeral of William E. Joslyn.

T. J. Johnston & Co. have received a new delivery car, which is extremely attractive.

William Cohen, with J. Kopelman & Co., is suffering from blood poison in his left hand, caused by rose thorns.

Among the visitors last week were the representatives of Reed & Keller, New York; Henry A. Dreer, M. Rice & Co., and the Edwards Folding Box Co., of Philadelphia.

Benjamin Cull, for the last seventeen years gardener on the Zabriskie estate at Newport, has resigned to engage in business for himself at Galveston, Tex.

Miss M. F. Appleton, formerly of Seattle, now is manager of the cut flower department at Chipman's greenhouses, Woonsocket.

A. J. Johnson is putting in a large new boiler.

William I. Brown, of the Providence Seed Co., is secretary of the poultry show at Infantry hall this week.

The display of flowers at the funeral of Robert Knight, November 27, was the largest seen in Providence in a long time. While the orders were well distributed, O'Connor, Johnston Bros., and T. J. Johnston & Co. had the majority.

William Hay's houses of roses are off crop at present, although he is cutting some fine Marylands from a small house. He expects a large cut for Christmas.

James Hacking, of Central Falls, has been unusually busy the last two weeks, largely on decorations, weddings and funerals.

The new greenhouses of Ernest Howard, at Auburn, are awaiting the boilers.

Frederick Dietz has been working nights on account of the rush of orders. Last week he had over sixty funeral pieces in five days.

F. Macrae & Sons have placed an order for an automobile for delivery.

The election of officers for the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club resulted as follows: President, Eugene Appleton; vice-president, Cornelius Harstra; secretary, William E. Chappell; treasurer, James Hockey; librarian, James Dillon; executive commit-

Vegetable Forcing.

CUCUMBER PLANTS DIED.

October 1 we planted a vacant bench in a rose house with Davis' Perfect cucumbers. We planted them in five inches of good, rich soil. They grew to the fourth leaf and then began to die, a few at a time, until all were gone. The trouble started with yellow specks on the leaves, and soon the leaves began to dry up around the edges. There was red spider on the plants, but, owing to their tenderness and their closeness to the ground, we could not use the hose under them. They had plenty of air and cultivation and were grown in a rose temperature.

Did the red spider kill them? How can we save our crop if we plant again? Did we plant at the wrong time of the year? We have nothing else that we can grow in this temperature. Can mildew be kept down on roses by the use of a sulphur blower alone? If so, in what quantity and how often should the sulphur be used? Would sulphur on hot water pipes kill young cucumber plants in a rose house? If we cannot grow cucumbers in the rose bench, can we grow tomatoes in six inches of soil, and how close together? J. T.

It is hard to tell just what killed the cucumber plants, but it is difficult to get cukes to start well at this season of the year. Along toward spring there is less difficulty. I have a suspicion that sulphur on the pipes did the damage. Cukes will not stand much of it without a drying up of the leaves. Red spider is also quite harmful and would soon have taken the crop anyhow, if the plants had not died when young.

Tomatoes would do better in a rose temperature than cukes, and will grow in the same depth of soil. Single-stem plants are placed about fifteen to eighteen inches apart each way.

You can keep mildew in check with sulphur by blowing it on wherever you see any mildew, at least once a week, but you should also paint a little daub on one pipe in each house about every twenty feet. Use paint oil and sulphur and an old paint brush. Just a few little spots will keep enough fumes in the house all the time to kill mildew without injury to cukes or roses.

You might get some lettuce or radishes from this bench that is idle, but the temperature would be warmer than they like. However, I have seen them both do fairly well in a rose house, if not planted too thickly. Perhaps you will need the bench soon for geraniums or other pot plants for spring. H. G.

Newton Center, Mass.—Robert Rodden reports that business has increased greatly since the arrival of November, and gives it as his opinion that this will be an extremely prosperous season, everything pointing that way now.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A BRIEF note on the death of Leopold Landreth will be found in this week's obituary column.

THE Central Kentucky Blue Grass Seed Co., of Lexington, is putting up a seed cleaning plant, to cost $25,000.

IN short crop years prices do not advance as they should. The available supply is used in taking care of regular customers for a part of their wants—and in paving an approach to the other fellow's friends.

A COMMITTEE of the Chicago city council has been investigating the plans for the three new 7-story warehouses of the Albert Dickinson Co., which do not conform to the city's building code, the latter not having been framed with seedsmen's buildings in mind.

AS has been previously reported in this column, the Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa., some time ago secured a new location at 119 South Second street, where it is expected to centralize the business January 1 in a 4-story building. Good progress is now being made in fitting it up.

THE eighth annual convention of the Wisconsin Pea Packers' Association attracted several hundred people, including a number of seedsmen's representatives, to Milwaukee this week. December 4, at a session open to members only, J. A. Hagamann opened with a paper a discussion on "Seed Peas."

THE presses are running on most of the leading seed catalogues, for the big mail-order houses have found that the early business is an important factor in determining the volume of the business for the season: only about so much can be accomplished in the height of the rush, so that it is the early and late orders that really make a year good or bad.

THE seed advertising in general magazines will be extremely light this season, practically all the money going into the farm and class papers. Also, the duration will be shorter than usual this year, some of the strongest copy getting but one insertion in the monthlies—January. What the trade is after is early action; as soon as the season is on in earnest everybody has all he can do and the possibilities for increase are best in January and February.

OWING to his rather poor health recently, Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia., has gone to California, to be absent about six weeks. He will visit the seed growers in the Sacramento, Santa Clara, Arroyo Grande and Ventura districts, where they are now setting out onions, beets, carrots and other roots for seed production, ending his trip at San Diego, where he will spend the holidays with his wife and three children, who are

THE SPIRIT OF APPRECIATION

Is one of the most valuable traits of human nature. Every one of us has more to be thankful for than we realize. I am very thankful to the many prosperous and well established business men who have encouraged me and placed much confidence in me; am thankful to the many strangers who became friends and gave me many chances in business. I also am thankful to a few "knockers," for they prove that they are not in my class—they are dead ones and belong to the undertakers, as a last hope.

Why shouldn't a woman make good in business? If her father, forefathers and a few others were successful, she can inherit some of the mental qualities, just as well as to have a nose, eyes or a disposition like father's—but you can't pick cherries off a rose bush.

Don't connect sympathy with a girl in business, for it never existed. Every man wants a dollar's worth for every one hundred cents he spends. I have to produce the goods just as good as the other fellow's, or I don't like to think of the finish. With nine years of experience and some spunk I ought to know what I can do. The biggest failures are made by those who never try.

I have Gladstone, Floribunda and Multiflora Spiraea; also Rubrum, Roseum, Album, Auratum and Giganteum Lilies, "planted, grown, weeded, packed and inspected for me by a special brand of Japs." (Oh! what a lie!) But—they are as good as the best. If you doubt it, give me a chance to prove it.

isfactory lines. Within the last decade, ever since the work has been handled exclusively by the Bureau of Plant Industry, more than 7,000 tons of seed have been secured, tested in the laboratory and in the field, assembled and distributed.

"Early in the work it was determined to conduct it in such a way that all the seed secured and sent out should be of high quality. It was determined, furthermore, to eliminate costly practices of hand work and to introduce, wherever practicable, modern mechanical appliances for facilitating operations.

"Notwithstanding the fact that the quantity of seeds secured and distributed has nearly doubled in the past ten years, the actual cost of handling the distribution is less now than it was ten years ago. The funds saved by good business management have gone toward improving the quality and quantity of the seed and have enabled the department to take up a number of special lines which have resulted in much good.

"Special features of seed distribution have been maintained, such as securing and distributing types of cotton better adapted to certain conditions in the south. Many of these types have been developed through breeding and selection. The extensive propagation of new types of citrus fruits adapted to home use has also been followed. Large numbers of citranges developed by the plant breeders of the department have been propagated and sent out under congressional distribution. Large quantities of special forage-crop seeds have been distributed in all parts of the country.

"There is just now being put into effect a plan for the distribution of special seeds adapted to dry-farming conditions. The future success of dry farming in the semiarid districts will depend in large measure on the adaptation of suitable crops for these districts. An appropriation was made for this purpose at the last session of Congress, and special types of sorghums, wheats, oats, barleys, grasses and legumes of various kinds will be distributed the coming year throughout the entire semiarid region.

"In connection with the congressional vegetable and flower seeds there has been a steady improvement in the quality distributed, and that this has been appreciated is shown by the increased demand for them. That part of the congressional seed distribution

A bull trader, at the end of a bear day, tried a fifty cent "regular" dinner in New York, and was astonished to find it quite palatable. He said to the proprietor, as he paid his bill, "That was really a very good dinner; I don't see how you can give it for the money." The proprietor looked sad as he replied: "Oh, well, you know, accidents will happen." The florist occasionally may be astonished to find that a lot of low-priced lily bulbs turn out very good—accidents will happen. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs never "happen" to be reliable—they are reliable by nature, with a uniformity of excellent quality, which costs money to produce and saves you money to buy. The hardy Japanese lilies, such as Auratum, Magnificum (the improved Rubrum) and Album, are a most excellent adjunct to the progressive retail store, and in the proper season add greatly to that variety of refinement in flowers so attractive to flower-lovers. In bulbs of this kind, the largest and highest priced bulbs always pay the best if properly grown, and there is nothing more handsome than a fine large plant of Speciosum Lilies or Auratum, with many flowers. Mammoth bulbs must be ordered about a season in advance. We give below what we have to offer for delivery now, or during 1913; and also a list of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum—the best cold storage white lily in the world—Send your order in now—they will never cost less and may cost more later.

SILVER PINK

The great American Snapdragon, will be a money-maker for Spring Sales and Memorial Day.

SOW NOW

for big plants and big profits. Seeds are sure and will produce stronger and better shaped plants than cuttings at one-eighth of their cost. Price, $1.00 per packet of over 500 seeds; three packets, $2.50 cash, delivered anywhere in the world.

SILVER PINK has true lineage and will give a bed of solid color. No other variety of Snapdragon flowered within a mile of our seed grounds, thus assuring purity and quality. It is a high-class novelty at small cost. Order today.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SEATTLE.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was hardly so good as last year, and certainly was not up to expectations. As usual, everyone laid in an extra supply and in many cases there was not a corresponding demand; consequently many chrysanthemums were on hand for the next few days. Some extra fine mums are on sale, but the higher priced ones do not move so well as in former years. The cause of this is not far to seek; with the market flooded with cheap stock from California early in the season, the public was loath to pay fair prices later. Carnations are none too plentiful and the wholesale price has been slightly raised, but indications point to a sudden drop before Christmas. Roses of fine quality are fairly abundant and the sale for them is good. Paper Whites and Romans are in good supply and meet with ready sale at fair prices. Some stores have shown a few poinsettias, but there is not much call for them till Christmas.

The demand for pot plants is never so good at Thanksgiving as at Christmas, and the majority of the stores do not display an extra quantity for the former holiday. The plants that were offered were in most cases good and some were especially fine. Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias were offered, but cyclamens will be a whole lot better in a few weeks. Stevia is fairly plentiful. The sale of huckleberry and green of all varieties is good. While the transient trade has been poor, there was quite a lot of business done in decorations.

Various Notes.

The store of the late L. P. Walz has been purchased by Fred W. Gust and Thomas V. Rhoades, who will conduct it under the name of The Rosery. Mr. Gust has been for some time connected with the store of the Hollywood Gardens and Mr. Rhoades was for years Mr. Walz's assistant. They intend to pay considerable attention to the retail department and at the same time will endeavor to enlarge the wholesale business. They are issuing a weekly bulletin of prices to out-of-town florists, specializing on one line each week, and so far these efforts have been highly successful.

Miss Inez Risdon, daughter of the popular Brighton grower, was married on Thanksgiving day to Walter C. McKay. The house was sumptuously decorated by Carl Melby.

Julius Schnapp is at present assisting the Hollywood Gardens, at their store on Second avenue.

Rosaia Bros. had some fine plants of standard geraniums at their store for Thanksgiving. They were grown by Jacob Umhauff at Madison Park. Being covered with fine blooms, they were good sellers.

The plant of the Hollywood Gardens at the Country Club was visited by a party of Seattle florists on Sunday, November 24, at the same time that their plant at Hollywood was being in-

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Any florist on the Pacific coast not satisfied to do a local retail business can build up a prosperous wholesale trade by using space in The Review to let the buyers know where stock is to be found. This way:

We have found advertising in The Review to be very satisfactory. We have had orders from all parts of the United States, as well as from the Pacific coast, showing that your valued paper has a very wide circulation. At any time we have any special advertising to do we certainly shall send it to The Review.—Hogan & Kooyman, Oakland, Cal., October 3, 1912.

spected by a deputation from Tacoma. The plant at the Country Club is in fine condition. Pot plants are principally grown. A house of poinsettias is in grand shape for Christmas. Lorraine begonias are a strong feature here; the plants of these and Cincinnati are covered with flowers and show considerable skill in cultivation. The cyclamens are good and all the stock looks clean and healthy. The party was hospitably entertained by Gus Bjorkman, the genial superintendent. An interesting part of the proceedings was a visit to the lovely estate of C. D. Stimson, which adjoins that of the owner of Hollywood Gardens.

The Florists' Club's dance, December 11, promises to be a great success, judging from the way the boys are boosting it.

W. H. Crosby is erecting two greenhouses, each 22x100, at Rainier Beach. His purpose is to grow vegetables.

The Woodland Floral Co. is sending some extra fine mums from Sumner.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Conditions are rapidly improving as the season advances. Mums are in their glory; the pleasant weather brought them out more rapidly than in former years. Maud Dean mums are coming in nicely, much in advance of former years. From the present outlook, there will be a shortage of mums for Christmas; they are always relied upon for that particular season.

Thanksgiving day swelled the receipts for the week. Business was steady throughout the day and the totals showed a decided increase over former years. Mums met with the chief demand and realized good prices. The football game created a demand for the better grades. Considerable table decorating was also on the list. Pompon varieties figured prominently in this class of work. General stock was plentiful and of good quality. Roses ranged from $1 to $5 per dozen, carnations from 75 cents to $1. Everything was practically cleaned out for the day. Orchids and valley are scarce, as the local supply is off crop. Lorraines and cyclamens have sold remarkably well this season. Ferns and palms have also had a good run. Christmas orders are

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Business the week before Thanksgiving was quiet, with no special demand. Chrysanthemums were a glut on the market and all the stores seemed to be stocked up with them. Carnations and roses seemed to be plentiful, with no good funeral orders to help make a clean-up. Thanksgiving week opened brisk and there was plenty of nice stock for all. The chrysanthemums were especially fine, but the retailers could not get as good a price for the choice stock as has been the case in former years. Moderate priced flowers were most in demand and were cleaned up early in the day. Carnations and roses, as well as violets, were in great demand. American Beauties, fancy chrysanthemums and poinsettias were not much sought after by the buying public. All in all, the florists report a satisfactory business.

Various Notes.

The Spokane Greenhouses, Inc., sent in fine poinsettias for the Thanksgiving trade, as well as some fine Golden Wedding chrysanthemums. They found a ready sale for their entire stock of chrysanthemums, which enables them ated a great deal of interest during the month and was visited by hundreds of people. Many fine varieties in bench and pot chrysanthemums were shown.

Carl Taube, of Muskogee, Okla., was in the city last week and called on the trade. He proceeded to the coast and will visit California on his way to Oklahoma.

Allen Gerling, formerly with E. H. Hunt, Chicago, has arrived in the city and taken a position with the Spokane Florist Co.

The Spokane Florist Co. had a pretty announcement tea decoration the day before Thanksgiving, the table and room decorations being carried out in Killarney roses. C. T. K.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

There has been a decided shortening up in the supply of cut flowers of all kinds and the Thanksgiving demand kept everyone guessing until the last, when a good clean-up was reported all around. Roses from indoors have sold better than for many months and the outdoor crop was also in good demand. Sweet peas and violets are improving right along and the demand keeps up well with the supply. Carnations are good and there are enough to go around. Centaureas in all colors sell well. Chrysanthemums are over as far as quality is concerned, though there will probably be some flowers coming in up to Christmas. The coming of the holiday season is heralded by immense sheaves of cut poinsettias, which arrived rather earlier than they did last year. They are well leaved and vigorous; the flowers are large and of bright color. It is quite evident that there will be no glut of stock again before the holidays, and retailers who are wise are placing their orders for holiday delivery.

Plants are more in evidence than usual at this time of year, as the hot weather has brought on azaleas, poinsettias, begonias and other stock much faster than in other years. Azaleas, so far, are not as well flowered as usual, but the plants are clean and bright, making a pretty show in the windows. Orchids are plentiful, but the growers are cutting them before they are fit and consequently they do not last well. Phalaenopsis is being shown, but the flowers are not in so much demand as the cattleyas. Valley is plentiful and good. There are plenty of all kinds of greens, but they are selling rapidly.

holly is exceptionally well berried this year. Price cutting on this stock is far too prevalent. There is no necessity for this in a season when both demand and supply are good. Sooner or later the price cutters will have to come into line, and they will then regret that they did not make a legiti-mate profit right along.

Various Notes.

Bulb growing for cut flowers must be profitable; all the growers around the city are planting increased acreage this season.

J. B. Monasco has been cutting elegant Ulrich Brunner roses from his new place. He has evidently struck a good rose soil again.

The whole of the staff at the Los Angeles Flower Market have been under the weather. First of all A. Clark had to "lay off" with a severe cold; then C. Morton and later W. Morton followed, though Will is still keeping at it. The shipping orders here, previous to Thanksgiving, were exceptionally heavy; indeed, the whole month was a record-breaker.

recently. A fine basket of carnations was arranged and a large handle was hung with "Frankfurters," "wursts" of various kinds and other things of a like nature, beloved by Teutons. The artistic effect can hardly be described as good, but dollars have to be chased and this kind of hunt comes as easily as any other. Funeral work keeps up well at the store.

Bert Bateman, who has been with the Hayward Floral Co. for about two years, has severed his connection there and is now with Frank Lichtenberg, on Fifth street. A superb table decoration, so simple that it could not help being attractive, was a feature of the window display here last week and was surely a drawing card.

Big stacks of boxes of California pepper boughs are leaving the H. N. Gage Co.'s place daily, as this is a leader here at this time of the year.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Although we are at the end of November, the weather is uncomfortably warm in the middle of the day, with cool nights. As long as these climatic conditions exist there will be an abundance of outside stock. There is, however, some reduction in the quantity of mums, particularly in the yellow sorts. The Bonnaffons have been extra cheap and good for the last month, but we may expect a stiffening of prices in a few days. Contrary to the usual custom, there was little evidence of a tendency to boost prices for Thanksgiving, which was gratifying to the retailers. As to the business done, from all accounts the most noticeable feature was the quantity of stock to be had. This is of course on account of the mild weather. Yellow mums and red carnations seemed to sell better than anything else. Fancy roses, of which there was only a limited supply, moved rapidly, but the shorter-stemmed stock did not do as well. There was a fair number of poinsettias, both the cut and potted. They were only in fair demand. The flower-buying public apparently was not quite ready for them. Red berries, particularly with the street hucksters, made a big showing on the streets and formed a large portion of the business done. Orchids and valley had ready sale. Violets were cheap and good. The growers did not raise the prices and there was plenty for everyone. Not many flowering plants were shown, with the exception of cyclamens, but these were handled in large quantities. A few azaleas made some color, but as a rule were not good specimens. It is probably safe to say that the bulk of business transacted was heavier than that of one year ago, although the public apparently were satisfied with a cheaper grade of stock.

Various Notes.

The John H. Sievers Co. was in line with a magnificent house of poinsettias and another of cyclamens.

Thos. H. Duane, a well known nurseryman of Martinez, Cal., is in town for a few days.

The largest and finest stock of cyclamens shown by any of the growers was from H. Hayashi, of Elmhurst. He has been making a specialty of this plant the last two seasons. G.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

WILLIAM C. MOORE & Co., Newark, N. J., have a new concrete office building 65x110 and four stories high. A retail business through agents is done. Wilson M. Gould is president and general manager.

THE California Nurseries and Orchards have been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., with a capital stock of $250,000. The directors are G. M. Boyd, F. H. Smith, F. E. Dillon, E. D. Terrell and P. D. Barnhart.

PETER YOUNGERS, C. H. Barnard and G. A. Marshall are the members of a committee appointed by the state board of horticulture to draft a bill providing for the inspection of nursery stock, to be introduced in the Nebraska legislature this winter.

THE nurserymen throughout the country are planning for a big trade next year. Agricultural conditions are favorable to a large planting. Some varieties of apple trees will be short, but on the whole there will be a very satisfactory supply to offer. Small fruit stock will be in great demand.

WADE R. MARTIN, of Lincoln, Neb., has purchased an interest in the Yager Nursery, at Fremont, Neb., and will become a partner of J. A. Yager in managing the business. The firm name will be Yager & Martin. The nursery at Lincoln will be continued and the plantings at Fremont will be considerably extended.

At the last annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, Portland, Ore., was selected as the place in which to hold the annual convention of 1913, but the dates for the convention were left in the hands of the executive committee for the purpose of consulting with the trade organization on the coast. The executive committee has now decided upon June 18 to 20 for the convention.

WILLIAM WILSON, a nurseryman of southern California, has purchased what is known as the Ables tract, which lies three miles east of Hemet, extends from the eastern edge of the Hemet tract to Valle Vista and contains 491 acres. The purchase price, it is said, was approximately $60,000. The new owner contemplates extensive water development. More than a hundred acres are being prepared now to be set to apricot orchard. The improvements now in contemplation will require an expenditure of at least $20,000.

THE EUROPEAN VIEW.

Large consignments of peonies leave the Boskoop nurseries every autumn, mainly exported to Canada and the United States. Of course, not every root is properly cleared from the dead stems, and those dried stems frequently contain the small black spores of the fungus Botrytis pæoniæ. In the Boskoop Advertiser the inspector of the Phytopathologic Service at Boskoop draws the attention of exporters to the fact that the Department of Agriculture at Washington is at present making an exact study of peony diseases, and it is possible that under the recent Plant Quarantine Act further import regulations will be issued; also the import of peonies will only be permitted when accompanied with a certificate of freedom from injurious plant diseases. Although the export of peonies is nearly at an end for this season, it would be advisable to carefully remove and burn

TO THICKEN A PRIVET HEDGE.

I have a California privet hedge, 1 year old, which is too thin to make a satisfactory hedge. Can I make it thicker by bending it down this fall, in the same way as the common osage hedge, or by making cuttings and setting them out in the thin places next spring? Or what would you advise?

E. R. B.

The best way to thicken the hedge, provided it is not too old, will be to cut it back quite hard, say within eighteen

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

Poinsettias are also good here, and the new Montebello ranch is contributing its quota to the output of the store in the shape of fine bulbous stock.

Outside shipping business keeps the staff busy at the new store of Murata & Co., this branch having grown considerably in the last two years. The fine poinsettias coming from the neighborhood of San Diego are exceedingly popular locally.

Howard & Smith have secured from Dieterich & Turner the entire control of the new red Cherokee rose, Ramona, and will distribute it from their place. The stock is magnificent in every way and its quality is surely another feather in the cap of Henry Turner. He is the man who has made it possible to put this grand variety on the market at a popular price by working up so large a stock of it in so short a time, while the name of Howard & Smith behind it will insure it a ready welcome, as this firm is not in the habit of lending its name to anything but the best, either in roses or any other stock. It hardly needs a prophet to foretell that the red Cherokee will be in many thousands of southern and Pacific coast gardens before this time next year.

Carnations!

A word to the grower of carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this, gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We have 150,000 cuttings ready for DECEMBER delivery, and we shall have 200,000 for JANUARY.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore.....$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family; extremely free in bloom; clean, strong grower; a little slow getting into bloom, but brings a big Christmas crop; won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There was an abundance of chrysanthemums on hand for Thanksgiving and prices seemed to range much lower than in the past. We were favored with a little snow, but it did not seem to interfere with business.

Just about this time roses and carnations of good quality seem to be scarce, but plenty of medium grade stock is arriving. Harrisii and calla lilies seem to come in too fast at this season, but nevertheless are selling at a fair price. Valley is plentiful and of good quality.

The Exhibition.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society held its annual exhibition and chrysanthemum show at the Fifth Regiment armory, November 19 to 23. The general exhibition this year has far surpassed that of last year. The principal exhibitors and prize winners among the florists were George Morrison, Chas. Siegwart, P. B. Welsh, I. H. Moss, R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., Jas. Hamilton, M. Thau, John Cook, H. J. Quick, Harrison & Sons, Robert L. Graham and Edward Herrman.

ATLANTA, GA.

The Market.

Our late fall, with its warm, mellow days and light, frosty nights, has given outdoor plants a long season. In consequence, the growers of old-fashioned cut flowers have derived more benefit than heretofore from their cuttings. Old-fashioned flowers are quite a fad in Atlanta. While they do not particularly recommend themselves for gracefulness, they have the virtue of durability, besides being within easy reach of everyone's purse. The demand, therefore, for zinnias, marigolds and bachelor's buttons has been a steady one the entire season.

A number of old and distinguished citizens have died recently, when specially ordered designs and beautiful decorations were furnished by the florists. The regular fall automobile show week, with its social functions, required a goodly supply of flowers, and Thanksgiving called for many cheery blooms to grace the festive board.

Following the Lowry golden wedding anniversary, when all the florists were taxed to supply the large number of yellow chrysanthemums ordered for that occasion, there has been a series of football games. Our Tech boys played against out-of-town college teams, and as one of the Tech colors is yellow, the florists have been kept busy in meeting the demand for chrysanthemums in that color.

Various Notes.

The Alto-Vista Floral Co. is cutting some especially attractive narcissi.

W. A. Hollingsworth's share of orders for wedding and debutante parties has kept him in a rush.

J. S. Coursey has quantities of fine carnations, which he furnishes to the wholesale trade.

Mrs. Joines, on Gordon street, has for several years had fine success with outdoor plants, disposing of hundreds of zinnias, marigolds and asters.

Mr. Borg, of the Atlanta Floral Co., reports busy times.

J. P. Matthiessen, of the Ponce De Leon Floral Co., intends to go into the wholesale branch, with lilies and bulbs, which are a specialty with them. He

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

- ❑ This giant forcing rose is an American seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories and has been tested in our houses for several years.
- ❑ It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.
- ❑ Its large, pointed buds, of a clear rose-pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.
- ❑ It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

In addition to the premiums already announced for the National Flower Show in New York in 1913, Chairman C. H. Totty announces the following:

A. Lewisohn, Ardsley, N. Y., offers a silver cup, value $150, for a display of roses in pots, covering 100 square feet; competition open to private estates only.

John T. Pratt, Glen Cove, N. Y., offers $25 for a display of gardenia plants in pots.

George T. Schuneman, Baldwin, N. Y., offers $25 for award by the American Sweet Pea Society, in a display class.

Harry Balsley, Detroit, offers $25 for award at the discretion of the committee.

Samuel Untermeyer, Yonkers, N. Y., offers $50 for fifty feet of calceolarias, and $50 for fifty feet of gloxinias, arranged for effect.

The Elberon Horticultural Society offers a silver cup, value $25, to be awarded as desired by the committee.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America offers $10 for the best specimen plant of marguerite in the show.

The Southampton Horticultural Society offers $25, or a cup of equal value, to be competed for by private gardeners only.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society offers a silver cup for award at the discretion of the committee.

The Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England offers its gold, silver gilt and silver medals, to be awarded at the direction of the American Carnation Society.

The Paterson Floricultural Society offers a cup, value $20, class to be announced later.

M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., offers two cups, one $50 and the other $25 in value, for the best table decoration.

George Burnett offers a silver cup, value $25, class to be announced later.

C. B. Weathered offers a silver cup, value $25, class to be announced later.

The last three above mentioned prizes are for competition by members of the National Association of Gardeners only.

W. T. Carrington, Portchester, N. Y., offers $100 for the best display of annuals in pots.

The Horticultural Club of Boston offers $100 for the best miniature landscape garden, to be worked out in living trees and shrubs, and to occupy a space of 15x20 feet.

THERE IS SNAPDRAGON BUT ONE

worth while—and that is the light, Silvery Pink. It produces large spikes, it flowers freely and brings the top-notch price in the open market. Whether you are a wholesale or a retail grower, you cannot possibly go wrong by planting a bench of this excellent variety. It will PAY YOU to do so. The following letter from S. J. Goddard speaks for itself:

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

October 19, 1912.

Dear Sir: Your light pink Snapdragon I consider the best color of any I have grown. Just the shade of a Killarney rose and one that the ladies like. I have watched all the pink ones that are sent to the Boston market, but they are away behind your variety. I am growing your variety now entirely.

Very truly yours,

S. J. GODDARD.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Report has it that John H. Dunlop, the largest Toronto grower, has an option on 100 acres of land partly within and partly without the town limits, and intends to remove his greenhouse plant to the "Flower Town of the Dominion." Mr. Dunlop has certainly been looking at land in this neighborhood, but there is no positive confirmation of anything further having transpired.

The topic of the week has been the result of the appeal made by a local lawyer against the decision of the court last July when the Dale Estate won the case brought by him on account of alleged non-payment of arrears of water rates. The Dale Estate has built up the largest industry here and brought Brampton out of obscurity into the knowledge of every flower lover in the Dominion, without ever asking a single favor of the local governing bodies. Every factory that has located here during the last decade has been given rates, taxes and water free. The Dale Estate has paid all that has ever been charged against it for water, and intends now to carry the case to a higher court.

Beautiful weather prevails here and everything looks hopeful for a large cut at Christmas, with the exception of Beauties and Richmond.

Valley has been advanced in price, owing to the higher cost of pips in Germany. Chrysanthemums are done for the season. Violets meet with a ready demand at $1.25 per hundred.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubes, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green.

These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When In Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2 1/2-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally fine, with the Thanksgiving demand and several large funerals. Thanksgiving stock was at a premium and all had sold out, so that there was a scarcity following the holiday. Roses and carnations are again coming in fine, as are violets. Mums are practically over, but poinsettias are coming in and they are fine; a market is found for them readily. Bouvardia and orchids were good sellers for Thanksgiving and the market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

At a recent meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, held at Holm & Olson's store, S. A. Jamieson, of Chicago, gave a lecture on the uses of cement for greenhouse purposes. He illustrated his lecture with a good set of stereopticon views. This proved exceptionally interesting and demonstrated to the florists the various uses that cement can be put to and obtain the best results.

J. C. Christensen, who for a number of years has been superintendent at the greenhouses of Holm & Olson, has resigned and will henceforth devote his entire time and efforts to his own range of greenhouses, known as the Acorn Greenhouses. Mr. Christensen's brother has had charge of the greenhouses, but the business is developing so rapidly that J. C. Christensen decided to personally conduct the business.

L. L. May & Co. have added J. W. Gibson, formerly of Philadelphia, to their store force. Gus Colberg, the Christmas varieties showing color now and stored away in cold house. We make a specialty of forcing azaleas for Xmas.

AZALEAS

We have the finest Petrick in the land, the best early pink, full of buds, as round as an apple, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Deutsche Perle, double white, Simon Mardner, double pink, Vervaekeana, double rose variegated (one of the best old standard varieties), Pharailde Mathilde, white, rose striped, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. For later and for Easter blooming we only imported the well known American varieties, such as Mme. Vander Cruysen, Paul Weber, Niobe, John Llewellyn, Apollo, DeSchryveriana and a few others (the Christmas varieties also can be kept for Easter very easily), 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.80 to $2.00. We give good value for the money and use our judgment as to size; so when you order, don't mention any size; we will ship plants according to money sent, and you can rest assured that Godfrey Aschmann will give you your money's worth. POSITIVELY CASH WITH ORDER.

ARAUCARIA—THE SUBSTITUTE FOR A CHRISTMAS TREE

Christmas trees are scarce this year. I know a good substitute. Just look at the picture above. Doesn't it look nice? It is an Araucaria Excelsa in Christmas attire, out of Godfrey Aschmann's Araucaria house. A beauty, it's everlasting green will please and will amuse the dear little ones. It will take less room than a Christmas tree and will serve two purposes; first, on the Christmas table, second, as an ornamental tree in the parlor after the holiday. We have them in all sizes, 5, 5½, 6 or 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 tiers, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 25, 30, 40 to 50 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each; some as low as 40c each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa specimen plants, 28, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

All Plants Must Travel at Purchaser's Risk Only. Cash With Order, Please. All Plants 25 at 100 Rate. Please state if in or out of pots.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. One of many reports: "Pansies arrived in good condition and are much better than any received from any other grower. Send me 1,500 more."—J. H. Booth, Chester, Pa. Large lot of plants protected from freezing. Shipped any time from now on. Delivery in good condition guaranteed. Hardy field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion. 1000; $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash. L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

POINSETTIA PLANTS DECAYING.

We are sending you under separate cover one of our poinsettia plants. The plant is fairly representative of the whole bed. They have been grown in a temperature of 56 to 60 degrees, although once or twice the house got down to 50 degrees for a little while. They have made a good root growth, but seem now to be losing roots by rotting off. On some plants, just above the roots and just below the surface of the soil, it appears as if worms had eaten the bark. Do you think the trouble is in the soil? We have had lots of trouble in getting seeds to germinate in the soil. We shall appreciate an immediate answer, as we hope to be able to save some of them.

H. F. C.

The sample plant received was certainly in a bad condition, and if the others are affected similarly I am afraid they will not be of much value to you. It is probable that your soil is of too acid a nature. This would suit worms, but not plants. If worms are in the soil and have clogged the drainage, give the plants a watering of lime water. Slake a piece of stone lime and apply the water after it has cleared. A lump the size of a hen's egg will make two gallons sufficiently strong to expel worms. A temperature as low as 50 degrees would not hurt the plants at all. What will injure them is careless watering. They must not be watered in a haphazard manner every day. Do not apply any water unless the plants really need it. Too dry or too wet conditions are causes of a lot of failures in poinsettia culture. Perhaps your pots or pans have insufficient drainage. This would soon cause the soil to become pasty and sour and make the roots decay. If the soil is naturally acid, as evidenced by slime soon gathering on the surface, it needs an application of lime to sweeten it.

Greenhouse Heating.AN UNEVEN TEMPERATURE.

Is there any method of heating a greenhouse, about 17x112, to a uniform temperature from end to end? The house has 4-foot board sides, with glass in one end to the eaves. The boiler is in a pit, eighteen inches below the greenhouse floor. We are using 1½-inch pipe for returns. With overhead flows, as at present, the boiler end of the house is the cooler by several degrees. Can you suggest any remedy for these conditions? The high end of the flows is over the boiler. How many tons of hard coal should be required to heat two houses of the foregoing dimensions for five months to 50 or 55 degrees in this part of the state of New York, where the outside temperature occasionally falls to 15 degrees below zero?

A. B. R.

The data furnished are so scanty that it is not possible to tell just what has caused the difficulty. It would be particularly helpful to know the number and size of the flow pipes and the number of the return pipes. From the fact that the boiler end of the house is the cooler, it would appear that for some reason the water in the return pipes is also much cooler at that end than at the farther end of the house, and to correct the difficulty such changes should be made in the system as will secure a greater uniformity in the temperature of the water in the return pipes.

The number and size of the flow pipes affects the temperature of the water in the returns, as if the flow pipes are too small, or too few in number, the water in the return pipes becomes cooled to such an extent, before it reaches the boiler, that an uneven temperature in the house results. The use of too small pipes for the returns is even more likely to be the cause of the trouble. While 1½-inch and even 1¼-inch pipes may be used for hot water heating for short runs, or when the boiler is several feet below the returns, a poor circulation will result when they are used in long houses with open-tank systems, especially if the top of the boiler is higher than the returns. The circulation will be slow and the water will be cooled before it reaches the boiler, as the volume of water in the small pipes is much smaller, in proportion to the radiating surface, than in the larger pipes.

The house in question should have at least four 2-inch flow pipes, or, bet-are to be retained, a generator will be almost a necessity. The proper way to heat the house would be to use three 2½-inch flows and seven 2-inch returns; or, with 1½-inch returns, put in three 2-inch flows and nine returns, and, unless the boiler is low enough to obtain a quick circulation, put on a generator. This should give an even temperature throughout the house.

Twenty tons of coal should heat the two houses for five months, under fairly good conditions.

water, as I must make some change? I have a notion to change to hot water, if I can at this time. The boiler must be repaired, at all events, and the makers say it is a small matter to change it into a hot water boiler. The outlets for hot water would be on each side, near the top of the boiler. How far below the floor of the houses must I set the boiler in order to avoid crossing the doors with pipes? Must I keep it down so the flow pipes from the boiler to all the houses will be on the surface of the floor and rise from that to the overhead flow pipes? The boiler shed may not be high enough to give room to get over the doors.

House No. 1 has not enough radiation, but I think that if all the pipes in the other houses were hot they would supply a fair amount of heat. All the pipes are 1½-inch, as you will note on the diagram. The board part of the walls is covered with heavy roofing paper and well protected underneath. I want a temperature of not less than 50 degrees in zero weather, which is considered pretty cold here, in southern Pennsylvania, although last winter the thermometer registered as low as 36 degrees below zero. I have tried to give all the necessary information and I think that you will be able, with the help of the diagram, to understand my wants.

The sketch shows three houses, of which No. 1 is 16x54, with three feet of glass in one wall. It appears to have only three 1¼-inch pipes under one of the side benches. For 50 degrees not less than seven pipes should be used, of which four should be along the south wall. House No. 2 is 20x56 and ten feet to the ridge, with two and one-half feet of glass in one wall, while the other side adjoins house No. 3. This house has five pipes on the exposed side and four on the other. The radiation is not far from the proper amount. House No. 3 is 21x85, with a 9½-foot ridge, and with two feet of glass in the east wall and about one-third of the west side. This house has five 1¼-inch returns on one side, across both ends of the house and for thirty feet on the other side. The radiation would be improved by extending the main along both sides of the house.

Except in house No. 2, the radiation is not properly proportioned, but just what the trouble is cannot be told without going over the plant. It is possible that the pipes need grading, or something may be wrong with the air valves. If the coils drain by gravity, they should be three or four feet above the water level of the boiler. If steam traps and pumps are used, they should be looked after.

If the houses are to be heated with hot water, run a 3-inch flow pipe to each of houses 1 and 2, and a 4-inch flow to house No. 3. In house No. 1 use three 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. Houses No. 2 and 3 should have three 2½-inch flow pipes and seven returns. So far as can be determined from the drawing, there should be no difficulty about carrying the flow pipes to houses 1 and 2 so that they can enter about two feet below the ridge and then be broken up into three 2½-inch flows. The flow to house No. 3 may have to run under the floor of the workroom, unless it can be taken into the gable.

The Market.

Trade for Thanksgiving was heavy and from all reports everyone cleaned up on about everything in the way of cut flowers and quite a few plants moved, mostly begonias and azaleas. Mums are a thing of the past, only a few stragglers left to tell the tale of a busy season. The crop of carnations during mum season always is kept down as much as possible and since mums are cleaned up there have not been nearly enough carnations to go the rounds. From indications it will be several days before the supply increases to large quantities. Roses are fine and in good supply, but demand is heavy on them and at times they have been scarce. Beauties have been moving somewhat better of late, but the supply is limited. Valley is quite scarce, with trade rather heavy at times. Sweet peas are not plentiful as yet, but the supply is increasing right along and it will not be long before there will be enough of them to fill all wants.

The stores are beginning to put on their Christmas garments. Christmas wreaths, holly, red ruscus and nearly all of the holiday goods are on display.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens reports good business, with mums about cleaned up.

E. Metzmaier had a fine lot of Bonaffon mums for Thanksgiving, which were quickly cleaned up.

The Munk Floral Co. is making quite a display of holiday goods.

G. H. Woodrow is somewhat stronger, although far from out of danger. He has had a hard pull and we are all in hopes he will soon be much improved.

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR ^A_ND MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2 1/4 inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

H. E. Wilson has the largest range of glass in this locality, totaling about 100,000 feet. With the exception of roses and about 10,000 Enchantress carnations, the houses are devoted almost entirely to the growing of plants. The carnations look well. One house of over 12,000 feet is devoted to roses, Bride, Killarney and Maid. These have done well, considering that there has been little sunshine. He has a nice assortment of azaleas, cinerarias and poinsettias coming on for Christmas and is cutting callas, Paper Whites and valley. One house is devoted to valley and smilax. He keeps one house for palms and ferns for decorations. In the other houses there are rhododendrons, Lorraine begonias, azaleas, a nice assortment of box and some mums. There are still some good Chadwick, Eaton and Moneymaker to cut. Besides these houses he has about 5,000 feet in Irondequoit, used for Boston and Whitmani ferns. Mr. Wilson reports a Thanksgiving trade better than usual.

Walter Salmon has gone quite extensively into growing smilax and asparagus.

The harvesting of the aster seed crop on the farms of James Vick's Sons shows a fair return on all varieties.

A visit to the greenhouses of Charles Suhr found 5,000 feet of Enchantress carnations in fine condition. Mr. Suhr finds Enchantress the best all-round carnation he can grow. In his bedding houses he has a few mums left. He found the market for them good this season. The rest of these houses are at present devoted mainly to primroses, azaleas, Lorraine begonias and cyclamens for Christmas and Easter trade. His azaleas were the first to bloom this season. He has a fine strain of primroses in the darker colors. His houses looked neat and the stock thrifty.

H. P. Neun has a large wedding decoration this week.

Salter Bros. report a good counter trade for this season of the year.

Geo. Boucher is showing some fine White Bonnaillon mums. S. A.

The Market.

To say the least, it was a real Thanksgiving for the florists, for business was fine and exceeded that of any previous November holiday. In speaking of conditions one person was heard to say that it was more like Christmas than the usual Thanksgiving. The chrysanthemum was the flower most called for, and the supply was equal to the occasion. The demand for roses was good and the supply was excellent. The market never was so short on carnations as it has been for some time. There was a nice lot of stevia. Sweet peas, violets and valley also had their inning; in fact, anything in the line of cut flowers simply kept moving.

Various Notes.

One of the oldest greenhouse plants, that owned and conducted by Currie Bros., on Twenty-seventh and State streets, has changed hands. C. F. Becker, an out-of-town man, has rented the establishment. This is one of the best known places, having early earned a reputation for neatness and cleanliness.

Currie Bros. Co. reports a fine week; could have sold more carnations and Beauties if they could have obtained them.

Holton & Hunkel Co. says Thanksgiving was the best yet. Mums are done.

C. C. Pollworth Co. also says business was fine, but the only thing they ran short on was carnations.

Richard Lietz, at Fourteenth street and Fond du Lac avenue, was fortunate in having a good batch of Paper Whites in full bloom the fore part of last week.

Wm. Zimmermann is about the only one who reported a special call for pot plants for Thanksgiving.

M. A. McKenney Co. reports an unusually heavy demand for cut flowers last week, especially Thursday.

Wm. Currie has been elected vice-president of the newly organized curling club which intends to play at Washington park in the near future.

Facts About

Direct Pressure

Water Supply Systems

IF YOU are through experimenting with inferior and unreliable contrivances for handling the water supply question and your needs now demand that the problem be solved, then Standard Systems demand your attention.

The very nature of the water supply problem demands reliability as first consideration in purchasing a pumping engine. Manufacturers who have spent less time than we in studying this problem are naturally unable to cope with it as our many years' experience has taught us to do. We are pioneers in this line and when you install a you are through experimenting. We have done that for you.

In that new Catalogue No. 12, we recently had published, all types of "Standard" gas, gasoline and electric pumps are described and illustrated in a most complete way. Interesting facts and figures, together with unusual illustrations, make this book valuable to you. You will find twelve half-page illustrations which explain greenhouse systems.

There is not another catalogue in the greenhouse field that touches so clearly on the subject. A copy should be in your hands.

Write for it today, to the Column-free House for Vegetables

UP AT IRONDEQUOIT, N. Y., there are two Metcalfe brothers, each having his own vegetable-growing business.

The early part of last year one of the brothers, familiarly known as "Fred," built one of our column-free iron frame compression truss houses, 40 feet wide and 175 feet long.

The other brother (C. H.) kept an eagle eye on the house as it went up and finally came to the conclusion that it was the kind of house he also wanted.

So along the middle of the summer we finished this one for him, 40 feet wide and 183 feet 4 inches long.

You will notice that the compression trussing hangs unusually low. This was done to bring them down far enough to form the right height supports for the overhead cucumber wiring. The entire absence of columns is a feature some growers feel to be a great advantage. Others don't mind columns and claim they are an advantage.

As far as strength and durability is concerned, one method of framing is as strong as the other, framed as we frame them.

To advise you in this advertisement the kind of house you ought to have would be folly. It is not our way of doing business. We first must know the full details of your wants. Then and only then can any intelligent, dependable advice be given.

If you are ready to take up with us, in an earnest, practical way, the question of that next house, we will gladly go into it with you from A to Z.

Say when.

To The Greenhousemen,

North, South, East and West:

It is with just pride that we review the 14 years past, during which we have served the trade in supplying them with the various articles of GARLAND MANUFACTURE which have become so well known to the trade, in this as well as other countries.

We are now preparing to enter the new year equipped to handle an increased and ever-increasing amount of business.

We wish to announce that for the convenience of our patrons present and future we have established branches as follows and can assure our customers the same courtesy in dealing with them that they have received in dealing with our main office:

Eastern Representatives-Means & Thacher, 6 and 8 Custom House St., Boston, Mass.

Northwestern Representative-S. A. Jamieson, Minneapolis, Minn.

Western Representative-C. C. Shafer, 15 W. 14th St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Should you be interested in greenhouse material, write the office nearest you and get information at first hand. Expressing our appreciation for past favors and extending to all the compliments of the season, we are,

Respectfully,

TO TRACE RETURNS FROM THIS AD, we will add to all orders for the goods mentioned below of $50.00 or over, absolutely free of charge to those mentioning The Review, a splendid glass counter show case, with copper-colored metal trimmings, equipped for displaying both ribbons and chiffons. This case is a sightly ornament to any flower shop.

CHIFFONS

Not the Ordinary Sort, but ARISTOCRATS of Their Kind

GUARANTEED SAVINGS OF 20% TO 40%

Do not confound these with the ordinary chiffons of commerce.

We particularly recommend these lots to florists desiring a variety of colors and styles of the season's choicest chiffons at a

TREMENDOUS SAVING

After an enormous season's business, by far the largest in our history, we see great breaks in some of our stocks.

In some patterns and widths we may have several thousand pieces of White, but no Pink. In another, just as good and salable, a great quantity of Pink, but no White, etc. As our general stocks of Whites and Pinks are so large, a good preponderance of these colors is assured.

Our goods are always priced right at the beginning of the season, so therefore we find it unnecessary to resort to great price reductions at the end, except in a special instance such as this.

UNDERSTAND THAT THIS OFFER DOES NOT INCLUDE ODD SHADES, CHEAP, SHODDY OR SHOPWORN GOODS

The best proof of our confidence is to send the lot subject to examination and five days' approval to any reputable florist in the United States. The entire lot to be returned at our expense if unsatisfactory.

LOT NO 1-1000 YARDS, PRICE 3 c PER YARD . .	AMOUNT, $30.00
LOT NO. 2-1000 YARDS, PRICE 5 c PER YARD . .	AMOUNT, 50.00
LOT NO. 3-1000 YARDS, PRICE 7½c PER YARD . .	AMOUNT, 75.00
LOT NO. 4-1000 YARDS, PRICE 9½c PER YARD . .	AMOUNT, 95.00

Totals may vary a few yards, more or less, owing to variation in length of pieces. Each lot includes many varieties and styles, assorted in all the desirable colors, White and Pink predominating. Also a goodly quantity of Lavender, Violet and Purple, with a sprinkling of seasonable shades like Yellow and Nile.

A moderate amount of Christmas Reds and Greens.

Lot No. 1 comprises widths from 4 inch UPWARD.

Lot No. 2 comprises widths from 6 inch UPWARD.

Lots Nos. 3 and 4 comprise practically ALL WIDE WIDTHS.

Goods sent on five days' approval. Regular terms.

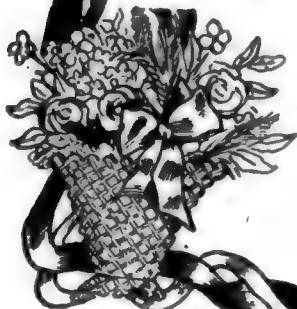

LOTS POSITIVELY WILL NOT BE BROKEN

CHIFFON USERS: This is a better investment than government bonds. Write or telegraph today. No samples of these lots will be mailed.

NEW YORK

Christmas will soon be here and will be the best the trade has ever known. As each Christmas and Easter goes by, we realize that the demand is more and more for plants, and, while the stock on the market this year is better than ever, present indications are that the supply will fall far short of the demand. In placing your orders for holiday stock, have you ever realized what a tremendous convenience the Wholesale Plantsman could be to you? Do you know that you can, in one-half hour, at our house, see the product of all the best growers within a shipping distance of New York? To look over the same variety of stock would necessitate the travel of many miles, take a number of days, and cost a great deal of money. Again, do you realize, when the busy holidays are at hand, what a vast convenience it would be to receive your stock from one source? No delay, there on the minute you want it, and in the condition you want it. Each plant is selected, wrapped and packed, the last with as much care as the first, and each in prime condition. Last year we had a big shipping trade, this year we want to double it. We know we will have our old customers back again. We also want new ones. Get in line. Come and see our stock. If you can't, send your orders in and they will receive the same care they would if you selected them yourself.

FINE STOCK

WE CAN FILL ALL YOUR CHRISTMAS

Q We shall have quality as well as quantity. Randall always has an enormous supply for the season. We have sent us their orders. But this year we shall have much the largest Christmas supply yet. You can. If you can't send them early, send them when you can. You can rely on Randall at any stage.

ROSES

Our Rose crops are hitting Christmas exactly right—the cuts will be at their very best. Particularly strong on Killarney and White Killarney, especially in the medium to long stems, but can supply everything else the market affords. You can't beat Randall's Roses.

Place your main order today and wire additions as needed.

CARNATIONS

We are ready to book your order for Carnations for Christmas—and Randall's prices always are right. Don't think of placing your order elsewhere until you get Randall's special quotation on the quantity you need. We want your business because we shall have the stock you need. No better Carnations than Randall's.

Place your main order today and wire additions as needed.

BEAUTIES

We shall have a splendid supply of Beauties for Christmas. The quality will be right up to top notch and a quantity promised that will make it possible for us to take care of our regular trade and a lot of new buyers. Grown cool and overfed, gives them that wonderful keeping quality.

Place your main order today and wire additions as needed.

POINSETTIAS

We can supply just the grade of Poinsettias your trade requires; all sizes up to the longest and biggest.

VALLEY

You need an extra quantity of Valley for Christmas. Randall always can supply the finest that is grown.

If there is any flower you want, Randall has it—and Randall

Christmas Specials

CHRISTMAS RED RUSCUS.

During the next two weeks we will put out the remaining quantity of our select grade Ruscus. This consists of a shipment recently received. Don't overlook the last opportunity of the season to lay in a sufficient supply for Christmas.

You may not realize what this means to you, but if you will accept our "tip" you can save yourself a lot of future worry.

The way to avoid regrets is to get your order to us without delay. 45c to $1.00 per lb. Also in six other colors.

Good Short Stem Roses, our selection, - - - $8.00 per 100 Special Grade Roses Charged for Accordingly.

In sending orders, by mail or telegraph, please be explicit in stating either length or price of Roses wanted, as otherwise we can only use our best judgment in an exceedingly busy time and can not afterward entertain complaints. On account of every customer calling for extra quantities of flowers at the Holidays, we frequently find it advantageous to ship part of an order and let the balance follow on a later train. Unless customers designate the train stock is to be shipped on, we use our best judgment in such matters, in order that every customer may get all the flowers he wants. No complaints entertained where definite shipping instructions do not accompany the order.

We are always glad to promptly answer questions the very best of our ability; in fact, we invite corspondence, and are always pleased to see you at our of-in Evergreen.

Our shipping department is in charge of a thorough competent and experienced shipping clerk and corps assistants, both at our main packing sheds and branch
Our extensive facilities and equipment insure the safe being packed properly and received by you in good condition. Of paramount importance to you, and an in-clad rule with us, is that your greens are gathered for after your order is received, thereby insuring you ablutely fresh stock.

Terms

Where customers are unknown to us and not rated in the mercantile books, we ask for satisfactory references or cash with order. We guarantee safe and timely delivery on all express shipments, but consider our responsibility at an end for all freight shipments when receipt is taken from the railroads. Telegraphic orders are shipped on the day of their receipt, but we urge that all orders be sent in as early as possible, and, in all cases, please be particular to tell us the day you want the goods to arrive. We are familiar with all the express schedules and can judge the time to ship so that you will surely receive the goods on time, and at the same time we shall be sure they arrive fresh.

Cut Chamaerops Palm Crowns

Being the native Palm plant with the roots only removed. Can be shipped by freight in large quantities. They vary in size from 3 ft. high, 6 to 8 leaves, to our immense specimens 7 to 16 ft. high, 15 to 25 leaves, as large as 2 ft. across. In decorations placed in tubs or jardinières, they cannot be told from a living plant.

PRICES

5 to 6-ft.....	.50	5.00	50.00

Extra large specimens, $2.50 to $5.00 each. Weight of one dozen, assorted sizes, packed ready for shipment, 40 lbs.

The above is a photographic reproduction of our Standard Smilax shipping cases, Nos. 1 to 6, inclusive.

Our greens are shipped in light, strongly manufactured, paper-lined, veneered shipping cases, and great care is exercised in our packing department to insure the stock reaching our customers in absolutely first-class condition, fresh, crisp and clean. Practically all of our evergreens are shipped by express. Our express rates, however, are 25% less than regular merchandise rates.

WE GROW ALL THE FLOWERS WE SELL

OUR SPECIALTIES:

BEAUTIES—We have never seen a finer crop than we now have. The special long stems are recognized as the choicest in this market.

RED ROSES—Our Rhea Reids will rival medium and short Beauties for size and color. They are the best in the middle west, and our Richmonds are very choice.

KILLARNEY—Both Pink and White are in big crop and of choice quality.

MRS. AARON WARD—We have the largest quantity in this market, and for color and size of bloom they have seldom been equaled. This is the rose the people want.

CHRISTMAS

NOVELTIES IN GREENS.

Brisk Sellers in Good Stores.

Every retail flower store of course does a large business at Christmas in the various holiday greens, but the competition of the grocer and the butcher has cut down the profit on the sale of the cheaper forms of Christmas decorations. Single-faced holly wreaths and ground pine roping no longer have the value they once had in first-class flower stores. Of course, the florist still sells these articles, and by handling a better grade than is handled by the corner grocer he does business with a class of people who will pay fair prices. Consequently, the ordinary Christmas greens are not to be neglected, but in the stores that cater to the better class of trade the need of novelty has developed some new ideas in the sale of Christmas greens. Some of these novelties are illustrated on this and the succeeding pages of this issue. Not all of them will at first sight appear as of large importance, but in the stores where these were shown last year an excellent business was done with them and at profits much better than the profits to be made on the staples in Christmas greens.

The Wall Decoration.

An enterprising decorator took a sturdy bough of hemlock as a base and on it built a flat bunch after the fashion of the ordinary funeral spray, using some smaller pieces of hemlock, the well known Christmas red berries, some holly branches and some mistletoe. The bunch was wired firmly, so that it could be hung on the wall without danger of coming to pieces, and a big bow of wide Christmas red ribbon was tied at the point at which it is attached to bunches of flowers. The illustration showing the use of this wall decoration does the subject inadequate justice because the colors are not possible of reproduction. But these proved good sellers, and those whose taste would prompt them to buy were people of sufficient means so that the florist was able to get a much better profit than could be had on a simple holly wreath.

Basket of Berries and Cones.

The illustration on page 30 shows an Italian straw basket in the Christmas color. All that was needed to make it salable was filling with pine cones, any kind of evergreens in short branches, with a liberal addition of the red Christmas berries. Some retailers who used the idea last Christmas were able to secure the cones from some local source of woods supply, but others used the stock offered by the florists' supply houses and were able to devise a large number of variations on the filling of the baskets, so that no two sent out were exactly alike. The idea is not one that can be used for general trade, but where people are looking for something different—and there is an undoubted monotony in the ordinary run of Christmas decorations—these Christmas baskets were found good sellers. A variety of uses suggested themselves to buyers possessed of the artistic temperament.

Baby Christmas Trees.

In recent years the baby Christmas trees have enjoyed an excellent popularity. The provision stores sell them for a few nickels each, but the florist who trims them up effectively can charge dollars. The illustration on page 31 shows one of these little trees which was mounted on the ordinary plateau used for table centerpieces of cut flowers. The butt of the tree was first inserted in the usual block of wood, which was set on the plateau. Then it was covered with moss, which was wired on just as though cut flowers were to have been used. Then around the base of the tree the moss was stuck full of short holly branches and short sprays of the Christmas red berries. The addition of some Christmas red ribbon in the top of the tree completed the work. This made an ideal table centerpiece and the price obtained was ample compensation for the work involved.

A variation on this arrangement was to mount the Christmas tree in one of the low Japanese baskets, and anyone who starts out to devise means of varying the stock will find it possible to prepare a considerable number of pleasing styles. Only don't have too many on view at once. People who are willing to pay for such novelties do not like the idea that everyone in town is going to buy something similar. A novelty is all the better for carrying with it the idea that it is exclusive.

Table Novelties.

The illustration on page 31 shows three simple ways of offering Christmas greens in attractive and novel form and making them the means of selling the receptacles. At the left in the illustration is one of the braided baskets of the style of the schoolgirl's handbag. It is filled with hemlock, red berries and mistletoe, but holly or any other greens could be used to as good effect. In the center is one of the simple china cut flower receptacles filled with Mexican ivy and short, heavily fruited sprays of the Christmas red berries. The basket at the right proved a particularly good seller. The basket is square at the bottom and round at the top and contains a pan which was mossed. It was filled with short pieces of hemlock, Christmas red berries and mistletoe, with a rosette of Christmas red ribbon on the handle. The basket itself was white, with a decoration consisting of a garland of red flowers. Discriminating flower buyers find these excellent Christmas table ornaments.

Quality in Christmas Greens.

It is possible for the florist to buy holly wreaths at prices which will permit him to compete with the cheapest seller in his neighborhood, but the flower store really should not make cheapness its selling point; the people who patronize the florist do not want to class the flower store with the curb-stone seller of Christmas greens; they like the idea of buying at a place that has a reputation for quality. The florist should offer a Christmas wreath distinctly better in quality than can be bought at any of the places that handle decorative material merely as a side line to catch loose money at Christmas. It pays. It is just as easy to sell a good wreath as a cheap one, and the profit on the sale of a good wreath is as great as the profit on several sales of the cheapest wreaths.

The florist who makes the money is the one who plans his operations well in advance. Do not wait until the Monday before Christmas before you figure out what you are going to offer in the

HOLIDAY PLANT ARRANGEMENTS

Some Good Sellers Illustrated.

There is no great variety in the Christmas plants—the number of kinds is limited to a comparative few and they are practically the same from year to year, but there is infinite variety in the accessories and by their use the capable retailer can provide an assortment of stock rich in variety and in artistic attractiveness. The illustrations in this issue are good examples of the class of Christmas plant arrangements that sell well in all up-to-date flower stores.

Possibly the most widely sold Christmas plant is the cyclamen. The ways in which it can be offered in combination with other plants in baskets are simply endless, but a well-flowered small baskets filled with a variety of material. The small baskets call for small plants, but a number of them can be used. The illustration on page 36 shows a willow basket of the natural color, with a Japanese maple lifting its variegated foliage in the center, surrounded by cyclamens, with Whitmani ferns on one side and a small pandanus on the other. If the baskets are provided with metal liners and the combination is carefully planted the keeping qualities are excellent and one sale leads to another.

The gold basket on page 38 was filled with Proserpine tulips and primulas. It made a handsome table ornament and has sold well in previous seasons.

No matter how high class the trade handled, there always is a demand for inexpensive plant arrangements, and those got up with a fair degree of taste always prove good sellers. An example of this character is the illustration on page 39, which shows a pink primula and an adiantum in a willow handle basket. Another is the illustration on page 39 showing white primulas in a willow hamper that had been stained green. In the store where these were shown last Christmas dozens were sold.

The illustration on page 32 shows two ways of filling the same basket with the best selling Christmas plants, primulas and cyclamens. These are oval baskets of attractive character, but of medium price. They are metal lined and plants in them will remain attractive for many days. Such arrangements sell well and give satisfaction.

The poinsettia is the special Christmas plant and, combined with crotons and Farleyense, as shown in the illustration on page 37, it is an extremely good seller. The croton is rapidly gaining in popularity, both as a plant and for color effects in table and design work.

The Lorraine begonia has been shown in simply countless different styles of Christmas plant combinations, but it really is entitled to an opportunity to show its individuality, as in the illustration on page 35. The plant illustrated is Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, but the average customer does not know Cincinnati from Lorraine. The difference frequently is apparent, however, in the enduring quality of the plants under the average dwelling conditions.

It may add something to the interest in the illustration on page 33 to know that the original was sent as a Christmas gift last year to the home of Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller. Such arrangements are too large and expensive to sell readily in the average flower store, but one or two are a good investment merely for advertising purposes, even if not sold. This was a willow basket stained brown. The handle was bent in heart shape. With crotons in the center, surrounded by poinsettias, and with adiantum below the bright bracts, with the addition of the ribbon on the handle, the arrangement was admired by everyone who saw it and finally found a purchaser at an excellent figure.

The illustration on page 35 shows three attractive ways of offering the ardisia for Christmas. This is a plant which should not be overly embellished. No one would think of offering it in the red pot in which it has made its home for the last few months, but all way of Christmas greens. Make your plans now and arrange for your supplies of material. Do not wait until it is too late and you are too busy to figure out a line of decorations a little different and a little better than any of your competitors ever have offered.

Youngstown, O.—December 4 a heavily loaded street car ran away on the Fountain avenue hill, leaving the track at the corner and crashing into John Walker's greenhouses, demolishing the ends of several houses. Mr. Walker was in Cleveland at the time. His loss will amount to several thousands of dollars, for which the street railway company is good.

cyclamen deserves a green toneware receptacle and an opportunity to show its individuality, as is seen in the illustration on page 34. This plant carried thirty blooms and the retailer who offered it last Christmas found his only difficulty in not having enough of them.

The Christmas basket on page 37 is simplicity itself. It is filled with Proserpine tulips and Roman hyacinths, a touch of Easter amid the snows of winter. It was an excellent seller, but hardly fussed up enough to seem attractive except to people of educated taste.

It is not in every store that big mixed baskets of plants can be sold, but every store can do business with that is required is to shift into some attractive receptacle. In the illustration the plant at the right was in a copper jar with brass hoops. The plant in the center was in one of the Japanese baskets, of which there are so many quaint and inexpensive forms, while the plant at the left simply has been shifted to an oddity in flower pots. The leading retail flower store in which these were shown last Christmas found them excellent sellers at $7 each.

CARE OF CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

Azaleas.

There are few more popular Christmas plants than azaleas, the bright-colored sorts, such as Hexe and Mme. Petrick selling particularly well, although other colors also sell moderately well. Of course all of the stock wanted for the holidays will have been in heat for some time, and if a few flowers are now expanded and the bulk of the buds showing color they are in just the right condition. Any which are at all backward must have plenty of heat; 65 degrees at night is not too much. Spray them freely. This hard forcing will cause the plants to make growths ahead of the flowers, and these young shoots should be rubbed off, as they check the development of the flower buds. Remove plants nicely in flower into a cooler house, but do not let the change be too sudden, so as to cause wilting. Be sure to have a good stock of small plants on their own roots in pots and pans. The red varieties are in big demand each year.

Camellias.

It is pleasing to note a coming in again of that one time popular flower, the camellia. Of course when compared with other hard-wooded plants, such as azaleas, ericas and acacias, their sale is not large, but there is no mistaking the fact that they are growing in favor, perhaps not so much commercially as on the large private estates. I have in mind quite a few of these where considerable space is given to them.

Camellia plants carrying two or three flowers are quite salable at the holidays. If plants have hard, green buds, which have not yet started to swell, they cannot be flowered on time. These plants will not stand forcing like azaleas. It will only cause the buds to drop. About the only time they relish much heat and moisture is while making their growth. By all means grow camellias fairly cool, not exceeding 50 degrees at night at this season.

Poinsettias.

The brilliant scarlet poinsettias are among the greatest sellers at Christmas. Owing to a fall of exceptional warmth, nearly all growers report their plants as flowering two to three weeks earlier than usual, but it is fairly easy to hold them a week or two in good condition, even with the bracts well expanded. They should not be put in a really cool house, or results will be disastrous, but they will stand 50 degrees at night and not lose any foliage if carefully watered. If the foliage is still dark green on the plants you are fortunate. Such stock, even if the bracts are not large, will sell well. It pays from now on to pay special attention to watering and not to subject the plants to any cold draughts or low temperature.

There is trouble each year in cutting poinsettias and having them keep plump. If cut and put in cold water, wilting frequently follows, the same as if the stock is left out of water, but if the stems, as soon as cut, are seared on a hot iron or dipped in water that is boiling or nearly so, the flowers will keep stiff. It also is an advantage to wrap each head in oiled or tissue paper.

Lilies.

The crop of Christmas lilies must now have the buds starting to open. Then, in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night, they will be all right. There is not the same demand for white flowers as at Easter, but nevertheless quite a few longiflorum lilies are sold. Where the cold storage speciosums are grown, if they were started in August, they should now be flowering. They prefer a lower temperature than the longiflorums. These cold storage lilies, both longiflorum and speciosum, do not make good pot plants, as they lack the vigor of the newly imported bulbs and produce a smaller number of flowers per bulb, but they are excellent for cutting.

Berried Plants.

Christmas is the time par excellence for disposing of berried plants. In fact, the sale for them at any other time is quite limited. Ardisia crenulata is deservedly popular. It cannot be offered at a low rate, but if the fruit has been well ripened the plants are attractive and readily command a good price. Late plants should have a warm, sunny house to help color up the fruit. There is little use trying to sell plants with green fruit. Solanums, Christmas peppers and Otaheite oranges are all popular fruiting plants for the holiday trade. The solanums do not mind a low temperature, but want plenty of water. The oranges also stand cool treatment, but the Christmas peppers do not want to be kept too cool. The solanums can be profitably moved at quite a low price, and it is a mistake to hold them up, for they are almost a dead loss if not cleared out in the next two weeks.

Begonias.

Both the Lorraine and Glory of Cincinnati begonias are great Christmas plants. The latter is much in evidence this season and J. A. Peterson must be proud to see how wonderfully it has bounded into popular favor. I was told seriously a year ago that it is hard to pack, as the leaves are too large; that the foliage spots badly with flowers falling on it, and that it will never approach the Lorraine in favor. I think there will continue to be a place for each, but there is no mistaking the fact that Cincinnati is, if anything, the more popular of the two this season. Its larger flowers and the fact that it stands house treatment better than Lorraine are points in its favor. It is likely that small plants, in 3-inch and 4-inch pots and small pans, will be in great demand. The last two seasons many more of these could have been sold. Do not keep the begonias too warm from now on and they will then give your customers more lasting pleasure.

Cypripedium Insigne.

That good old orchid, Cypripedium insigne, is still one of the most popular sorts in commerce. The flowers are hardly of a Christmas color, but it is more sold in pots each year, and surely for anyone who wants something lasting it has few equals. It will not drop its flowers if a little dry at the root, or wilt, as will most other plants, but its flowers are good for some weeks, even in a warm room. I have seen C. insigne sell splendidly in little wicker baskets with one or two small sprays of evergreen or deciduous holly to brighten it up. If this orchid is not sold at Christmas, it has one fine property, viz.: that it will continue perfectly salable for some weeks.

Ericas.

The ericas, such as melanthera, are quite easily flowered for Christmas and meet with quite a good sale. This is another plant which will not tolerate forcing, which must always be grown cool, but which is quite accommodating in that it will remain fresh a long time. Any temperature just above actual frost will suit it. Some growers abuse it by standing it outside their doors on quite frosty days. It may not show much ill effects while outside, but the flowers will soon become brown and the foliage drop in heat. Be sure to keep the roots moist. No hard-wooded plants will stand much drying, and ericas are in this respect probably the most fussy and consequently the most injured of the whole family. The ericas which were retained in pots flower earlier and are thus better for Christmas than such as were planted outdoors in summer.

Lily of the Valley.

Lily of the valley is a great favorite with practically everyone. I sometimes hear people say that they get tired of roses and carnations, but how often do we hear of anyone growing tired of lily of the valley? Pots five and six inches in diameter, with fifteen to twenty single pips in each, will make salable plants. If they were started late in November they should now be grown sufficiently to place in the full light in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. As they are getting fully opened, give them slightly cooler quarters, but be careful on this point, as a drop of 20 degrees will cause the plants to wilt.

Decorative Colored-Leaved Plants.

The highly colored crotons and dracaenas make excellent plants for warm rooms, as does Pandanus Veitchii. All of these stand the drying heat with little injury. Do not, however, make the mistake of mixing these rich foliage plants in the same pans or hampers with poinsettias, as they hardly agree. Speaking of these tropical plants, we are reminded of the fact that now, when firing is more steady and the sand in the propagating bench will be warm, is a good time to get in a batch of cuttings of crotons, pandanus and dracaenas. It is well also to remember that none of these plants should long be exposed to a temperature lower than 50 degrees, or they will soon show it in loss of foliage. They should therefore be extra well protected when sent out to customers during severe weather.

Two Ways of Filling the Same Basket, Using the Commoner Christmas Plants.

Big Basket with Heart-shaped Handle, Filled with Poinsettias, Crotons and Adiantum.

Fern Dishes.

There is invariably considerable call for fern dishes at Christmas and it is well to have a good number made up in advance. Some prefer them with a small Cocos Weddelliana as a centerpiece. If a sufficient stock of these small ferns has not been laid in, secure them at once from one of the specialists. All the pteris are good, except, of course, such rank growers as tremula. Such adiantums as Croweanum, cuneatum and gracillimum, Cyrtomium falcatum, Aspidium Tsussimense and Davallia stricta are all good. The adiantums look best by themselves, but other sorts are all right either separate or mixed.

Specimen Ferns.

The nephrolepis is the great fern for house culture. The old Boston variety is still most in evidence and sells better than any other sort, but there is a wide assortment of other nephrolepis varieties, such as Whitmani compacta, elegantissima, Todeaoides, and others, all of which are beautiful. One of the finest and most beautiful of house ferns is Cibotium Schiedei. It is really surprising how much ill treatment this will stand without showing its effects. Cyrtomium falcatum, the holly fern, is another sort which stands dry heat remarkably well. Adiantum Farleyense is especially handsome, but given one chill and one drying up at the root and it is all up with it. This holds good, of course, of all adiantums, and to a greater or less degree of all ferns. Watering is of vital importance, or there will be a great loss while plants are in the store. Let a man attend to it who really understands it. Few store florists know much about it and when large numbers of valuable plants are on hand, get a competent greenhouse man to water them.

Hardy Shrubs.

Hardy shrubs are popular at the holidays. The person of moderate means cannot, however, afford to buy them. Practically all the berried sorts are imported from Europe and they cannot profitably be sold at a price within the reach of nine-tenths of flower store customers. English hollies in tubs take the lead among these berried subjects. Others are Skimmia Japonica and Aucuba Japonica. These being plants which will stand quite hard freezing, they are excellent to stand outside the store, and in addition some of the cupressus, retinosporas, thuyas, abies and other evergreen coniferæ can be used to good advantage. Neat tubs, painted green, are better than pots for all these shrubs. The pots, if hard frozen, will split and are more likely to blow over and break in windy weather.

Primulas and Cyclamens.

Primulas and cyclamens are plants which can be sold at a moderate price and are really satisfactory to the purchasers, as they bloom so long under quite adverse conditions. Some florists fight shy of Primula obconica, as the leaves are somewhat poisonous to some people. In spite of this, however, it is such a satisfactory plant that there is no falling off in numbers grown. It would be well to tell purchasers that each of these plants will give most satisfaction if grown in a cool room. Too often salesmen know little or nothing of the needs of the plants they sell and advise a warm room for semi-alpine subjects. If we can only educate buyers, particularly those of moderate means, so that they will give the plants rational treatment, thus prolonging their flowering season and lives, we will find them more likely to invest in them. Nothing so profoundly disgusts the average buyer as to find plants dropping to pieces a day or two after being received.

Wrap Plants Securely.

Sometimes we are favored with mild weather at Christmas. This is a veritable godsend to those who are handling plants in quantity, as it means a great saving in both time and wrapping material. Weather conditions are, however, proverbially fickle, and never more so than in winter. Unless for short and prompt deliveries we must not trust too much to balmy spells of weather, as the temporary breath of spring may in a few short hours give way to the frigidity of the arctics. All plants, therefore, should be heavily wrapped where they go by express, necessitating some hours of exposure, perhaps, on open vehicles at a season when the delivery companies have their maximum of business. Wrap well and pack securely in the boxes, so that there can be no jolting. Customers receiving chilled or frozen plants have every room to complain, especially where an additional covering of newspaper would have made all the difference in the world.

In the case of such tender plants as foliage deserves to lose trade. It is always a good plan to hang a tag on the plants, "Water this plant well daily." As a general rule, one soaking a day, while it may be more than some plants require in a greenhouse, is not too much in the drier heat of the average American home.

CUT POINSETTIAS WILTING.

We have a batch of poinsettias with stems four to six feet long and fine foliage, but as soon as we cut them they wilt. We dipped the ends in hot paraffine and then placed them in a cool, dark room in about two feet of water, but still they seem to wilt. We hate to cut them down to twelve to eighteen inches so long as the stems are strong and the foliage large and fine. Will they keep better later, when riper?

H. G. C.

Every year many complaints are received of poinsettias wilting badly when cut. The warmer the plants have been grown, the more they will wilt. It is an excellent plan to gradually lower the temperature some 8 or 10 degrees in the house where they and then proceed to dip the lot; the bleeding will materially weaken them. After dipping in hot water or searing on a hot iron or coal, I find it pays to wrap each bract in soft paper before placing the stems in water.

There is no need to cut your stems short. They will, of course, keep better when the bracts are well developed. Use jars with a good depth of water and place, not in an icechest, but where the temperature holds about 45 degrees. If you adopt these precautions you should have no trouble in keeping your bracts plump. C. W.

DAHLIAS IN THE SOUTH.

Soil and Situation.

We had been informed that dahlias were hard to grow well so far south as Tennessee, and so it was not until three years ago that we made any real attempt to grow them here at Nashville. We purchased a few and planted them on a southern slope, protected on the north from the early frosts by a timber lot. The soil was excellent and they had good care. We anticipated a lot of good late flowers, but by the middle of the summer every one was dead. Last year we tried again, planting a few hundred, mostly varieties we had grown in the north before locating here. We selected a cold clay soil on a northern exposure. We planted in the latter part of March, and by the middle of June we had good bloom. The ground was well cultivated, and by the middle of July every plant was a mass of bloom. Alas, a heavy wind followed by a flood of rain broke most of them down and made it necessary to cut the others back severely. They came on well again and in the fall gave us a good crop of bloom. We had such a heavy demand for the tubers that we decided to begin growing them in quantity.

We had a field that had been so poor and the clay so yellow that we had manured it and sowed it to oats and clover. This had grown on it for two years. We top-dressed this clover sod with a light coat of stable manure and turned it under early in June. Of course there was a good crop of green manure to turn under. The latter part of June and the first week of July we planted our dahlias, over 250 varieties. They were kept well plowed and hoed, and we have never seen a better field of dahlias in our lives than we had this year. The attention they have attracted has been a surprise to us, most visitors having no idea of the progress that has been made in dahlias.

We are now digging. We cut the tops about five or six inches above the top of the ground, then allow them to stand a few days, till the sap has pretty well dried up in the stump. We can do this here, as we will not have enough frost to kill them before January. The clumps are then dug and allowed to dry two days or more. They are then set in boxes, head downward, or packed in barrels that have been provided with ventilation, always being sure to place the top down, as they keep much better in this way. They are then put in a cool, dry cellar.

This method of procedure is not essentially different from what we did in the north, other than that we allow the plants to dry after the tops are cut, before digging the tubers. We do find, however, that we must use a cool clay gardenias, various orchids, tropical foliage plants, lilacs and all plants which may have been subjected to hard forcing, use some sheets of cotton wool as well as tissue paper about the flowers before using newspapers or other heavy wrapping. Ericas, camellias, Dracæna Australis, ardisias, solanums and some other plants will be uninjured by chills which would ruin those of a more tropical nature.

I need hardly say that clean pots and clean foliage should be the rule. The grower who sends out dirty pots or are growing when the bracts are well developed. This will to some extent prevent wilting, but not altogether. When you want to cut any of your poinsettias, have a pail of boiling water in readiness and dip the bottoms of the stems in it. Do not immerse them deeply, merely enough to seal up the ends. Keep them in this water for about a minute, or if preferred you can have a piece of iron heated red hot, or some hot coal, and sear the ends. It is important not to wait until you have cut a lot of stalks soil with, preferably, a northern slope. We have experimented with a few plants in each of a great many different situations and are sure we are right in this.

Some Good Varieties.

Now a few words about the best cut flower varieties here:

Bruton has not been surpassed by any of the newer yellows. Golden Age is a deeper yellow, a freer bloomer and a prettier flower, but it has shorter stems and does not have as good substance. Catherine, a pompon variety discarded years ago and tried again this year, has proved the best colored, best formed, longest-stemmed yellow we had. We shall grow more of it next season and believe it is going to be the best yellow for this climate. It is not a pompon in size here. Mrs. Lafollette is the best yellow peony-flowered variety we have seen, although it is a shy bloomer here.

In whites, Storm King, Flora and Snow have done the best here. Snow-clad is a mass of pompon bloom, but has no stems. Grand Duke Alexis has been a failure both seasons. Queen Wilhelmina, the popular white peony-flowered sort, is a shy bloomer here.

In pinks the best all-round variety we have is Fascination. It never fails to sell and is first-class in every way. Neither Kriemhilde nor Nymphaea makes good here. F. L. Bassett, Eureka and Blue Obed, although none of them quite pink, are all better here than we have ever seen them elsewhere, and are all good sellers. Nothing could give more long-stemmed flowers than these. Mrs. Roosevelt is great, although too shy here. Queen Emma sells on sight and is a winner, but we have an unnamed seedling sent us by G. D. Black, of Independence, Ia., that is similar to it and of better color; also, it produces three times the bloom on better stems. When introduced this should make a sensation.

Black Prince is the best grower and freest bloomer of them all in this climate. It is a popular cut flower of large size. Countess of Lonsdale is the freest cactus dahlia here and the best seller. Jack Rose, Mme. Van den Dael and Catherine Duer all do well here and are first-class cut flowers.

But the sensations of the entire field as cut flowers were Cuban Giant and Souv. De Gustave Doazon. It was easy to get 3-foot stems on these, and they are about as large as the best peonies, with such coloring as was never seen in this flower.

That size is not a necessary qualification for a popular dahlia was proved by the pompon variety, Bijou. It is not more than an inch and a half in diameter, rarely two inches, but is of a warm, bronzy orange that is hard to describe. It has been a mass of bloom from the earliest to the latest, every flower being held on a long stem well above the foliage. It attracted the most attention and was the most in demand both for cut flowers and for tubers for planting next year of all the 250 varieties.

We had just one tuber of a variety named Alfer. We do not remember where we got it. We grew three plants of it. It is a bright ruby red, or possibly a little deeper, is about six inches in diameter and has long stems. In shape it is different from anything we have ever seen, being, as nearly as we can describe it, halfway between a decorative and a cactus. We consider it the best dahlia of any type or color we have ever seen, and are not alone in our opinion. Everyone who saw it in bloom agreed that it would easily lead all others as a cut flower if we had it in quantity. Floyd Bralliar.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

On account of the busy season, the executive committee of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association has postponed the annual meeting and bulb show at Chicago until the following month of January. Full information will be given in Bulletin No. 4, soon to be issued. The success of the bulb show last December showed the plan to be a good one and all growers are requested to bring out their best. The program feature will be greatly enlarged and everyone is invited to give his best ideas regarding the outdoor plants, from the bulb to the flower. If you do not receive the bulletin, drop the secretary a card and one will be sent promptly.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Winter Protection.

We have reached a period of the year when severe cold may be expected at almost any time, and winter protection should be afforded wherever it is really necessary. It is not a good plan to rush this work ahead while the weather is warm, as this is likely to undo any good we hope to afford the plants by giving them a winter covering. In nearly every case it is much better to delay all protection until the ground is well frozen. The mulch, of whatever nature we may apply, will then help to keep the ground frozen, which is exactly what we want.

Herbaceous Perennials.

All hardy perennials should have a winter mulch of coarse manure, straw or some other material, not so much for protection as to prevent the plants being heaved out of the soil by the alternate freezing and thawing towards spring. Any plants of somewhat doubtful hardiness, such as tritomas, Anemone Japonica, hardy chrysanthemums and incarvilleas, should have a good coating of leaves or straw. In the colder states the tritomas and incarvilleas are better stored in sandy loam in a cellar or coldframe. To hold mulch of a light nature in position, use the tops of the plants themselves, birch boughs or pine boughs.

Dutch Bulbs.

Do not cover Dutch bulbs until the ground is well frozen. If you cover them, and give a liberal mulch of leaves or straw, you will practically exclude frost. The soil thus remaining soft will give the bulbs a chance to push ahead and, in the majority of cases, when the time comes to remove the mulch in spring you will find the tulips and hyacinths with such long and tender sprouts that, even with the greatest care in uncovering, many are broken. This cannot happen if covering is delayed until the ground is frozen sufficiently hard to hold anyone up. Try both plans and prove this for yourself.

Pansies.

Where pansies are carried over in coldframes it is an easy matter to winter them successfully. Scatter a light coating of dry leaves over them, but be sure they are dry, as damp leaves will weigh down the plants and cause decay. When steady cold winter weather arrives, place sashes over them, but be sure to air freely during mild spells. When the pansies are outdoors, to winter successfully they should be on well drained ground. Leaves are an excellent covering where they can be held in position, but on wind-swept locations this is difficult, and in such cases meadow hay or salt marsh hay and litter make the best covering.

Hardy Roses.

In the case of hybrid perpetual roses, drawing the soil up to the centers of the plants is a sufficient protection, later applying a mulch of manure. In severely cold locations it may be necessary to wrap the stems in straw or to cover well with leaves and loose manure, in addition to soiling up. With the hybrid teas, this same protection is ample in many states, but it is insufficient where minimum temperatures as low as 15 degrees below zero are common. It is much safer, then, to lift and store the plants in coldframes or a good cold cellar, in damp loam, or bury outside in a trench, later mulching well with straw or leaves. Where ramblers, such as Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Hiawatha, etc., are likely to kill back, the best plan is to loosen the canes and lay them down, covering with a light mulch.

Rhododendrons.

Those beautiful evergreen shrubs, the rhododendrons, are only hardy in the colder states when well protected. Be absolutely sure that they are moist at the root before severe weather arrives. If not, soak with water. More deaths are due to dryness at the root than to winter's cold. Then, again, location has a great deal to do with the way they come through. Those well broken from the morning sun will in all probability come through unscathed, when the same plants with a southern exposure would be badly scorched or killed outright. The late winter sun and bitter winds do the greatest damage, and from the middle of February until early April is the critical time with these plants.

Provided they are moist at the root, mulch heavily with leaves. Then erect a framework and tie some evergreen branches above and around the beds, unless they are of the ironclad types, and these are few. Often a good wind-break of boughs is sufficient protection. Where evergreen covering is hard to obtain, burlap can be used to advantage, but care should be taken to allow air to circulate about the plants; otherwise it is likely to be injurious.

Various Evergreens.

There are many evergreens of a rather doubtfully hardy nature which may need some protection similar to that suggested for rhododendrons in order to prevent scorching. If there are any at all dry at the root, water them abundantly and there will be far less likelihood of their sustaining injury. English ivy on walls even on a northern exposure will often scorch unless boarded over or covered with some evergreen boughs. I recently saw a quite unique way of protecting a high wall of ivy. Coarse fish netting was hung over it, securely fastened here and there, and then pine boughs fastened to it. This made an effective and easily applied covering.

SWEET ALYSSUM NOT ROOTING.

We have thousands of cuttings of double sweet alyssum, but cannot get them to root in sand. Will you please tell me how to root them? Some have been in wet sand six weeks and still show no signs of roots.

L. M. S. & C.

The alyssum cuttings should have a little bottom heat; 65 degrees will suffice, and the top heat can be 15 degrees lower. In taking cuttings, do not take the hardest wood, but ends of the shoots which are softer. Any which can be cut or rubbed off with a heel will root more quickly than such as have a direct cut through the stem. Any of these cuttings should easily root within six weeks, provided you have the bottom heat, but if the wood is hard they will be much slower, if they root at all.

BUILDING SOLID BEDS.

Please inform me as to the best method of making solid beds in greenhouses. State the height of the curb and the depth of stone for drainage. Any information on the subject will be fully appreciated, as I have never used solid beds.

J. M.

The methods of constructing solid beds are as varied as are the styles of raised beds. Almost every grower has some pet ideas of his own, which are duly incorporated in his plan of bench building. Both wood and concrete are used for the sides, and for drainage the material ranges from broken stone to solid earth. I will give you my ideas of a practical solid, or rather semi-solid bed, and then you can modify them to suit your case.

Our beds all have wooden sides. We use 2x4 red cedar posts, set into the ground about eighteen inches and placed four feet apart. Against these, on the inside, we place the side boards, which may be one 12-inch pecky cypress board or two 6-inch boards. We put them on the inside of the posts for two reasons: First, because the soil is kept away from the posts, causing less rotting; second, because the pressure is against the posts, putting no strain whatever on the nails which hold the boards in place. The boards are set with the upper edge about two inches above the top of the posts, giving a height, from the walk to the top of the bed, of about fourteen inches. This is high enough for all practical purposes.

For filling we use the cinders from our boilers. We find them excellent for this purpose. They seem to be better than gravel, which we used at one time to fill out a lack of cinders. The gravel seems to hold moisture longer, which is undesirable. Just how broken stone would act, I am not prepared to say. The cinders are brought to within four inches of the top; the coarser clinkers, etc., are worked to the bottom, so that a fairly smooth surface may be had. If they are dry, they should have a good soaking before the bed is filled with soil. On top of the cinders we put a thin layer of long stable manure, and on top of this goes the soil, about four inches deep.

Pecky cypress boards will last about eight years, while the cedar posts will last twice that long. The sides, however, can be made of concrete if desired. The height and general dimensions would be the same as for the board beds. Let the sides be an inch and a half thick at the upper edge and widen to about five inches at the bottom. Make your concrete out of clean gravel and make it rich enough to make a first-class job. Nothing, to my mind, could be more exasperating than a concrete bed with pieces broken out here and there, as we frequently see where a poor job has been done.

If you use the wire-and-string method of supporting your carnations, you will do well to set pieces of 1-inch pipe, about one foot long, into the concrete about every fifteen feet. This will allow for uprights made of 1/2-inch pipe. By using the same size of pipe for cross pieces, with split tees to fasten them to the uprights, a neat job can be done.

Carnations

PLOWING OLD PLANTS UNDER.

I had a few hundred carnation plants left in the field, which were allowed to bloom during September and October. Next spring I intend to sow oats on the spot where the carnations were, so as to plow the oats under for manure. In the following season I would use this plot for carnations again. Would you advise me to pull the plants up or leave them to be plowed under in the spring?

C. B.

Under the plan you suggest, I do not think it would be altogether necessary to pull up those carnation plants before plowing the field. If there was no stem-rot among them, and if the plants are allowed to decay thoroughly before carnations are again planted on the ground, no harm will likely result. We have seen this done repeatedly, with no harmful results. I would advise plowing them under this fall.

A. F. J. B.

ROOTING CARNATION CUTTINGS.

Please instruct me how to take off carnation cuttings and how to root them. Should they be cut close below the joints or not especially close? What should be the temperature of the house and what should be the temperature of the sand in the bench? How often should the cuttings be watered? Should they be shaded when first put in sand, and how long? How long will it take them to root? What danger points must I guard against in rooting carnations?

Take your carnation cuttings from the blooming stems, near the base. By giving a sideways pull you can take them off without breaking off the leaf at the axil. Cut them at the bottom, as far below a joint as possible, in order to have considerable stem to insert in the sand before you come to the first pair of leaves.

An overhead temperature of 50 degrees is about right, and if you have two steam pipes under the bench there will be enough bottom heat to keep the sand just about right. Do not board up in front of the bench to hold the heat under the bench, or there will be too much bottom heat.

Water often enough to keep the sand in a moist condition. No hard and fast rules can be laid down as to how often water should be given. The only rule would be that the cuttings should never suffer for want of water, and, if the drainage is perfect, overwatering is hardly possible until the cuttings are rooted.

You will have to shade the cuttings from the direct sun for a few days at least. Then begin to let them have a little of the afternoon sun, increasing it from day to day, until they will stand up in the full sun throughout the day. Watch them carefully, however, so as not to overdo this in the early stages.

Four to five weeks will suffice to root most varieties. Varieties differ somewhat in this respect. During the next ten weeks you should have no trouble in rooting your carnations, and, for the best results all around, this is the proper time for rooting them. After March 1 you will find more difficulty. Not only will the sun be much stronger, but there will be more wind, causing draughts in the house on account of the ventilation necessary to keep down the temperature.

A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

Enclosed you will find some carnation leaves that have brown spots on them. Please let me know what is the cause of them and whether the results are likely to be serious.

E. C.

Those spots on the leaves of your carnations are caused by stigmonose, which is one of the most prevalent diseases of carnations today. Your remedy will be in selecting the cuttings for your future stock. Avoid any cutting that shows any of these light spots, and in a season or two you will have your stock clean, provided you also keep the plants free from insects.

There is little you can do for the plants which you have blooming now. Avoid excessive feeding and overwatering during the winter months. Give all the air you can when weather conditions are favorable. In fact, do everything you can to promote a sturdy, hard growth, as any softness in the growth will show an increase in these light spots.

A. F. J. B.

DRY ROT OF CARNATIONS.

Will you kindly give me some information in regard to the following trouble? On my carnation benches there are quite a few plants that are dying. They seem to wilt and turn a light green. After a few days they are entirely dead. When the plants are pulled up, there seems to be a kind of rot affecting the main stem, starting above the roots and going up through the center of the stem to the shoots that branch out. There it stops. The stem resembles an elder stalk and is brittle. The shoots are green and appear to be all right, as you can see by the stem enclosed. The other carnation plants look well and are apparently healthy. They have had good care, are producing a nice crop of flowers and have a nice growth coming. One or two which I looked at had a small, white grub or worm in the stem, but those were all I found, out of perhaps fifty plants, which showed signs of being affected.

When the plants are out, I should like to plant some gladioli. Would there be anything in the soil that would affect the gladiolus bulbs? L. O. S.

Your carnations are affected with what is generally known as dry or branch rot. This differs from the common wet rot in that it does not require any moisture to allow the fungus to develop. It is much more difficult to combat, because the remedies used in combating the wet rot do not seem to have much effect on it. In fact, the only way to eradicate the disease is to cut away all the diseased branches; or, if the plants are badly affected, pull up the whole plant and burn it. Usually we find that only a limited number of plants are affected, and these can be destroyed without seriously affecting the season's crop. The worms in the two stems you noted have nothing in common with the stem-rot.

The gladioli will likely come through all right, planted where you have taken out these plants. Sprinkle a little hydrated lime over the soil first.

A. F. J. B.

SYRINGING AND FEEDING.

Should carnations be syringed at this time of the year? My plants are getting pretty large and do not dry off every time. Will this harm the plants? I have applied Bordeaux mixture and also Grape Dust; which would you recommend? If these are applied, is syringing also necessary?

I have Enchantress and White Perfection in one house. Do these two varieties want the same temperature? The Enchantress are doing well, but the Perfection buds do not seem to develop satisfactorily and many splits are also found among the Perfection blooms. What causes this? I have kept the temperature from 48 to 55 degrees.

Would you advise working the top soil up a little at this season, or is it better to apply cow manure? Or is liquid cow manure preferable? How often should it be applied? Which is better for sweetening the soil, cow manure or lime? H. B.

Confine your syringing to about once each week. Select a bright day for it, and get it done just as early in the day as you can. This will allow the plants to dry off pretty well before night, even if the growth is rather thick. Should a prolonged cloudy spell set in, this weekly syringing may be dispensed with if the plants are free from red spider. The Bordeaux mixture and the Grape Dust will not take the place of syringing, although they may be distasteful to the spider, but they will serve to prevent damage from the moisture on the foliage in case the plants do not dry off well before night. Should it turn cloudy after you have done the syringing, a dusting of Grape Dust toward evening, or a pinch of sulphur dropped here and there on the steam pipes, will guard against leaf-spot and kindred diseases.

Enchantress and White Perfection should get along fairly well in the same house. White Perfection will sometimes throw a few poorly developed blooms, which I believe is caused by uneven watering. Watch your watering closely and see if it does not disappear.

Do not work up the top soil any more now. The roots are all through it now and only harm could result. A light mulch of well-rotted manure or a light sprinkling of sheep manure will answer as a stimulant to the growth. Use lime or wood ashes to sweeten the soil. Cow manure would have the opposite effect, especially if not thoroughly rotted. A. F. J. B.

Primulas and Adiantum in a Willow Basket.

CARNATIONS IN FRAMES.

How can we avoid stem-rot? Would carnations do all right in a coldframe, instead of being planted in the field? I had thought of planting some in coldframes next year, with the sash raised a foot or two, so as to give plenty of ventilation. We have been troubled for two years with both stem-rot and spot, which seem to start in the field, and I thought they might be avoided in this way. What would you think of growing them in pots plunged in a frame? Any advice you can give us will be thankfully received, as we are desirous of having some good, strong, healthy stock. J. J. C. & S.

To advise you how to avoid stem-rot, one would have to know what is causing it. If your culture is right, there should be little of it, but should it appear, you will find the greatest preventive in lime. Bordeaux mixture is especially good.

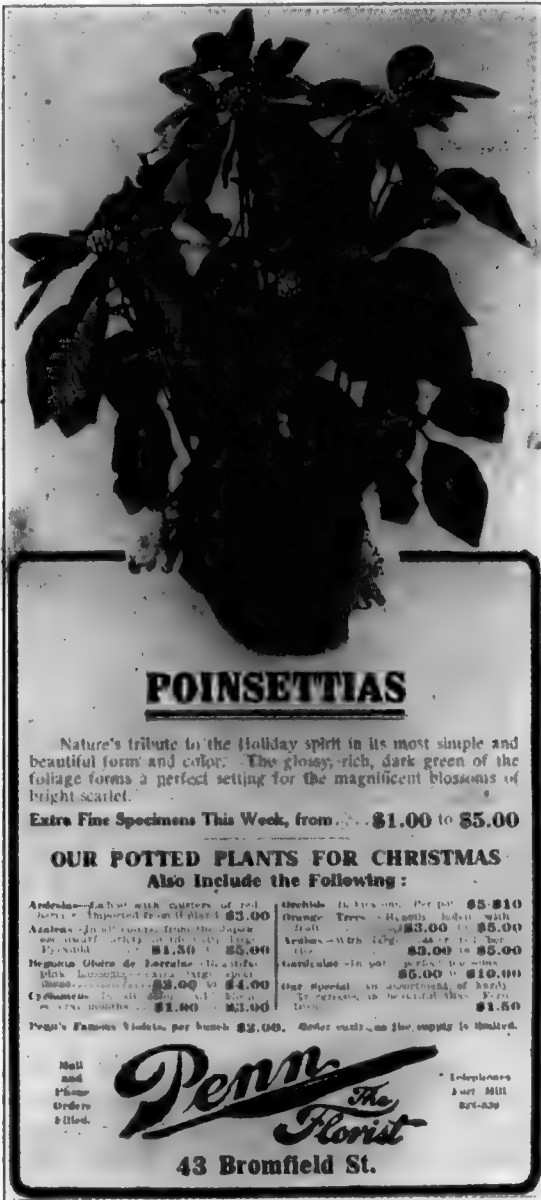

Your suggestion of planting carnations in coldframes is all right. They would do well there. If the leaf-spot is brought on by excessive rains or heavy dews, then the frames would surely help to prevent it. The plants would, of course, need more care than when planted in the field, as they would require regular watering. If potted into 4-inch pots and plunged to the rim, they would give good results, but you would likely get stronger plants if they were planted out. Those from the pots would naturally transplant with less wilting or danger of loss.

far as we can see we have again imported a lot which will not be with us long. Every season we find it the same, but there are always some good ones between the ones that don't do and it pays to risk a few hundred dollars every year.

We can sell our flowers at a regular good price, but we never could get off the plants as many flowers as growers do in the same time in your grand country. Besides, we need here more coal and have to build expensive construction, as the government regulations are such that we must build our greenhouses much stronger. Our houses will last a lifetime, but cost at least twice as much as any house would cost in America. We have tried to import greenhouses from America, but our government would have never allowed the construction. We are heating our flowers with hot water and use an electric pump. We found that this is the best and cheapest heating system and it needs little attention. We have in all our houses now the Evans Challenge ventilating apparatus and they work well. Your American construction of greenhouses is far ahead of our old-fashioned way, and we are still trying to find a way to build houses the American style. We could invest less and could produce cheaper than now.

We need here a larger and a better flower than you do and we never could sell such flowers as generally grown for the market in America. Some American growers who have seen our blooms could not believe that it was possible to have such perfect flowers. But we also never could sell such large lots of blooms as you can in your country, and so it is in the whole of Europe. There are no flowers for the workman; only rich people are having cut flowers. But we have a large trade on pot plants in this country and I am sure there are many thousand more sold over here than in your country. Otto Dellinger, for Arthur Moll, Soden, Germany.

CHRISTMAS ADVERTISING.

The trade is rapidly awaking to the importance of publicity. In many cities the florists are getting together for coöperative advertising, and individuals everywhere are engaged in exploiting their business. Retail florists are using more newspaper space this season than ever before in the history of the trade, and in this increased advertising lies the best hope of the future flower business. Every retail florist ought to advertise, and most of them are doing so, one way or another.

The Christmas advertising should have attention at once. No matter what the plan, the working out of the details should not be left until the last minute. Many florists have admired the attractive displays of Penn, the Boston retailer, reproduced from time to time in The Review. Such displays are not achieved by chance. It takes time as well as thought to get up attractive advertising matter. Get at it now, if it has not already had attention.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

I have a lot of Lilium longiflorum multiflorum. They are one inch out of the soil. What temperature must they have to bloom for Easter?

O. L. H.

This lily, if it is now showing above the soil, should be placed in a night temperature of 60 degrees in order to have it in flower for Easter, which comes unusually early next year. Be careful not to overwater until the pots are well filled with roots. It is always safest to run the soil a little on the dry side. To be quite sure of having your plants in season for Easter, your flower buds should be sufficiently developed so that they can be counted by February 6. If they are not showing then, they must have additional heat and lots of syringing to bloom on time.

A GOOD CEMETERY WREATH.

One of the developments of the Christmas trade has been the demand for a cemetery wreath of quality, and it is here that the florists' supply houses have come to the aid of the retailers. The illustration on this page shows a wreath made entirely of the materials offered by the supply houses, which can be made up well in advance of the holiday, and on which orders may be taken in advance for delivery Christmas morning. This wreath was made on a mossed wire frame of brown magnolia leaves, with pine cones and ruscus. The effect was excellent and the florist who made it has a number of standing orders from his good customers to send one or more of these wreaths to the cemetery each Christmas morning.

THE OHIO BOILER LAW.

A committee was appointed at the regular meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club, held Monday, December 9, to investigate the state boiler laws that have been giving so much trouble to florists in the vicinity of Cleveland.

As the present law reads, all growers are compelled to have licensed firemen in charge of their boilers, if the boiler is of thirty horse-power or over. For the small grower who does his own firing this law looks unfair and steps should be taken by the florists of this state to repeal this law.

We should like The Review to give space in its columns for suggestions from other florists of this state who have had experience under this law.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS FOR THE SOUTH.

We are anxious to put in a better selection of mums for another season and as the greenhouse department is a new branch of our nursery business we do not feel we have experience in selection of varieties and will appreciate a little advice. We want just three practical varieties in the early mums and three of the practical later ones, to give us a longer season. Just the yellow, white and pink colors, or possibly one good mauve variety also. Our pink mum this fall did not satisfy us, being inclined to grow too pointed, or into a topknot, so we do not want to propagate from these again. We want good, large mums, but do not feel like losing another season experimenting with new varieties which come too high.

G. B. C.

In the vicinity of New Orleans, where large quantities of mums now are grown, the following varieties are considered best:

Early—October Frost and Mrs. H. Robinson, white; Chrysolora, yellow; J. K. Shaw, pink.

Late—Timothy Eaton and White Bonnaillon, white; Dr. Enguehard, pink; Golden Wedding and Major Bonnaillon, yellow.

TOO MUCH SHADE.

I have had my troubles with mums this season. They grew spindly and the blooms did not get large. I topped them about May 5 and I left a pretty heavy shade on the glass until the latter part of September. What I want to know is: If cuttings are potted in the latter part of March, can they be topped and the tops used for cuttings again? Will they produce good flowers? Has my trouble been in shading them too much or topping them too late? If I put stock plants in flats and put them in a dark cellar, covering them with sawdust and taking them out about the latter part of January, will they produce good cuttings?

E. H. M.

The trouble came from shading the houses all summer. The chrysanthemum needs all the light possible during its growing season, so it can ripen its growth. The topping, while perhaps not advisable, would not seriously affect the crop unless the plants were topped back into the old wood, when they might not break out well. The cuttings taken from the tops will produce flowers good enough for most ordinary purposes. It is not to be expected that stock plants put in a dark cellar are going to produce satisfactory stock next spring. Keep the stock plants cold and dry, but they must have good light. If you cannot do this, you will find it more profitable to use the space for something else and buy your plants next spring from some of the dealers who grow stock specially for that purpose.

A BIG SHOW PLANT.

The accompanying illustration shows what many consider to be the largest chrysanthemum plant ever flowered in the west. It was started by the Park Floral Co., in preparation for the show which was planned for Denver last November. When circumstances made it desirable to postpone the exhibition to another season this plant was finished and used for advertising purposes. It became so large that to get it into the store it was necessary to remove one of the big plates of glass and take it in through the window. The variety is Georgiana Pitcher and the plant, in a 20-inch tub, carried 815 buds. It was photographed ten days before the subject was at its best. J. A. Sked is the grower for the Park Floral Co., but this plant was in the special charge of Wm. E. Keith, a former Bostonian, who is seen in the picture.

THE BEST NEW WHITE MUMS.

The sensation of the chrysanthemum season, in almost every section of the country, was the variety Wm. Turner, an excellent bloom of which is shown in the accompanying illustration. Wm. Turner is a Wells-Pockett variety and was sent out two years ago, but it was not until this season that distribution was wide enough to permit of its merits being fully known. Wm. Turner hopelessly outclasses Merza, a variety that stood first for many years in its color. Mrs. David Syme, although it is good, does not touch Wm. Turner as a show flower. It is a little inclined to be soft and this year suffered considerably with the warm weather. Turner, on the other hand, kept in perfect condition.

Another white that will give Turner a hard rub next year is Mrs. Gilbert Drabble. This variety is somewhat looser in petalage than Turner, but makes even a larger bloom; in fact, at several of the exhibitions this year it was the largest flower in the show. I look to see some wonderful blooms of Drabble shown next year.

C. H. Totty.

Mr. Totty speaks of the Turner variety as it appeared on the exhibition tables, but readers of The Review are chiefly interested in its commercial possibilities. So here is a clipping from an English paper whose readers are market growers: "During the last three seasons the variety Wm. Turner has been shown to perfection in the exhibition stands, and it has proved itself one of the finest whites for this purpose. Apart from this quality, it is perhaps the most useful white yet introduced for market work. If grown six on a plant, first-class flowers, almost exhibition quality, can be obtained; 6-inch globes of white can be obtained if disbudded to ten per plant; 5-inch flowers if at the rate of twenty on the plant, while for spray work it excels all others for from the middle of November to the end of that month. All growers should make a note of this."

SCALE ON LAURELS AND PALMS.

Will you kindly inform me what is the best remedy for scale on laurel trees outside? There is the same kind of scale on the kentias in the greenhouse, where it would be possible to fumigate. Many of the palms turn yellow on the older leaves. I believe the air in the greenhouse is too close and dry, and whitewash is not a good shade for palms. How often should I spray in hot days? Would it be helpful to wet the steam pipes when they are hot, in order to get damp air? H. M.

Hydrocyanic acid gas is the most certain remedy for all members of the scale family where it can be safely applied. It is, however, decidedly risky to use it among palms. The best remedy is to spray with one of the oil or soap sprays. You will find Aphine one of the best for this purpose and it will not injure the foliage in any way. There are several similar insecticides which are used for destroying scale. As the pests are largely on the under sides of the leaves, it is necessary to use a fine, misty spray nozzle and thoroughly dampen both sides of the leaves. Several applications may be necessary where the scale has secured a firm hold. Once they are clean, give a spraying at regular intervals to keep it in check.

Palms prefer a moist atmosphere, although they will sometimes remain in good health under dry conditions. Wetting the steam pipes to create vapor is not to be recommended, but the floors, the space below the pipes and the surfaces of beds or benches should be kept moist. In hot weather the plants should have two syringings overhead daily, and unless the weather is dark and cold one syringing daily can be given even in winter.

For scale on outside trees and shrubs, use some such remedy as Scalecide, Scaline, or one of the other soluble oils used for this purpose. From November until the end of March is a good time to do any of this spraying, always selecting a clear, sunny day. C. W.

A VISIT TO KOKOMO, IND.

On invitation from the growers of Kokomo, the State Florists' Association of Indiana held its December meeting in that city. At the Francis hotel several automobiles were in waiting and a tour of the greenhouses was at once begun.

The first stop was at the Lincoln Coles plant. Mr. Coles is one of the younger generation of growers, a son of W. W. Coles. He grew Beauties from the beginning, and with splendid success. Last summer, however, he concluded that Beauties were not the right crop for the grower who looks after his place single-handed, and so he planted his entire space this year in carnations. He is proving his versatility by showing easily the best carnations in Kokomo. Mr. Coles thinks well of Washington as a deep pink, and Gloriosa on account of its fine pure pink shade. White Wonder easily leads in white.

The next stop was at the W. W. Coles place, only a square away. The plant is modern, both in appointments and in growing methods. Several houses of the Killarneys are giving heavy cuts of high grade stock; some in full crop, others just going off, and still others coming on. Two large houses are given to Beauties, all going well. But the nicest bench of roses on the place is one of My Maryland, a veritable thicket of growth and laden with buds galore. The carnation range looks good, but a few weak spots bring the average a little below what we saw at the range of the younger Coles. Mr. Coles has installed solid beds in one 300-foot house of carnations and says there will be no more raised benches built in his place.

At Fred Kelly's there is the usual varied assortment of bedding stock needed in cemetery work. A fine bed of early sweet peas took the visitors' eyes. Violets are also given considerable space, the singles being grown exclusively. A batch of Dr. Enguehard mums showed the finest color we have seen in that variety in several years.

From here the autos took us to the establishment owned by Thomas Knipe. Mr. Knipe has a reputation for growing Richmond roses. His Richmond house, however, happened to be just a little off crop. A bench of late mums looked like good money, among others a fine batch of old Yanoma. Grown as it is here, this variety would prove invaluable to any grower.

Next we visited W. A. Bitler's place, situated on one of the fashionable streets of the city. A high-class retail business is conducted and a great deal more stock is handled than can be grown on the place.

After having visited every establishment in the city, the crowd, which had grown to some thirty members, was taken back to the Francis hotel, where dinner was served, after which President Gause called the meeting to order. Among those present were:

E. G. Hill, G. R. Gause and J. A. Evans, Richmond; J. S. Stuart and J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; R. A. McKeand, Marion; W. J. Vesey, Jr., Ft. Wayne; H. A. Maximer, Alexandria; Harry White, North Manchester; W. G. Miller, Peru; M. C. Smith, Marion; H. O. Michael, Frankfort; A. F. J. Baur, Len Elder, Morris Marer, J. S. Simonds, H. Junge, A. Pettit, H. Schilling, Robert Glaubke, Henry Hack, O. E. Steinkamp and Al. Kempe, Indianapolis. A. F. J. B.

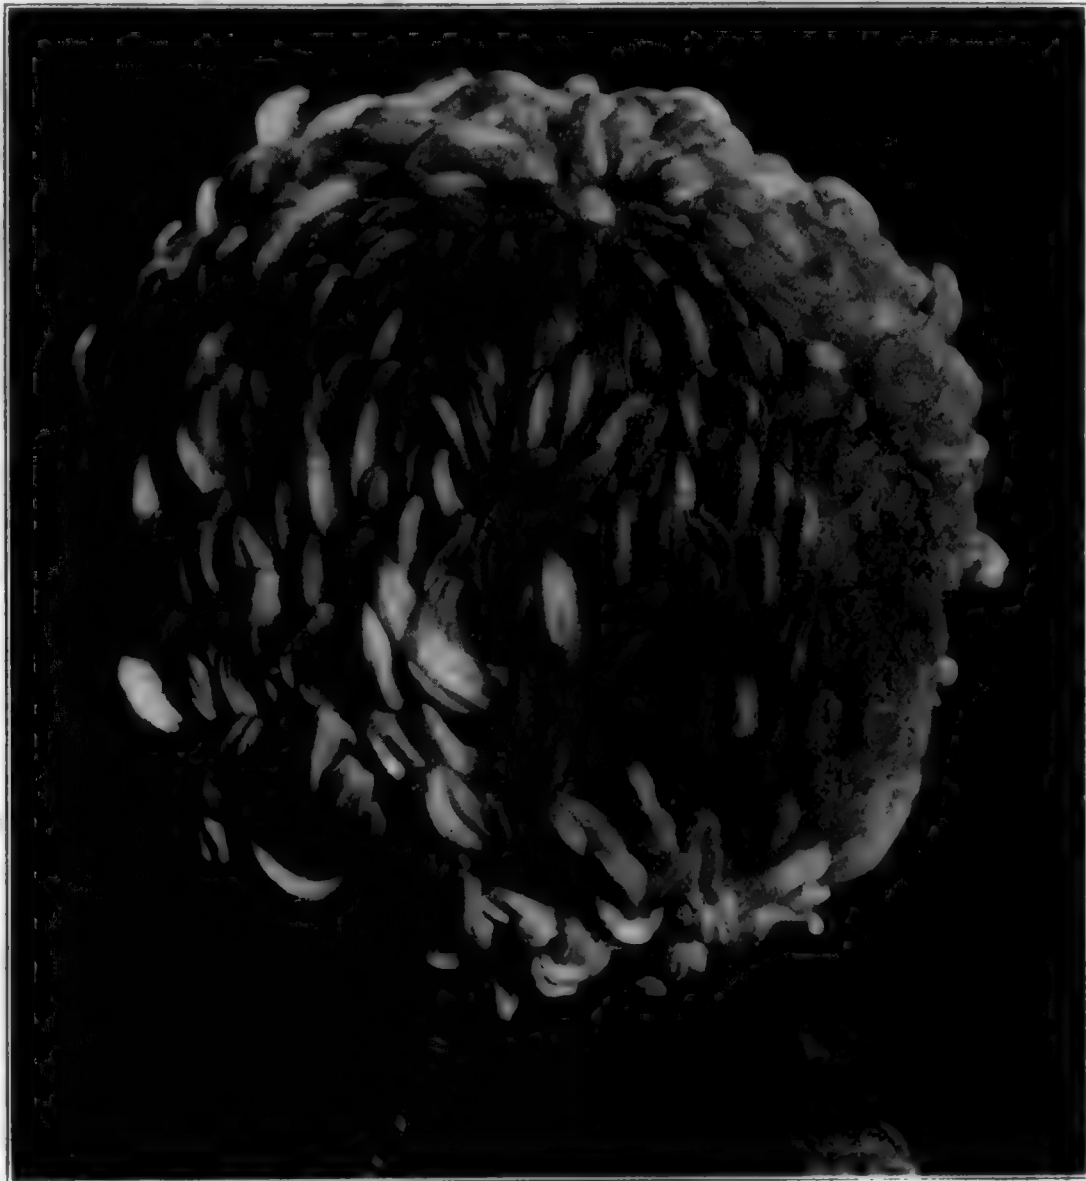

SPIRÆA GLADSTONE IN POTS.

Will you kindly tell me how to treat Spiræa Gladstone after the plants have been potted? C. A.

After being potted, spiræas should be placed in a cool house and thoroughly watered. Here they should remain until they are to be started into growth. A resting period of some length and a gradual start are desirable, but, if some early blooms are wanted, a part of the plants may be given heat after they have been in the pots a week, and the others may be started as needed to secure a succession.

After growth has been started, the temperature may run anywhere from 55 to 65 degrees and even higher, according to the extent of forcing, but should not vary much for a given lot of plants. T.

BOSTON'S BIGGEST DECORATION.

The floral decorations at the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, December 4, briefly referred to in The Review of December 5, were the most sumptuous ever seen in Boston. James Farquhar, who carried out this big undertaking, well merited the plaudits he has since received. He has certainly set a new high water mark for floral decorations which will not be easily passed, and has proved himself an artist of the front rank. The foyer above the great ballroom was transformed into a beautiful Italian garden. In the elliptical alcoves Italian seats were placed. Encircling the terrace were a dozen tall white bases on which rested statues of the gods and goddesses of ancient Rome. The terrace was hung with moss baskets filled with white Lorraine begonias, and the alcove entrances were massed with Lorraine and Glory of Cincinnati begonias, white and pink cyclamens, bouvardias and other flowering plants. In a charmingly constructed grotto was an electric fountain. Goldfish disported themselves in the waters. At the base the Godfrey calla, saracenias and similar plants were growing.

At the bottom of the foyer steps, where received the young lady for whom the decorations were given, catleyas, oncidiums, phalenopsis and other orchids were freely used. The beautiful pure white Buddleia Asiatica in large pots was used with great effect near both flights of steps and attracted notice from everyone. B. officinalis also was used, as were ericas, Trumpet Major narcissi, Primula malacoides, palms, ferns and other decorative plants in thousands. Big cedars and arbor-vitae partially hid the ballroom walls, and of cut flowers many thousands of the highest grade Beauties and other roses, carnations, sweet peas, chrysanthemums and longiflorum lilies were used. Many truck loads of southern smilax, Euonymus vegetus and kalmia were used. The whole scheme was unique in the annals of Boston floral decorations.

THE BIGGEST FLORIST'S WAY.

The following letter on the business stationery of a large New York department store was printed in imitation of typewriting, indicating that it must have been sent out in considerable numbers, probably to undertakers. It appears to be the limit as a bid for business—the agent encouraged to ask $10 for a design for which the florist receives $3.75:

"As there is a general demand in connection with your line for floral work in different designs, and as we are the largest retailers of flowers in the country, catering to more people than any ten florists at the present time, we can place you in a position where you can be of financial service to yourself as well as ourselves, pertaining to orders, giving you an ample remuneration, in the way of a percentage of 25% plus any premium you desire to make above our regular selling price.

"For illustration:

"You receive an order amounting to ten dollars ($10.00); you really were selling a five dollar ($5.00) design.

Your remuneration would be 20% of $5.00 = $1.25

$10.00 minus $5.00 = premium 5.00

Your earning $6.25

CARDS ON DESIGNS.

Should the cards be removed from funeral offerings immediately upon their delivery at the home of the deceased? Would it not be better taste to remove them just before leaving for the cemetery? What is the customary practice in the cities? R. E. M.

Cards should be removed from funeral offerings immediately upon their arrival at the home of the deceased. This is the proper way of handling this matter. Of course there are occasions when this is not done, owing to a notion of relatives or friends.

In the event of the death of a well known person, where the funeral flowers number dozens of pieces, the florist who has been favored with the family order often is requested to take care of all the pieces as they arrive. The cards are removed at once and each card should have noted upon it the nature of the offering; that is, "spray of roses," "wreath containing orchids," "cross," etc. The cards are then turned over to some relative or friend and laid away until letters of thanks can be mailed.

One reason for removing cards at once is that they will not become lost. Often they are insecurely fastened and in the handling of the pieces are lost. Then, again, if all the cards were left on the pieces until just before leaving for the cemetery some people would stop to read every card out of mere curiosity. H. S.

AN OSHKOSH DECORATION.

Oshkosh, in Wisconsin, is a city of close to 40,000 inhabitants and the prosperity and culture of its people make it an excellent town for the flower business. The accompanying illustration shows a church decoration by Fugleberg & Flister. As will be seen, the principal materials were wild smilax and chrysanthemums. The ribbon with which the mums were tied at the ends of the pews was an important feature.

Middletown, Conn.—It is said that Charles J. Kieft, the Pike street florist, and proprietor of the Cottage Gardens, cut several berry-laden branches from raspberry bushes as late as October 22. This was part of the season's second crop. The berries were ripe and were said to taste as well as those picked some months previously.

Batavia, Ill. — Andrew Anderson, whose greenhouses are opposite the entrance to West Batavia cemetery, has completed the erection of a new section, 75x100, with a two-story office and show room. Part of the second floor will be occupied by a design department. Mr. Anderson's houses now cover practically the entire block at Morton street and South Batavia avenue.

Sweet Peas

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

[An extract from a bulletin issued by the Cornell Experiment Station, at Ithaca, N. Y., where the trial grounds of the American Sweet Pea Society are located.]

Winter-flowering sweet peas grow six to ten or more feet high, and if they are to attain their full development a house with this amount of head room is required. They also need all the light they can get, as the lighter the house, the more blooms there will be. Low or dark houses are not practicable.

Sweet peas may be grown on benches, but solid beds are better, since the plants require a deep, moist, cool soil. The roots should be given an opportunity to go down, by properly preparing the soil two or three feet in depth. With this depth of prepared soil it is imperative that the beds have good drainage, for oversaturation is detrimental to the young plants and any tendency to keep them in this state brings on sourness, which is fatal to sweet peas. Having the beds raised at least one foot above the walks will assist in keeping the soil uniformly sweet.

Preparing the Beds.

When planning to grow sweet peas under glass in solid beds, the house should be cleared as early as possible. Trench the soil two feet deep. If the beds have been manured annually, the bottom soil may be brought to the surface. In new houses, in case the beds are to be raised a foot, trench the soil eighteen to twenty-four inches deep if it is a good loam; if not, remove the soil and fill the beds with good soil. This gives an additional foot of loosened soil when the bed is full, but it is needed for additional drainage. In turning this original soil in a new bed, apply a heavy coat of good, decomposed cow manure in the trench. Then spread on top a 3-inch coat of manure and fill in with the prepared soil. In the old beds, put a 3-inch layer of manure in the bottom of the trench and another about a foot below the top. The soil should remain thus until about the time for sowing; if a month or more intervenes, it is much better. At this time fork over the top layer one foot deep, which mixes the upper layer of manure with the surface soil.

While good crops of sweet peas may be grown on benches, yet they require more care than when in beds. The sweet pea is frequently grown as a crop to succeed chrysanthemums, particularly by those florists who do not devote a great amount of space to pot plants. In order to have flowers for Christmas, the early chrysanthemums should be cleared from the house by October 20 and the space filled with good sweet pea plants transplanted from pots.

The Seed.

Only good, strong-germinating seed should be used, and the best for the purpose is the outdoor-grown stock of this type. If the grower raises his own seed for the earliest planting, that from outdoor fall-sown plants is preferable; otherwise it will always pay to purchase stock from the specialists who produce seed under California conditions. Seed procured near the end of the season from exhausted greenhouse-grown plants often germinates poorly or produces weak plants. Sometimes, even though the seedlings start off fairly well, they later exhibit constitutional weakness.

If the steam pipes are on the side walls, plant the first row of seeds five feet from them. If the rows run east and west, plant the others five feet apart; if the rows run north and south, space them three feet apart. Make the drills one or one and a half inch deep, and drop the seeds one to one and a half inch apart. Cover the depth of the drill, and keep the surface level.

Sowing.

The winter-flowering varieties may be sown in the beds or benches where they are to stand, or they may be sown in pots. The former method gives the better results. A day or two before planting, the beds should be thoroughly saturated with water; William Sim, the most extensive grower, advises a strong dose of liquid manure instead. As soon as the top has dried off so as to be in a good, friable condition, plant the seed. One large grower sows the seed in flats or benches, in sand, transplanting the seedlings as soon as the upper side root is one-half inch long. Two plants are placed in each 2½-inch pot. These are planted, four pots to one foot of row, in the greenhouse. The varieties with white seeds are best sown in sand; or, as Mr. Zvolanek advises, soak the seeds for ten hours in water, scatter in flats, and allow to remain for two days or until the seeds begin to swell. The seeds may then be sown in moderately dry soil in the same way as other varieties. The white-seeded varieties, more than any others, require careful attention in the watering.

Watering.

If the soil has been saturated before planting, no more water should be applied for perhaps a week, or only when the soil is no longer moist three inches below the surface. When a thorough watering is not applied first, and the seed is sown and watered in, as a rule not enough water is given to saturate the soil deeply. The result is that the plant confines its root area to this shallow moist layer and does not root deeply. It therefore suffers from extremes, and any lack of moisture is followed by a check from which it never recovers. On the other hand, if the preparatory watering is given and water withheld until there is need of it, the roots strike downward into moist and cooler soil, Sowing.

The winter-flowering varieties may be sown in the beds or benches where they are to stand, or they may be sown in pots. The former method gives the better results. A day or two before planting, the beds should be thoroughly saturated with water; William Sim, the most extensive grower, advises a strong dose of liquid manure instead. As soon as the top has dried off so as to be in a good, friable condition, plant the seed. One large grower sows the seed in flats or benches, in sand, transplanting the seedlings as soon as the upper side root is one-half inch long. Two plants are placed in each 2½-inch pot. These are planted, four pots to one foot of row, in the greenhouse. The varieties with white seeds are best sown in sand; or, as Mr. Zvolanek advises, soak the seeds for ten hours in water, scatter in flats, and allow to remain for two days or until the seeds begin to swell. The seeds may then be sown in moderately dry soil in the same way as other varieties. The white-seeded varieties, more than any others, require careful attention in the watering.

Watering.

If the soil has been saturated before planting, no more water should be ap plied for perhaps a week, or only when the soil is no longer moist three inches below the surface. When a thorough watering is not applied first, and the seed is sown and watered in, as a rule not enough water is given to saturate the soil deeply. The result is that the plant confines its root area to this shallow moist layer and does not root deeply. It therefore suffers from extremes, and any lack of moisture is followed by a check from which it never recovers. On the other hand, if the preparatory watering is given and water withheld until there is need of it, the roots strike downward into moist and cooler soil.

where they overcome, as far as possible, the effects of the hot days. The sweet pea must be kept growing steadily from the day the seed is sown. When water is needed, do not apply near the plants, but between the rows, where it should be given liberally. This treatment is especially important with the early plantings. One reason why water should not be applied too near the plants is that they are especially subject to damping off. This trouble becomes more prevalent in October and November, when there are more cloudy days, cool nights, and like conditions. Because of this, no soil should be heaped around the stem.

Time to Sow.

When a good crop of sweet peas is desired for Christmas, the seed should be sown August 20. When sown September 1 the plants will flower in January; when sown September 15 the main crop will be in February, and when sown in October the crop will be ready in March. November sowings flower in the latter part of March; December sowings in April; January sowings in April and May; February sowings from May 1 on, and a March sowing in May or June. This gives the time when a reasonable crop can be expected, although flowers will be cut, especially with certain varieties, in a shorter interval than that given.

Some of the varieties in the tests made here, at the Cornell Experiment Station, sown October 20 and benched December 20, gave flowers during the last week in January, but not freely until about March. Some sown November 20 and benched December 20 began flowering in February and gave an abundance in March. Seed sown in beds September 24 this year gave flowers on Thanksgiving day, although during the whole month of November there was not one clear day and there were only two partly clear days.

Supports.

As soon as the peas are up, a support must be furnished. This may consist of string, wire and string, or wire netting. When string is used it is stretched lengthwise on each side of the row and fastened to stakes on the purlin posts. The wire-and-string support consists of wires stretched over the row, one near the ground and another eight to ten feet above it; between these, string is stretched lengthwise every ten inches, and perpendicular strings connect the top and bottom wires.

Wire netting is condemned by commercial growers. They maintain that the vines do not cling to it, so that just as much tying is needed; and, besides, more crooked stems occur than when the vines are trained on string. At this station, however, all the methods have been tried and the wire netting has been found preferable.

Temperature.

Keep the temperature in the early stage as low as possible, giving full ventilation, day and night, as late as possible without freezing. The cooler culent growth that wilts when the sun comes out. Plenty of ventilation should be provided at every opportunity, as this, with careful regulation of temperature, causes a firm growth.

Insects.

Sweet peas are especially subject to attack by the red spider, but unless the plants are too near heated pipes such attacks do not often occur except in the fall months. The careful use of water after the plants have attained a height of a few inches will eradicate this pest.

The common enemy of greenhouse plants, the green fly, attacks sweet peas from the time they appear above ground. These insects can soon destroy the young plants, as well as weaken the plants at any stage. Fumigation should be attended to carefully, the grower choosing cool nights or performing the work early in the morning, the chief object being to clear the plants thoroughly by regular and persistent fumigation so that they will not need fumigating when in bloom, as the odor is objectionable and injures the sale of the flowers. Tobacco also bleaches the flowers of some varieties. In the spring, when spraying plants with nicotine for green fly or for thrips, use this insecticide carefully, as sweet peas are subject to injury from it. A nicotine preparation containing forty per cent of the constituent nicotine, used at the rate of two teaspoonfuls to each gallon of water, will kill the thrips that are hit by the spray.

Climbing cutworms and snails, if present in greenhouses, will destroy sweet peas. The former insects, which attack also carnations, violets and chrysanthemums under glass, are combated by using compost that has not been covered by a rank growth of weeds and grass. When their work is noticed a search should be made for the worms under any mulch or lumps of earth on the bench, where they are coiled up during the day. They may also be picked from the plants at night while feeding. The use of poisoned baits is also recommended; among the best of these is the bran-arsenic mash, made by mixing one part white arsenic, one part sugar and six parts bran, with sufficient water to form a mash. This may be placed among the plants. Snails can be controlled by the application of lime and soot to the surface of the beds or benches.

the plants can be kept while growing, the stronger and healthier they will be. In this way the natural outdoor spring conditions are approximated.

When the flower buds can be felt in the tips of the growing stems, the temperature should be raised 1 degree a night until 50 degrees is attained, which is the proper temperature during December, January and February. From about the end of February on, a night temperature of 48 degrees is better. On bright days a rise of 10 degrees or even 15 degrees may be given. On cloudy days 55 degrees is high enough, for higher temperatures promote soft, sucyoung plants. Sometimes plants are seen with white-streaked or yellow-streaked foliage. From experience at this station it appears that such a condition may follow the use of any soil that is not sweet. An instance occurred when a mold growing over the ashes of a bench entered the bottom of some pots of peas, causing the soil to become stale and musty. All the plants where this occurred showed streaked foliage later. The disease is undoubtedly physiological in its nature and is thought by practical growers to occur sometimes from the use of too much or too fresh manure on young plants.

The dropping of flower buds is often a cause of complaint from growers. The first flower buds frequently do not set on vigorous, thrifty plants. Usually this condition soon disappears, but sometimes it is necessary to keep the plants a little dry and to abstain from the use of fertilizers until the plants are blooming freely. The loss of the buds will follow a sudden fall in the temperature or will result from over-watering. Another cause is growing the plants in too cool an atmosphere. Plants that are grown in the proper temperature, with careful attention to watering, ventilation and feeding, do not fail to give an abundance of flowers.

Mildew sometimes attacks sweet peas during the autumn, unless the temperature and ventilation receive attention. It has been found at this station that mildew yields readily to applications of sulphur to the pipes, and to the use of flour of sulphur dusted on the infected leaves. As soon as the fires are started in the fall, some sulphur should be applied to the pipes as a preventive. This should be used judiciously, however, for an interesting case came under observation at this station during the last winter, of the danger of using sulphur too strong. An application had been made, and on a cold night the pipe covered with the sulphur was turned on, the result being that every flower which was well advanced or open was scorched so that most of the flowers had to be thrown away. No injury to the plants occurred.

FLORICULTURE AT SAN DIEGO.

The San Diego exposition in 1915 promises to have no greater or more interesting exhibit to the visitor than the possibilities of all-the-year-around floriculture. Paul G. Thiene is superintendent of nurseries and planting. Thiene was born in Thuringen, Germany, served a three years' apprenticeship in that country and came to the United States in 1903.

The exposition site consists of 615 acres in the center of San Diego's 1,400-acre park, itself in the heart of the city. All trees, shrubs and many of the flowers planted by the exposition forces will remain as permanent park improvements.

The site chosen gives the landscape architect an enormous range for play of imagination. Plateau, slope, canyon, valleys and lakes offer many sorts of soils, altitudes and exposures. Dense growths of flowering and evergreen shrubs will mingle with the gray-green of the native wild sage, buckwheat and mesquite on the hillsides, forming a background for glowing masses of flowers.

The majority of trees and plants being used on the grounds are grown in the exposition's own nurseries, covering more than 100 acres. The lath houses alone, equipped with the most improved overhead irrigation system, cover more than four acres of ground. Botanical gardens and the biggest lath house ever erected will be a part of the exposition exhibits. The illustration shows the transplanting of a palm sixty-five feet high at the west entrance to the exposition grounds.

FAR NORTHWEST.

Can you imagine a more delightful situation than that shown in the accompanying illustration? It is the establishment of R. L. Warson, of Harper, Wash. The location is eleven miles from Seattle and the water shown in the picture is a branch of Admiralty Inlet, an arm extending inland from Puget Sound, the same water on which Seattle is located.

Mr. Warson's establishment covers 108x192 feet. The houses run north and south. Hot water is used for heating. The stack showing in the picture is forty feet high, which gives one an idea of the size of the conifers in the background. The crops grown are principally tomatoes alternating with chrysanthemums, all finding their way to the Seattle market.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting December 9 was a banner night for the New York Florists' Club. The attendance was nearly 200 and there were felicitations and comradeship in abundance until the small hours. After the first ballot for president Wm. Duckham withdrew his name, the vote then standing: W. Duckham, 37; H. A. Bunyard, 44; W. H. Siebrecht, 58. A majority being necessary, another ballot resulted as follows: Bunyard, 57; Siebrecht, 61. Mr. Bunyard, in a generous and eloquent address, moved the vote unanimous, to which Mr. Siebrecht gracefully and feelingly responded, also assuring his best efforts for the club's welfare in 1913.

The others elected, and the records, were:

For vice-president—John Donaldson, 76; I. S. Hendrickson, 42; J. H. Fieser, 19.

For secretary—John Young, 132.

For treasurer—W. C. Rickards, 76; P. F. Kessler, 61.

Trustees, to serve two years—C. B. Weathered, 85; W. F. Sheridan, 83; John Miesem, 72, Traendly, Turner, Boddington, Pierson, Froment, Hornecker and Langjahr also receiving a scattering vote.

The exhibits were superb. They included: Northport carnations, accompanied by the silver cups won at Cleveland, by Jas. D. Cockcroft; Milady rose in splendid condition, by A. N. Pierson; Salmon Beauty carnation, by Traendly & Schenck; pink poinsettias, by Julius Roehrs Co.; Mrs. Shawyer rose, by Chas. H. Totty; a vase of pink roses, by Mr. Brozat. The two latter were subjected to the criticism of the award committee for decision as to their distinctness or similarity. The unanimous verdict was that the two roses are distinct varieties.

J. B. Nugent's report as to the delivery of flowers on the steamships indicates that if each florist, when sending boxes aboard, will send proper receipts they will hereafter be officially signed and so an end put to the widespread dissatisfaction of the past.

C. B. Weathered reported a liberal response to the request of the entertainment committee for subscriptions and requested all the club members to do their share in behalf of the generous welcome to our guests at the National Flower Show.

Abraham Lincoln Miller, the award chairman, announced that a record of 91 points had been accorded Carnation Matchless, of the Cottage Gardens Co., and 87 points to Scott Bros., for Wm. Eccles, entitling each to the club's certificate of merit.

The following were elected to membership: Walter F. Klein, Linnaeus Allen, Christian Madsen, Knud Christiansen, J. B. Jackson, Waldron M. Bishop, S. P. Darnison, W. W. Rich, U. Cutler Ryerson, J. P. Anderson, Claude Tyler and Alfred T. Bunyard. Addresses and pledges of loyalty were made by Messrs. Bunyard, Bishop, Jackson, Vermeulin, Junge, Slinn, Siebrecht, Hammerstraw and Seville.

The following were proposed for membership: A. N. Kidney, Charles Beekman, Percy Richter, Jos. McMullen, Neil Roselle, Robert T. Brown, Louis Pathe, Wm. McCollom, Herbert A. Spavens, Max Schling, Charles H. Atkins, Richard E. Logan, John Condon, N. E. Bobbink, George Bergevin, David Bergevin, Emerson McFadden, H. C. Strobel and John Canning.

The following ladies were appointed a committee of the National Society: Mesdames and Misses Traendly, O'Mara, Sheridan, Totty, Scott, Weathered, Miller, Nugent, Manda, Donaldson, Roehrs, Bunyard, Schenck, Pepper, Henshaw, Marshall and Wilson.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week's business was good for the first day or so. Then the supply, owing to the pleasant weather, grew somewhat stronger, and the demand did not increase proportionately. The result was a perceptible shading of prices in most lines. Carnations alone held up well in price and this was because of the limited offerings. The receipts of carnations are, however, mostly of a high quality and the good ones merit their price. The strongest demand is for the colored varieties, but practically all are sold out easily. Roses are splendid. The buds are generally well formed and large, and the same is true of the foliage, with a few exceptions. In Beauties the supply and demand are about equal. The good ones sell without much trouble, while those of poorer quality do not move quite so readily. The supply of the other varieties is adequate.

Some excellent lilies are coming into the market. The chrysanthemums consist mostly of Chadwick, Jones and Nonin. The supply of violets is large and they are meeting with a good call, especially the singles. Sweet peas clean up as fast as they arrive.

The wholesalers who handle Christmas decorative material are kept exceedingly busy with this line these days. The call for every article is good. The arrivals of holly, boxwood and wild smilax are of a high quality.

Club Banquet.

The banquet at the Burnet House proved a most successful affair, both in attendance and from an artistic point of view. The talk by Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., was highly instructive and entertaining. Naturally, his first words were for the S. A. F., and, judging from what he said, he is, as every florist should be, for the S. A. F. first, last and all the time. Then, with the aid of the many pictures which were shown on a screen, he took us through the international flower show in London, to several points of interest in England, to the Dutch bulb fields, and finally to his own home. The last pictures showed the magnificence of the dahlias on his place.

The Misses McNally and Weber entertained with songs; so, also, did Frank Volz. Miss Ida Peterson accompanied Mr. Volz on the piano. Chas. H. Hoffmeister, introduced by President Gus Adrian, of the local society, acted as toastmaster.

The affair speaks well for the efforts of the committee, which consisted of A. C. Heckman, Jr., Ray Murphy and Chas. H. Hoffmeister. The writer wishes here to state that the effort of his confreres on the committee, the first two named, were herculean, and the success of the affair is a worthy reward for their labors. Mrs. Vincent is accompanying her husband on the trip.

Various Notes.

Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., continue to send their excellent roses to L. H. Kyrk. The stock is of uniformly good quality.

William Murphy's force is kept busy these days hustling out Christmas decorative material.

C. E. Critchell is in receipt of a carload of southern smilax and has another on the way. He expects to sell both without any trouble.

L. F. Benson, while in town last week, placed heavy orders for supplies for his new store and for Christmas flowers.

E. G. Gillett is having quite a large run on boxwood and Christmas goods.

Peter Weiland is now shipping valley from his own plant at New Castle. This gives him almost a complete line of flowers at his store.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson entertained Mr. and Mrs. Vincent on Tuesday, December 10.

Among those from out of town who were in the city last week were: Frank Farney, of M. Price & Co.; John A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind.; and Gustav Reiniger, of Dayton, O. C. H. H.

FUNERAL WORK IN TEXAS.

Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, Texas, sent the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was reproduced, with the statement that it is the largest display of funeral flowers ever seen in the state of Texas. Not only was the number of designs exceptional, but nearly all were large, there being several the cost of which exceeded $100 each. Mr. Kerr estimates that the total value of the designs shown in the picture was $2,500, the work being well distributed among the Houston florists.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The week ending December 7 was unusually busy and seemed like old times. Most of the uptown houses had all they possibly could handle and the wholesalers did a land-office business. The supply of red roses and orchids, however, exceeded the demand and, although the latter sold in dozen lots at $6, they could be bought in larger quantities at from $25 to $40 per hundred. Carnations are coming in good quantities, although there are not enough to supply the demand. This applies to all varieties and colors, but the call is greatest for Enchantress. The shortage of single violets has been complained of, for never before has the supply been so light at this season of the year. Among the novelties to be seen are lupines and snapdragons. Narcissi also have made their appearance and in many instances are sold at the buyer's price, the most obtained for them being $2.50 per hundred in small lots. Chrysanthemums are about at an end. They do not bring much in the way of price and there are few good ones. White sweet peas are plentiful, but are not selling well. The supply of pink and lavender is not quite so heavy and meets with better results. Some extra fine stevia of the dwarf type is to be had and is bringing from $3 to $4 per hundred sprays. As yet there is little demand for poinsettias, although some good stock is coming in. The asking price is $2 and $3 per dozen. The nearness of Christmas is emphasized by the quantities of potted plants to be seen in the store windows. Lorraine begonias and azaleas sold well last week. Cyclamens are also being shown at $9 to $12 per dozen wholesale.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club Guy Eiker and W. O. D'Alcorn were unanimously elected to membership. W. F. Gude spoke on advertising and gave a number of anecdotes.

Among the notable events of the week was the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club. It was given in the large ballroom of the New Willard hotel. The decorations required two days to complete and were done by J. H. Small & Sons. Among the guests were C. Albert Small, of New York, and John Henry Small, of Washington.

The coming out tea of Miss Wilmer was practically the first debutante event of the season and if it is any criterion the florists of the national capital will have a busy time of it the next few weeks. This affair called for over 300 bouquets, and while some of these were telegraph orders and others shipments from out-of-town florists, the majority of the business fell to the local trade. The floral arrangements were in charge of Gude Bros. Co. C. L. L.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

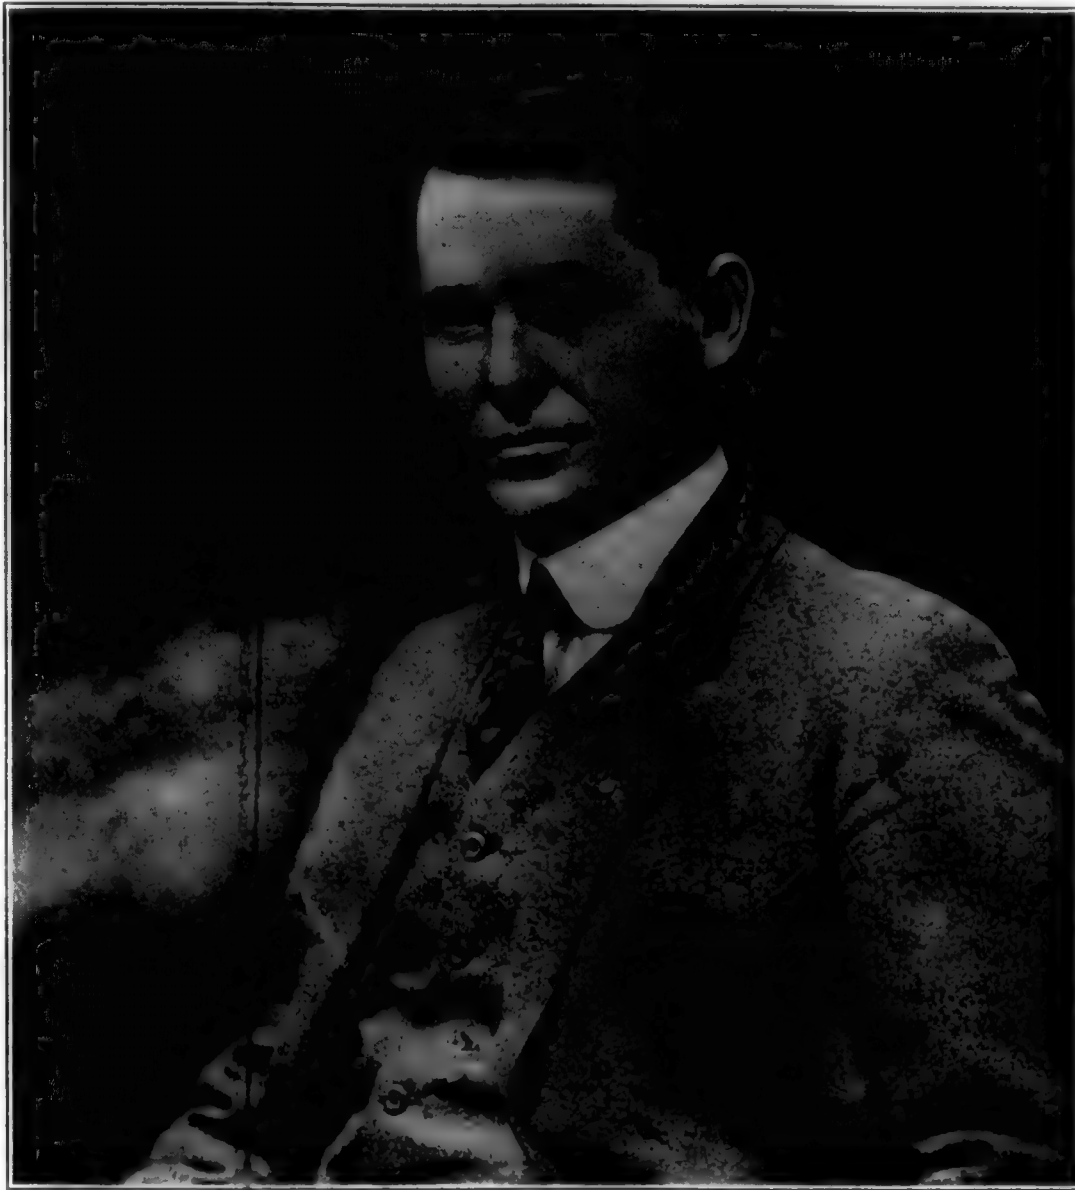

Good business was the rule with all dealers last week, several of them having had their hands full of funeral and decoration work. Regarding the latter, there have not been so many decorations in several years as has been the case so far this fall. The number of functions on the cards is unusually large, and several decorations of considerable importance are promised. Chrysanthemums are practically gone, everybody cleaning up at Thanksgiving. A few of the growers have late crops coming on for Christmas, but the bulk is over. Carnations were short last week, but the closing days witnessed a slight improvement. Roses and violets are in good supply and of good quality.

Various Notes.

Timothy O'Connor was especially busy last week with a number of large wedding and debutante decorations.

Much sympathy is expressed at the misfortune that befell the family of Frederick S. Franco, gardener for the Major Mallory estate, at Newport. December 8, two of Mr. Franco's boys, Frederick J. and Harold, 12 and 8 years of age respectively, went with the son of the owner of the estate to shoot squirrels, the elder Franco boy having the rifle. In some way the rifle was discharged, the ball entering the skull

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB

Guy W. French.

THE president-elect of the Chicago Florists' Club is one of the new school of florists—he has for a number of years had charge of the carnation department at the greenhouses of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., and cares for his stock with his head as well as his hands. He is a thinking grower. Mr. French is a young man, in the prime of life. This will be the first time he has held office in any of the trade societies, although he has been an active worker on committees, and he promises to bring much energy to bear on the task in hand.

of the younger boy, killing him almost instantly. At the funeral the display of floral pieces was one of the largest ever seen in Newport.

Swan Peterson, of East Providence, reports a big Thanksgiving trade.

William E. Chappell had a large proportion of the work for the funeral of John S. Kellogg, state secretary of the Royal Arcanum.

The Everett Forestry Co. is being conducted by Charles J. Everett, according to the statement filed with the city clerk.

B. W. Dulaney was a visitor last week, in the interests of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., of Cincinnati.

Burns & Burke are cutting a fine lot of roses, their Killarneys being especially good.

F. Macrae's Sons, who cut nearly 20,000 mums for the Thanksgiving season, have several hundred fine plants for Christmas blooming.

William Brown, of the Providence Seed Co., was secretary of the annual Rhode Island Poultry Association's show, at Infantry hall, last week.

Joseph Kopelman visited Boston and vicinity, for a few days last week, in search of Christmas novelties.

The J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, is making large daily shipments of roses to the Boston and New York markets.

Edgar Nock, of East Greenwich, recently exhibited, at the store of Johnston Bros., a fine specimen of Pancreatum ovatum, which attracted considerable attention.

Albert Holscher is cutting the first of a fine crop of poinsettias. He has a nice lot of dwarf, stocky plants.

Louis D. Pierce, of Norwood, has been elected president of the Warwick town council.

Charles H. Hunt has just begun to bring in some fine baby primroses, in 4-inch pots, which are eagerly sought. He has a fine house of Harrisii for early cutting.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston &

Jo., has recently purchased a residence on Hope street, and is erecting a new garage.

The King Construction Co. is erecting a new house, 24x150, for Philip Swanson. W. H. M.

OBITUARY.

Francois Gruaz.

Francois Gruaz, one of the most prominent florists and gardeners of New Orleans, died December 1, following an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Gruaz came to this country about thirty years ago, following a thorough schooling in horticulture in France, Germany and his home, Switzerland. Since his arrival in America he has been a citizen of New Orleans. Due to his knowledge of horticulture are a number of the most beautiful gardens in the city, and many of the younger members of the trade have had their training under him.

The deceased was born in Pompigny, Cantivaud, Switzerland, in 1857, and following a short schooling in that country he was entered as an apprentice to a florist. At the age of 15 he left his home and went to France, where he again entered himself as an apprentice to a horticulturist. Five years later, when but a young man, he took up the study of horticulture in the gardens of Germany, where he spent five more years.

He was joined by his family from Switzerland, and all sailed for New Orleans, but due to the boat springing a leak they were forced to put in at New York. There he remained for a space of ten days, and then continued to New Orleans, where he established himself in the florists' business.

In 1898 he married Miss Elizabeth Williamson. He is survived by his wife, who has been estranged for the past four years, and Miss Justine Gruaz, his sister, and three nieces. The funeral services took place from the family residence December 2 and were largely attended.

Maurice Doyle.

After a month's illness, Maurice Doyle, aged 36, a florist of Springfield, O., died of pneumonia November 30, at the residence of his uncle, John Doyle, corner Home road and North Limestone street. The funeral was held at St. Raphael church and the burial was in Lagonda cemetery.

Anna M. Schultz.

In the death of Mrs. Anna Maria Schultz, December 2, Washington lost one of its oldest florists. Mrs. Schultz was born in Stettin, Germany, seventy-three years ago. With her husband she operated greenhouses on D street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, before that thoroughfare was picked out to become one of the busiest streets of the city. With the opening of the shed on the site of the present Center Market, they obtained a flower stand and, all told, Mrs. Schultz has been a familiar figure in the trade for over half a century. The death of a son, which occurred two weeks ago in Philadelphia, is believed to have hastened her death. She was at the market stand on the previous Saturday, but complained of not feeling well. By the terms of her will, which has been entered for probate, various bequests are made to her children and grandchildren, and after these are made the balance of the estate goes to her son, Frank E. Schultz, who will continue the business.

John Martin.

John Martin, one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of Woonsocket, R. I., died December 4, at his home, 107 Spring street. Though he had been ailing for several years, he was confined to his bed but a few days. He was born in County Leitrim, Ireland, eighty years ago and came to this country when a young man. After a short residence in Nantucket, Mass., he moved to Woonsocket, where he lived the remainder of his life. For more than a quarter of a century he was employed as gardener in charge of the greenhouses owned by the late Edward Harris. Mr. Martin is survived by a son and a daughter.

Patrick McDonnell.

Patrick McDonnell, one of the best known carnation growers in the vicinity of San Francisco, Cal., died at his home in Oakland, Cal., November 30. He had been ill with pneumonia for several weeks, but his demise was unexpected. He was a native of Ireland and was 54 years of age. He came to America when a boy. He was a highly successful grower, and before engaging in this department he had been a landscape gardener for many years. He is survived by a widow and four young children. He was a successful business man and possessed much profitable business property in the neighborhood of his home. He was also a director of the Telegraph Avenue Bank of Oakland. He was buried December 2, in St. Mary's cemetery, and the obsequies were attended by over 100 of the gardening and florists' fraternity.

Mrs. George Bauman.

Mrs. George Bauman, of Columbus, O., died November 25, after a lingering illness with paralysis. She had been in bad health for nearly three years, but her family and friends were in hopes she would recover. She had lived a useful and active life, a woman who numbered every acquaintance as her friend, beloved by a wide circle. The funeral took place on the afternoon of November 27 and was largely attended, but a great many of the florists were unable to be present on account of Thanksgiving being the next day. Mr. Bauman is florist and gardener to Robert Jeffrey, having taken the position shortly before his wife's death, so as to be more at home. He gave up the fern business in the Hocking valley.

Francis Fillmore.

Francis Fillmore, father of F. J. Fillmore, St. Louis, died December 6 at St. Mary's hospital, from the effects of an accident of a week before, when he broke his leg. The funeral took place December 9, interment being at St. Matthew's cemetery. A large circle of florists attended, to express their sympathy for the bereaved family.

Mr. Fillmore was born at Wimbledon, England, May 26, 1825. He left for America April 6, 1870, locating at Topeka, Kan. Six months later his wife and seven children joined him at Lawrence, Kan., where he engaged in vegetable gardening. In 1873 he went to St. Louis, working for landscape gardeners. Later on he entered, with his sons, into vegetable gardening and continued for several years, until his younger son died. He then went to work in Tower Grove park and was there for about eighteen years. He was hale, hearty and his memory clear until he met with the accident, which, coupled with his old age, caused his death. He leaves a son, four daughters, fifteen grandchildren and twenty-one great-grandchildren.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was fair last week, but stock is somewhat scarce. Mums are about gone, the carnation crop is off and there is hardly enough stock to go around. Roses are in fair supply, some first-class stock being shipped in. Beauties are obtainable, but are commanding a good price. Paper Whites and Romans are making their appearance. Orchids, valley and violets are moving nicely.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held in Kokomo, with about thirty members in attendance. Considerable business was transacted. An invitation from E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, to meet there in the near future was accepted. A resolution came before the meeting for the association to hold only four meetings a year, in January, April, July and November. This will be voted on at the next meeting. A committee composed of Albert Marshall, Herman Junge and Adolph Baur was appointed to audit the books of the secretary and treasurer. Homer Wiegand, L. Elder, H. Schilling and Oliver Steinkamp were named to provide the entertainment for the annual meeting, which is to be held the second Tuesday in January. New members were elected as follows: Robert McKeand, of Marion; W. A. Bitler, of Kokomo; W. J. Vesey, Jr., of Ft. Wayne; John Grande, Jr., Henry Hack, Morris Marer, of Indianapolis; W. D. Leatherman, of Anderson; M. C. Smith, of Marion; and Osa Coryell, of Richmond. W. J. & M. S. Vesey exhibited several vases of My Maryland and Killarney roses and poinsettias, samples of the stock that they are producing.

Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co., and Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade here last week.

Raymond Kester, with the Hill-Heller Co., spent a few days in Chicago last week. The new store is doing an excellent business.

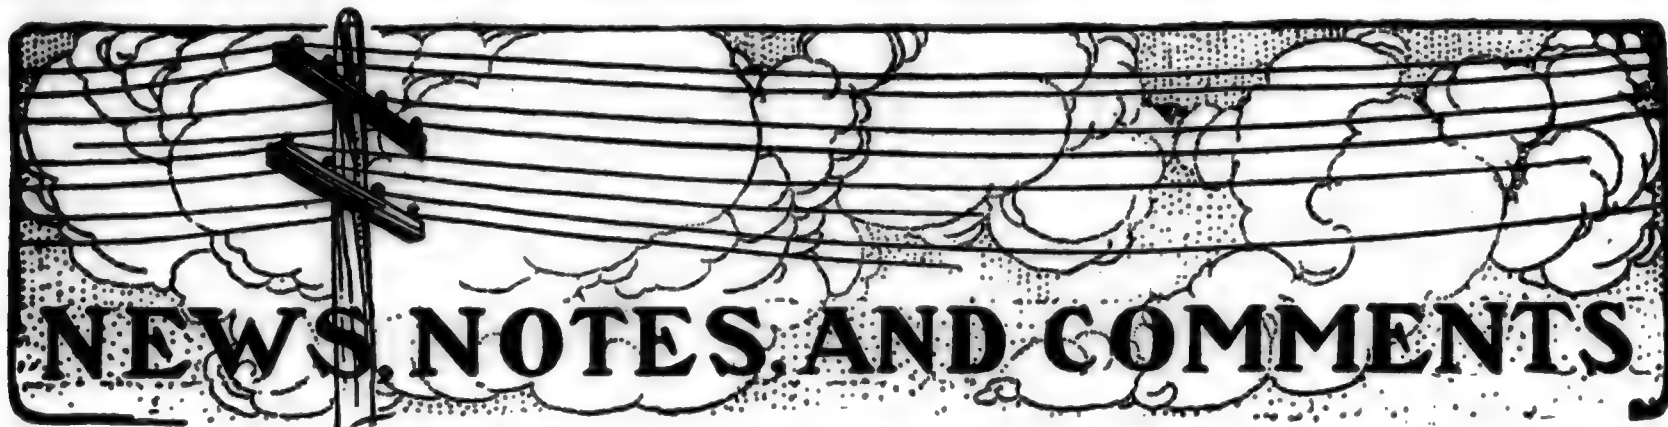

George Wiegand is contemplating a trip to Florida after the first of the year.

The Roepke-Rieman Co. has a fine lot of cyclamens for Christmas.

The Wiegands are all smiles—the street cars are again running on the North Illinois street line, after four months of idleness. The street has been torn up since the first part of September.

Adolph Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, is busy getting out the premium list for the April show. Mr. Baur states that any one desiring space should get busy, as he expected to send it to press about December 20.

Baur & Steinkamp have a new red carnation which they intend to market next year. Mr. Baur thinks this one superior to St. Nicholas. H. L. W.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

Canandaigua, N. Y.—Burrell T. Cappon, the Bristol street florist, has opened a store in the new extension to the Hubbell building, on Chapin street.

Des Moines, Ia.—November 29 the horse used for delivery by the Alpha Floral Co. ran away and seriously injured a deaf man who was crossing the street.

Joplin, Mo.—Frank and Harold Treganza have purchased the stock of the late D. A. Graham from his widow and will run the business under the firm name of Treganza Bros. They are both young men and have had previous experience.

Waukegan, Ill.—Theodore Meyer was one of the jury of representative merchants chosen by the coroner to investigate the fire and explosion at the establishment of the Corn Products Refining Co., in which upward of a dozen men were killed and twenty-four or more were seriously injured.

Centerville, Ind.—E. Y. Teas is said to be the only living charter member of the Indiana Horticultural Society, which was organized in 1860, with an enrollment of twenty-three names. Mr. Teas attended the last annual convention of the society, which was held in Indianapolis, December 3 and 4.

Sandusky, O.—Leo P. Wagner, proprietor of the Central Greenhouses, in this city, has purchased the property of the Clyde Floral Co., including the greenhouses and stores in Clyde and Bellevue. Joseph Wentzel, who for two years has been employed by P. C. Miller, the former owner of the Clyde business, will conduct the business for Mr. Wagner.

Freeport, Ill.—John Bauscher is becoming famous as the world's champion "jiner." A recent issue of a Chicago daily newspaper contained a portrait of Mr. Bauscher, with the statement that he is a member of forty-four lodges and is believed to hold the world's record in that line. The newspaper gives a list of the organizations to which he belongs, beginning, as is proper, with the Society of American Florists.

Marion, O.—F. E. Blake & Son have just completed the remodeling and enlargement of their greenhouses. The range is located on a twenty-acre tract owned by the firm, and consists of thirteen houses, eight of which were erected this year. A concrete cut flower cellar has also been constructed and a new office is about ready for use. The houses are of Moninger construction and are heated by two forty horse-power boilers. The son, Benjamin F. Blake, has charge of the uptown store, in the Foye block on West Center street.

Olean, N. Y.—Dana R. Herron celebrated the completion of his sixteenth year in business here by inviting the public to a chrysanthemum show in his store. Among the attractions was the music of an orchestra.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Chester A. Harris, for the last two years connected with the W. E. Day Co., is now opening a store of his own at 205 East Jefferson street. With his twelve years of experience in the business, he ought to be well equipped for his new venture.

Houston, Tex.—Gus Radetzki and Harvey T. D. Wilson have opened a flower store at the corner of Main street and Walker avenue and will conduct it under the name of the Forestdale Nursery. The building has been secured on a long lease and has been elegantly fitted up for the purpose.

Lynchburg, Va.—H. L. Lauscher has opened a retail stand in Lambert's pharmacy, under the name of the Lynchburg Flower Shop.

Unionville, O.—The address of the Sunshine Flower Gardens now is 47 East One Hundred and Thirty-ninth street, Kinsman Heights, Cleveland, O.

Alliance, O.—While downtown on business recently G. W. Kiser was taken ill on the street and was carried home in the city ambulance. He has recovered.

Defiance, O.—Christ. Winterich entertained a large number of trade visitors from Toledo and other points in the northern part of the state December 7.

Port Allegany, Pa.—Richard Fowler, formerly with W. K. Harris, Philadelphia, now is grower for Mrs. M. E. G. Ventres here, the Port Allegany Greenhouses.

Ottawa, Ill.—Though Mrs. Fred J. King has leased her greenhouses on Ottawa avenue to Lohr Bros., she is conducting the Madison street store in her own name, as formerly.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Johnson & Co., of this city, have leased the greenhouses and ten acres of ground owned by the Queen City Floral Co., at Crookston, and will use them in connection with the local establishment. With these rented houses, Mr. Johnson now has 14,000 square feet of glass.

Zanesville, O.—George A. Bartels says there was an oversupply of chrysanthemums this season, although business has been fair, especially in funeral work. The death of the manager of the local branch of the National Biscuit Co., he adds, called for more flowers than ever before were used at the funeral of a local private individual.

Waterloo, Ia.—Harry Daniel has sold his interest in the Crittenden & Daniel greenhouses to I. O. Kemble, of Marshalltown, Ia. Mr. Kemble is well known in the trade and has greenhouses at Boone and Mason City, as well as at Marshalltown. He will be represented here by C. M. Young, of Marshalltown, who will assist Owen Crittenden in the management of the local establishment.

Butte, Mont.—Victor Siegel, referred to locally as the Luther Burbank of Columbia Gardens, is said to have originated two remarkably fine new carnations. One of them is a sport of Beacon and its color is a deep pink; the other is described as a variegated sport of Gloriosa. Mr. Siegel has also secured twenty-five plants of a promising new pink carnation that was produced at the greenhouses of the Butte Floral Co., at Gregson Springs.

Clyde, O.—Perry C. Miller, who has conducted a successful business under the name Clyde Floral Co., has sold stock and greenhouses to Leo Wagner, of Sandusky, O., who will continue the business under the same name, in connection with his greenhouses at Sandusky.

Eldorado, Pa.—It is reported that a lawsuit brought by Allan S. Myers against the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. to recover $45,000 damages for smoke, soot and grease showered upon the glass of his greenhouses by locomotives for the last six years, has been decided against him, principally because, as Pittsburgh and Harrisburg florists testified, the glass could have been cleaned with soap and water.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THIS Christmas will be even redder than its predecessors.

CARNATIONS are off crop almost everywhere and have been selling exceptionally well since the chrysanthemums took the back track for the season.

FIVE double-page spreads in The Review again this week. These big, impressive ads are, as the saying goes, becoming "deservedly popular."

EARLY Christmas business in the department stores through the country is said to have been disappointing. But there is every indication that a record cut flower and plant trade will be done—in three days, as usual.

WITHIN seven days The Review received over 100 photographs with requests for prompt publication. The impossibility of using all is apparent and that preference be given to those supposed to be exclusive is no more than natural.

GET your Christmas orders off without further delay. Review advertisers are working nights to fill orders and the rush is increasing as we near the holiday. The old rule of "first come, first served" must be applied at all times and those who delay run a chance of being disappointed.

THERE is a common fallacy among publishers; they strive to print matter as nearly like as possible to what is printed by the leader in the field. It is a mistake. With two papers more or less alike, few people care to subscribe to more than one of them; whereas, with two papers quite distinct, everybody will want to read both. Nothing so much gives the appearance of similarity as duplicated illustrations.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

LAST week the postoffice returned several copies of The Review that had met with an accident, being so mutilated that the addresses were undecipherable. Any reader who failed to receive his copy will confer a favor by dropping the publishers a card, upon receipt of which the missing paper will be mailed.

THE trade is awaiting with much interest the publication of the regulations for the parcel post, which becomes operative January 1. Without full details as to the method of administering the law, many in the trade believe that the results will prove to be satisfactory. Many letters have reached The Review, the publication of which has been withheld because the Postmaster-General has not yet issued the working rules, a knowledge of which will be necessary before there can be understanding and intelligent discussion of the plan.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

With the exception of roses, the market is facing an unusual shortage of flowers. For the last week the wholesalers have found it hard to keep pace with the demands for carnations. The general prediction now is that carnations will not be anywhere near so plentiful as was expected, for growers as a rule report that their crops are making slow progress and only a few will be able to make cuts of any quantity by Christmas. Since the month opened the cuts have been light and many are at a loss to show a reason for the shortage. A change in weather has given rise to the hope that the carnations will make growth more rapidly. Cold, clear weather succeeded a stretch of warm, rainy days that were anything but ideal from the view of the growers. While the brisk atmosphere is toning up the stock, the sunshine will improve the color. Killarney especially has suffered in color during the spell of dark, cloudy skies.

Killarneys as well as Beauties are being cut in good quantities, but hardly more than enough to go around. The lack of carnations has made it necessary for the retailers to use roses, and

BEAUTIES AND ROSES FOR CHRISTMAS

ALL OTHER STOCK ALSO IN SPLENDID ASSORTMENT--THE LARGEST AND MOST COMPLETE SUPPLY IN THIS MARKET

Killarneys, Beauties, Violets, Carnations, Orchids—these are our leaders. We have splendid crops coming just right for the holiday—far the largest supply we ever have had and quality that never has been better for Christmas. Let your orders come. Business will be big with YOU if you use our stock. Order enough.

BEAUTIES

WERE NEVER FINER THAN OURS

We never have seen a finer crop of Beauties than we now have—splendid color, large, perfect buds, fine foliage; specially strong on long to medium. When you have tried these Beauties you will agree with us that nothing finer could be asked. We shall be in full crop through the holidays. Write us today about your Christmas supply.

KILLARNEYS

SPECIALLY STRONG ON LONG-STEMMED PINK

While the quality of our Killarneys is fully up to the famous crop of last Christmas, the supply is very much larger, for the growers greatly increased their plantings. The longer the stem the finer the flower, but the medium size has the largest flowers we ever have seen on these grades. Also can supply Radiance, Bulgarie, Sunburst and Ward, of splendid quality for Christmas.

DOUBLE VIOLETS SINGLE

We handle the cream of the crops of the Hudson river doubles, and they are fine. Also fragrant, home-grown singles that are the best the market affords. An abundant supply.

CARNATIONS

Buyers will find it to their advantage to order Carnations of us. Our stock is widely known as always the most uniformly high quality large lot in this market. Try a shipment from us now and we feel confident you will say you want our stock for Christmas and all the time.

We always have the Novelties, such as fancy Cattleyas and other Orchids, Bouvardias, Sweet Peas, Daisies, and every other flower that's in season. A large cut of fine ASPARAGUS now on.

thus the market is kept well cleaned up without any reduction in prices. Killarneys are fine, except that they are a little weak on color, and Beauties are holding up well, the long-stemmed ones being cut in much larger quantities than the medium lengths. Short Beauties continue scarce, and not enough can be had to fill orders. Richmonds are showing good quality and the indications are that this variety will be in big supply in another week. Aaron Wards, Melody and Sunburst appear to be off crop at the present and not enough of these are to be had to satisfy the demand. Even the shortest are bringing fair prices.

Violets are becoming even more plentiful than at any previous date. Both local and eastern shipments are on the increase as the demand grows stronger. Some houses are still getting in shipments of late mums, but many of these are lacking in quality. Buyers are ready to bid a good price for anything that approaches the best grade. Sweet peas are more in evidence, especially pink. The quality of some of the peas is excellent and they are selling well. Bouvardia has made its appearance in considerable quantity and is of fine quality. Paper Whites, mignonette and daisies are also to be had, while lilies and valley are not overabundant but are to be had to fill all calls. Stevia is in heavy supply. Cattleyas are selling well and, while the supply is not large, there appears to be stock for everyone who wants them at the price. There is an abundance of the small-flowered cattleyas and the miscellaneous orchids. Poinsettias are here in quantity earlier than usual.

Greens of all kinds, including holly, lycopodium, red berries and the other holiday specialties, are on hand in ever-increasing shipments.

Christmas Prospects.

Unless this note serves its purpose, there may be a shortage of roses for Christmas and an oversupply of carnations in the later stages of the holiday rush. Practically everywhere it is said that roses will be in first-class crop, but that there will be small cuts of carnations, few growers being in full crop. Time after time when there has been such a unanimous sizing up of the situation exactly the reverse of what has been expected has been the result. The reason is apparent. With everyone predicting carnations in light supply, few orders will be booked; the wholesalers will be afraid to take orders except at such high prices that no great amount of business can be booked. On the other hand, with good cuts of roses predicted, orders will be booked freely. Then, when the smoke of battle clears away, it is found that the roses were overbooked and that the carnations, having come in more heavily than was expected, exceeded the orders and realized disappointing prices in the clean-up.

For Christmas we shall have a fine lot of Roses to offer, including the much called for Richmonds, Beauties, Pink Killarney, White Killarney, Bulgarie, Maryland, besides Mrs. Jardine and Aaron Ward.

Our carnations are the best on this market, including such varieties as Victory, Enchantress, Aristocrat, Afterglow, Winsor and White Perfection. We anticipate a shortage in the Carnation line and as such we will endeavor to fill carnation orders to the best of our ability.

A large supply of our famous Blue Ribbon Valley, the leader of all Chicago brands; also Sweet Peas, Single and Double Violets, Harrisii, Narcissus, Stevia, Asparagus, Greens, and all other seasonable stock.

We desire that you place your orders early. Don't wait until the last minute only to learn that stock is well ordered up.

Apparently everything except carnations is to be plentiful this Christmas. Fine supplies of Beauties are promised and there will be the usual quantity of poinsettias, and they should all be ready on time this year, for with most growers they are earlier than usual. Cattleyas will not be in large supply, but of all the miscellaneous flowers there will be more than ever, including violets, of which this market can get any quantity wanted.

Club Meeting.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its annual election of officers at the Hotel Sherman December 5, the balloting resulting as follows:

President—Guy French.
Vice-president—A. Henderson.
Secretary—Wilder Deamud.
Treasurer—E. F. Winterson.
Trustee—H. N. Brurs.

A laugh was created when the secretary read letters from all three of the nominees for vice-president, each withdrawing in favor of the others.

Resignations of membership were received from H. Luedtke, Geo. Fischer, Joseph Schillo, John P. Risch and Andrew McAdams.

Treasurer Winterson reported, as of December 1, $272.75 in the general fund and $639.39 on certificate of deposit; total, $912.14. The secretary reported receipts of dues amounting to $263 since last meeting. All outstanding bills were ordered paid.

Official notice was received from the Chrysanthemum Society of America, of the acceptance of the club's invitation to hold the annual convention and exhibition in Chicago in November, 1913.

A certificate of merit was given Wendland & Keimel for an exhibit of the new red rose, Milady, cut from plants under trial at Elmhurst.

Among the visitors present were Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., president of the S. A. F.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and Raymond Kester, formerly with Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, and now in charge of the beautiful new retail store of the Hill-Heller Co., Indianapolis. will play a vitally important part in getting your flowers into your customers' hands and getting their money into your cash drawer. Hundreds of florists have found this out to their steadily growing profit. They've found that in addition to saving them big money, the McCray has boomed business with a rush—by keeping the flowers in the beauty and freshness of perfect condition—and by displaying them with the very limit of attractiveness.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The second week of the social season has been a busy one for everybody. The supply of flowers has not exceeded the demand. Prices advanced slightly in some instances; in others they were firmer. The rose has superseded the chrysanthemum. Roses are in fair rather than in heavy crop; the principal shortage is in the lower grades, those bringing from $4 to $5 per hundred. A feature of the rose market is the success that has so far attended the introduction of the yellow varieties. The retailers in previous seasons were timid about selling yellow roses because they were so hard to procure. With Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon, Melody and Mrs. Aaron Ward growing on half a dozen places, yellow has been pushed in earnest, with the result that they are selling at higher prices than the same grades of pink and white. Violets have fallen back a trifle since the brilliant close of last month, but they have had some good days lately. Carnations continue surprisingly scarce. The fancy grade has advanced another point, with plenty of buyers ready to replace those who object. The demand for valley has lessened enough to balance more evenly than for the last fortnight. Cattleyas and gardenias are in brisk request. Callas, bouvardia and mignonette are increasing in quantity. White lilac has become a staple flower. Paper Whites, Romans and stevia are not much sought, although the former advanced in price in sympathy with the market.

Boxwood sprays have sold so well, both in and out of town, that the stock is much diminished. Lycopodium is moving briskly, one house alone shipping three and one-half tons of this green last week. There is some fine holly on the market. Wild smilax is active.

Indications for Christmas.

The prospects for the holidays are that cut flowers will be plentiful, that much of the stock will be of fine quality, and that prices will be moderate. This applies to the staple flowers; some of the novelties and possibly a few other varieties are expected to be exceptions.

Christmas Plants.

The difficulty of successfully conducting a retail flower store at Christmas has always troubled even the brightest minds in our profession. The fact that the largest quantity of cut flowers required at the most unfavorable period of the whole year for production, is the keynote of the difficulty. Improved varieties and improved culture have done much to improve the situation, but the real solution lies in Christmas plants. These may be divided into two classes, flowering and foliage. The flowering class, by far the more important of the two, consists chiefly of three or four varieties. The foliage class for Christmas use comprises all those varieties that have bright or variegated leaves, with the addition of ferns and a few palms. There is also a small but important class of berried plants.

The requisites of the Christmas flowering plant are brightness and a reasonable degree of durability. Red is, of course, the Christmas color, but bright pink will do. The advantage of the Christmas plant is that it can be sold from sample at a known price with certainty of delivery; this is not true of cut flowers. So hearty has been the welcome given to Christmas plants by the retailers all over the country that today there are places that devote almost their entire space to their production, reserving only enough to hold the stock for Easter and spring.

The poinsettia, with its cheerful red bracts, gives us the ideal Christmas color at a price that brings it within reach of everyone. There were difficulties in the culture of the poinsettia to be overcome. It did not root easily and it dropped its leaves. Culture has overcome both defects. This season the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, largest grower of poinsettias, has doubled its output. The poinsettia is popular made up in pans edged with small ferns or with asparagus.

The begonia shows an important change this season: Cincinnati is pushing forward in the medium and larger sizes, while Lorraine and Norwood lead in the basket sizes and in 5-inch. The beauty, grace and freedom of bloom of the begonia have won for it a host of friends. The cyclamen when well grown is the most satisfactory of the Christmas blooming plants as a gift. To quote from Robert A. Craig, "There are no mites." When the plants are perfectly grown in a cool temperature and miteless they are ideal.

The azalea is not a Christmas plant; it never was and it probably never will be, but the azalea is so perfect that, if you must have one for Christmas, by all means let it be Mme. Petrick. Duncan Macaw was standing before the most perfect bench of Mme. Petrick, well budded (that is usually the trouble at Christmas), with the flowers just opening, showing the size and color. Such azaleas merit a place on the Christmas list, but such azaleas are rare.

The Christmas foliage plants include crotons, dracaenas, Pandanus Veitchii and a few more. The crotons have become so important that they can be had in named varieties in quantity, a thing impossible a few years ago. This gives opportunity for color combination. The bronze green foliage of Mrs. Sander, for instance, is striking with Adiantum hybridum. Crotons of Christmas red are highly prized. As a basket plant the croton has a large field. Dracæna terminalis when well grown has Christmas red tops, indicative of culture; it is the leading dracæna. Lord Wolseley has grace; it is a variety that promises well. Then there are two or three other sorts that are being grown in quantities in anticipation of demand. Massangeana, with its drooping variegated leaves, has wonderful stamina. The clear green and white of Pandanus Veitchii gives it a place in basket work, where its grace shows well.

Every variety of nephrolepis, of adiantum, or of asparagus, that is grown for everyday use, is useful at Christmas; the chief point is that the plants be bushy. So great has been the demand for small plants for making up that Robert A. Craig filled 1,200 birch-bark baskets with foliage plant combinations, with the idea of suggesting the possibilities in this direction. One-half of these baskets had already been ordered at the time of my visit.

The berried plants include ardisias and solanums. The ardisias are the most satisfactory and the most difficult. The solanums are pretty and have a special field of their own.

In conclusion it may be said that the wonderful growth in the demand for Christmas plants is a healthy sign in the development of our business.

ing plants and ferns for the holidays promises well. The prettiest sight of all is a house of Cincinnati begonias just coming into bloom. Then there are the azaleas, Mme. The Market.

The chill of winter was felt December 8 and an old-fashioned blizzard was predicted. After all, it is better for the cut flower market that the weather should be seasonable. Already the Christmas trees are here, and the manufacture of roping and holly wreaths is in full swing. On every side are the premonitions of the gala season.

The market for cut flowers has taken the usual course between Thanksgiving and Christmas, and slumped twenty-five per cent from the quotations of a week ago. There is no surplus that the market cannot digest and everything indicates a healthful tone and an abundant supply for all demands until the holidays. This week the Christmas shopping begins, and dullness in the cut flower trade is inevitable.

There are plenty of American Beauties, grand stock, and holding firm at 35 cents each for the selected. Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Shawyer and occasionally Sunburst command as high a valuation. Taft, Ward and Chatenay sell rapidly and all the old varieties now are at their best. Of the Killarneys there is no limit. The general demand for these calls for the No. 1 and No. 2 grades.

DON'T ACCEPT IMITATIONS.

Few roses fell below 2 cents last week. The chrysanthemum is still on deck and likely to be for some weeks; in fact, the Christmas demand for them is assured. Some of the finest stock of the season arrived last week and they still form the principal feature in the retail windows. Violet shipments are light and yet prices do not advance. Grand stock sold December 7 at 50 cents per hundred. Many of the up-state violet growers now ship to the western cities. They should bring good values here at Christmas. Carnations are superb and are offered in great variety. Few go above 4 cents, except the novelties. Orchids are abundant and prices are barely steady. Before the holiday a healthful advance is expected, but 60 cents seems to be high water mark at present for cattleyas. There are few of the higher grade of gardenias and prices do not vary; $2 to $4 is the reguget rid of it. Lilies were unable to hold the level of Thanksgiving; the best are selling at $8 per hundred. Valley, too, dropped with the rest of the market, 2 to 4 cents now being the usual quotation. There are plenty of callas, narcissi and Romans.

Bouquet green is fine in quality and reasonable. Holly also is here, well berried and fresh.

The outlook is encouraging. Everybody expects a good holiday trade, and that is half the battle.

Various Notes.

The gardeners' reunion last week, under the management of Jack Everett, of Glen Cove, proved a big success. Nearly 100 of the leading gardeners of the east were present, all the societies around New York being well represented. Allen Morrison was the only member from Westbury, L. I. The banquet was at 8 p. m. and here the bowling prizes were awarded. It was decided to have another reunion in 1913, with James Stuart, of Mamaroneck, as manager. Arthur Herrington acted as toastmaster. The National Flower Show was the general theme of the addresses. The speakers were Messrs. Totty, Duckham, Weathered, Johnston, Ebel, McKenzie, Waite and Ortez. Mr. Ortez, who is vice-president of the Farmers' Congress, invited the National Association of Gardeners to cooperate with that body to obtain greater recognition from the state for agriculture and horticulture. President Waite accepted the invitation for the gardeners and will appoint a committee to attend the session in Albany the latter part of January.

The annual meeting of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers was held December 8, at Kalil's. After the usual banquet the society decided to give two cash prizes of $25 each for the National Flower Show, one for the best bed of fifty geraniums, and the other for the best bed of plants, exclusive of geraniums. A request was sent the publicity committee of the Florists' Club that attention be directed to plants as well as cut flowers for the special days the committee is featuring. The following officers were elected: President, Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, L. I.; vice-president, John H. Fiesser, North Bergen, N. J.; treasurer, Hermann C. Steinhoff, West Hoboken, N. J.; secretary, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., New York; directors, Alfred L. Zeller, Brooklyn; Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., and H. Baumann, West Hoboken, N. J.

The annual banquet and dance of the New Jersey Floricultural Society will be held in East Orange, January 15.

John A. Foley, manager for Lecakes & Co., has just added to his express facilities an auto truck costing $3,500. His success in this department of his work has been phenomenal.

James McManus has moved to 105 West Twenty-eighth street, where he will have increased space. This completes the quintette of stores erected by John D. Nicholas, all the equals of any wholesale cut flower store in the city and now occupied by Mr. McManus, Wm. Ford, Siebrecht & Siebrecht, the Growers' Cut Flower Co. and Wm. Kessler.

Woodrow & Marketos will have a branch store for the holiday on Sixth avenue, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets, handling plants of all varieties.

Many fine specimen evergreens adorn the front of the store of Young & Nugent and already a Christmas aspect is presented.

M. A. Bowe will have a branch store as usual, for Christmas. His location close to the Waldorf-Astoria is one of the best in the city, the new Vanderbilt hotel being only a block away.

The blooming plant supply for Christmas, at College Point, Flatbush, Jersey and on Long Island, is superb this season. No grower is short, but apparently every plant of value will be disposed of.

The Bedford Floral Co., at Bedford Hills, has its artesian wells and high chimney completed and Moore, Hentz & Nash say everything on the big plant is moving satisfactorily.

Mrs. Kessler is in charge of Wm. Kessler's office during the holiday season.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. are occupying a branch store at 45 West Twenty-eighth street during the holiday season.

L. B. Coddington was in the city last week, the guest of H. E. Froment.

Paul Meconi and Miss Frieda Behrend, his bookkeeper, who will wed December 14, will enjoy their honeymoon trip after the busy holiday season is over.

Phil Kessler, in the Coogan building, has fitted up a new office.

Charles Millang is celebrating his twenty-eighth anniversary in the business.

A. J. Guttman, Inc., has received a rather unique Christmas present from the landlord—a reduction of one-third in the rental of the floor. Mr. Guttman

The Market.

Prices ruled somewhat lower than a week ago, due in some measure to increased production caused by the unusually mild weather. There is no great surplus, however, and business is satisfactory. Chrysanthemums still arrive in small numbers, chiefly Bonaffon and Nonin, but do not now cut much figure in the market. Roses are more plentiful and prices easier. American Beauty is selling well. Russell is wanted by everyone and only a small part of the orders can be filled. Richmond is now arriving of superb quality, some having 4-foot to 6-foot stems. Both Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney are of excellent quality, though growers are doubting if they will prove as profitable in winter as the older sorts. Hillingdon, Sunburst, Taft and Ward are all selling well, but at lower rates. Carnations are mostly going at $2 to $3 per hundred, with fancies at $4 and some special grades at $5. Violets are not over-plentiful and the bulk hold up to the dollar mark.

Valley has sold well, and for Lilium longiflorum the call has been unusually good. Paper Whites are abundant. A small number of Trumpet Majors are seen and freesias made their appearance this week. Snapdragons are more plentiful, but sell well, as do both yellow and white marguerites. Stevia is in heavy supply. Gardenias are rather more plentiful, but cattleyas are in rather short supply. Sweet peas are coming from a number of growers. The best grades sell well, but short-stemmed stock is hard to move. The demand for smilax, asparagus and ferns is good.

Trade in pot plants is becoming active and the large growers report that they are already pretty well sold out. Poinsettias, cyclamens, oranges, begonias, ardisias, primulas, ericas and azaleas are the leaders.

Winterson's Grand Novelty "Baby" Christmas Tree

"THE ONE BEST SELLER"

A FEW YEARS AGO we introduced these beautiful miniature trees to the trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 18 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for table decoration but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

England Fruit Growers' Association its big exhibition in November. A large number of new members were elected. Prof. Hugo de Vries, of Holland, was elected a corresponding member.

Various Notes.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., are sending to the Boston Flower Exchange superb Richmond roses with stems three to six feet long. They are also sending a quantity of these to New York. They expect to have 18,000 Richmonds for Christmas. Their Beauties have remarkably fine heads, while Killarney Queen, Killarney, White Killarney and Ward are all of splendid quality.

Work was completed last week on Thomas Roland's new house at Revere. This is of Lord & Burnham construction and all the most up-to-date improvements are embodied in it. The dimensions are 61 x 525 feet, twenty-seven feet high at the ridge and eight feet at the sides. For the first crop 16,000 tomatoes will be planted, and these will probably be followed by sweet peas. Mr. Roland states that his immense stock of cyclamens and other plants at Nahant is already pretty well sold out.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have some finely berried Skimmia Japonica and English hollies for Christmas. They are having a strong call for fern pans and Cocos Weddelliana.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, through the genial W. H. Carr, at the Boston Flower Exchange, has at present a fine line of evergreens in pots and tubs, in addition to azaleas, ardisias, begonias and other well-grown Christmas plants.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, is growing Carnation Benora in quantity this season and finds it a great bloomer, seller and keeper. White Wonder and Pink Delight are other great specialties with him.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar and Thomas Roland went down to New York December 9 to attend the club meeting and on National Flower Show matters.

Galvin's have had numerous large decorations the last few days, which business has been fine and far ahead of previous years.

The annual election of officers of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club occurs December 17. The contests for vice-president and executive committee promise to bring out a large attendance. The landscape gardening classes resumed December 10 with a good attendance. Classes are provided for both advanced pupils and beginners, at a cost of $8 for sixteen lessons, to be given weekly.

James Wheeler, of Natick, has been appointed to have charge of all exhibitions at Horticultural hall and their proper arrangement during 1913.

The Horticultural Club held its regular monthly meeting at the Parker House December 4. W. J. Stewart was the speaker of the evening.

W. N. Craig.

The grand jury has returned an indictment for manslaughter against Albert H. Woods, who fired the shot, September 18, that killed Thomas Gol-drop, a trespasser.

Society people in Brookline are aroused over the report that property adjoining the home of F. E. Palmer has passed to a colored man who will make it a home for the aged of his race.

PARCELS POST REQUIREMENTS.

The trade is awaiting with great interest the announcement of the regulations under which the parcels post is to be put in operation January 1. Gradually the details are being worked out. Among the requirements settled upon are the following:

"That distinctive parcel post stamps must be used on all fourth-class matter beginning January 1, 1913, and that such matter bearing ordinary postage stamps will be treated as 'Held for postage.'

"That parcels will be mailable only at postoffices, branch postoffices, lettered and local named stations and such numbered stations as may be designated by the postmaster.

"That all parcels must bear the return card of the sender; otherwise they will not be accepted for mailing."

It is stated that it is of the utmost importance that these requirements be observed in mailing parcel post packages in order that such packages may be promptly handled and dispatched, as failure to so comply will result in inconvenience and annoyance to the public.

BEGONIA LONSDALE.

We have a large stock of this light sport at the same prices as quoted above for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant, and holding the flowers much better. The color is a little lighter than the original Lorraine.

BEGONIA GLORY OF CINCINNATI.

This variety is endorsed by all the leading retail florists and will in time displace Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Do not overlook this grand plant when placing your order for Christmas. 3 1/2-inch pots.....$35 per 100 6-inch pots.....$1.25 each 7-inch pots.....$1.50 each 8-inch pots.....$2.50 each

NEW BEGONIA NORWOOD.

This is a dark pink sport of Begonia Lonsdale and is, without doubt, the best keeping Begonia in existence. It bloomed as early as November 1 last year and still retained its original flowers until April 1. It has proven a wonderful plant for baskets, etc. 3-inch pots.....$25 per 100 4-inch pots.....$5 a doz.; $35 per 100 5-inch pots.....$9 a doz.; $70 per 100

AZALEAS.

Assorted Varieties.

5-inch pots.....$6, $9 and $12 per doz. 6-inch pots.....$1, $1.25 and $1.50 each 8-inch azalea pots, made up plants, handsome specimens.....$2, $2.50 and $3 each Larger plants.....$4, $5, $6 and $7.50 each We are also offering our wonderful collection of Seedling Crotons in over one hundred fifty (150) varieties. These varieties have proved themselves far ahead of any new varieties at home or abroad, having taken first prize wherever shown. 4-inch pots, strong plants.....$3 each, $30 a doz., $200 per 100 5-inch and 5 1/2-inch pots, strong plants.....$5 each, $50 a doz., $300 per 100

DRACAENAS.

There is no variety of foliage plant as attractive as the highly colored Dracaenas. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular Christmas baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in this country. Following is a list of varieties with descriptions.

DRACAENA MASSANGEANA.

The variety with the golden stripe down the center of the leaf. This handsome plant is the best of all Dracaenas for the house. We have an exceptionally large stock, well colored, and of the very highest quality. 6-inch pots.....$15 and $18 per doz. 8-inch pots.....$2 and $2.50 each

PLANT COMBINATIONS.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of the trade to our Plant Combinations for Christmas sales. These are better than any heretofore offered. This year the same idea of filling them early in order to thoroughly establish them has again been carried out but instead of using tubs or the ordinary receptacle, we have had made artistic baskets, etc., which are shown in the cuts. These are well made boxes, covered with birch bark or rattan. The baskets we have in three sizes 8", 10" and 12", and a special indoor window box 18" long, 6" deep and 6" wide. In filling these the styles are varied in order to give variety and nothing but high class plants are used in the filling, such as Crotons, Pandanus, Dracaenas in variety, Ferns, etc. Last year we sent our plant combinations to all the large cities and while then in the ordinary green tub they met with the highest approval everywhere. These filled this year we can recommend too highly and assure you much time and thought has been spent to have them thoroughly durable and artistically correct.

Window Box, 18" long, 6" wide, 6" deep, $3 and $3.50

Plant Basket, 8"x8"x7", $2.50 each Plant Basket, 10"x10"x8", $3 and $3.50 each Plant Basket, 12"x12"x10", $5 each Baskets furnished by H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

DRACAENA FRAGRANS.

6-inch pots.....$6 and $9 per doz. 9-inch pots, very heavy.....$24 per doz. 8-inch tubs.....$18 per doz.

DRACAENA LORD WOLSELEY.

One of the very best varieties for Christmas being bright red in color. 2-inch pots.....$12 per 100 3-inch pots, heavy.....$25 per 100 4-inch pots, heavy.....$35 per 100 5-inch pots, heavy.....$50 per 100 5-inch pots, very heavy.....$9 and $12 per doz.

DRACAENA TERMINALIS.

Exceptionally well colored. 2 1/4-inch pots.....$10 per 100; $90 per 1000 3-inch pots.....$20 per 100 4-inch pots, strong plants.....$30 and $35 per 100 6-inch pots, extra strong.....$12 and $15 per doz. We would suggest ordering the above early, the demand is always great at Christmas.

DRACAENA GODSEFFIANA.

Fine for baskets. 3-inch pots.....$15 per 100 4-inch pots.....$25 per 100

DRACAENA MANDAIANA.

Large leaf, beautifully colored bright red. 6-inch pots.....$15 and $18 per doz. 7-inch pots.....$18 and $24 per doz. 8-inch pots.....$2.50 and $3 each

DRACAENA BRONZE BEAUTY.

This variety was offered three years ago with Dracaena Mandarina by the introducer, Wm. A. anda, and is the strongest growing Dracaena e have. Although not as highly colored as Dracaena Desmetiana, we have found it wonderfully durable as a house plant. We offer splendid specimens.

1-inch, 9-inch and 10-inch pots.....$3, $3.50, $5 and $6 each

PHOENIX ROEBELENI.

This is unquestionably one of the great palms of the future, combining the grace of a Cocos Weddelliana with the hardiness of a Kentia. It will prove an invaluable plant for the house. Our stock in the following sizes is unusually fine.

NEPHROLEPIS SMITHII.

This variety is a greatly improved Amerpohlil, dwarfed in habit, the fronds being much finer, and do not have any tendency to spoil in the center of the plant. It is the finest of all Nephrolepis for Christmas baskets and has given entire satisfaction.

VARIOUS BULBS.

Please tell me how to handle the following bulbs to force them, or at least to get them in early: Anemone Apennina, A. fulgens, A. stellata and A. nemorosa in variety, fritillarias, ixias, Gladiolus nanus and Spanish iris. Is there a handy manual on bulbs, including the forcing of rare bulbs? J.M.

None of the bulbs named will stand more than a moderate amount of forcing. All should be grown moderately cool. If forced like tulips, narcissi or lilies they will, one and all, be ruined. The several anemones named succeed well in a violet house temperature. If you should be growing double violets, plant some of these or any of the ranunculi, another beautiful class of spring bulbs, between the rows, or plant them in flats and bring them along in a cool, airy house. You can also keep them in flats in coldframes, or plant direct in the frames for spring blooming, giving a coating of dry leaves as a winter protection. One variety you have not named, A. coronaria, is excellent. For spring flowering The Bride, pure white, is fine.

Fritillaria Meleagris and alba, also aurea, latifolia, etc., can be grown in pots or pans of sandy, porous loam and gently forced. Such sorts as biflora, Oranensis, Sewerzowi and liliacea succeed well planted in frames. They naturally flower early and sashes should be placed over them before the weather becomes too severe. Air freely, to prevent damping off, when growth has started.

Ixias succeed well in shallow pans;

6-inch is a good size. Use light, sandy loam and grow in a cool, well ventilated greenhouse. Gladiolus nanus and Spanish iris require similar treatment. They can be planted in benches, but a more profitable plan is to plant in flats four or five inches deep. Keep in a cool pit or frame until nicely above ground. Then place in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, in batches, to provide a succession of bloom; 50 degrees should be the absolute maximum at night for either the iris or gladiolus. I do not know of any special manual treating on the forcing of rare bulbs, but the catalogues of some of the noted European specialists contain considerable cultural data. C. W.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market since Thanksgiving has been in splendid condition as to stock, quality and demand. The bracing weather and the approaching holidays have kept the business on a move. Stock has not been so plentiful as it was, for the demand for roses and carnations is much better since the mum season has come to a close. While there still are quite a few mums coming in, the quality is poor for the bulk of them. A few nice Chadwick and Nonin have been seen during the week and commanded a fair price. The wholesalers, too, are handling quite a lot of bouquet green and holly of extra good quality. The market has had a fair lot of roses during the week, for which the demand was good for the Killarneys and Beauties. Richmond also sold well.

Carnations are up in price. As high as 6 cents is asked for extra choice stock. White Wonder, Enchantress and Beacon have the call at this price. The market has a good supply in all grades and varieties. Valley has been in good demand and the supply now is large. At present Rowe, Aue and Werner Bros. are supplying this market with excellent stock.

Violets are selling up clean nowadays at $1 per hundred for extra fancy.

These have been scarce of late, but the growers say a large crop is expected for Christmas. Paper Whites, Romans and Easter lilies are in excellent supply and demand. Smilax, ferns, galax and asparagus had a good week.

Various Notes.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting December 9, at the Missouri Botanic Garden. The members came out in goodly numbers to hear Dr. G. R. Hill on "The Relation of Environment to Crop Production in the United States." Dr. G. T. Moore presided.

Julius Schaeffer, lately with M. M. Ayres, on Grand avenue, has bought the establishment of Ed Loyet, at 918 North Kings Highway, and opened the place last week under his name. He said he had quite a good run of business.

Fred Alves, manager of Angermueller's cut flower department, did jury duty last week.

Fred C. Buchrucker & Sons, who opened a retail store recently at 3816-22 Virginia avenue, say they have had considerable funeral work of late and a good Thanksgiving business.

The Ladies' Home Circle will meet December 11 at the home of Mrs. F. W. Bruenig, at Gravios and Mississippi avenues. The Circle meets once a month at one of the ladies' homes, there being twelve members, which gives each a meeting during the year.

Henry Emunds has had fine chrysanthemums this season and now is cutting some excellent blooms of Chadwick, Nonin and Golden Wedding. Mr. Emunds makes a specialty of these every year and has been one of the most successful growers who ship to this market.

Geo. H. Angermueller says he is having a big run on Christmas supplies from outside of the city. Red ruscus especially has a large demand, also chifbons.

John Young, son of W. C. Young, now is with the Ellison Floral Co. Mrs. Ellison is the young man's aunt. Here he will learn a great deal of design and decorative work.

Montrose W. Hayes, local weather forecaster, says florists who want warning of cold waves, heavy snows and sleet should communicate by letter with the local weather office and he will gladly phone them advance warnings.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports a good run on florists' supplies since Thanksgiving.

C. Young & Sons Co. displayed a fine lot of poinsettias in pots and pans last week and had their window in full Christmas dress.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. says that since Thanksgiving it has cleaned up daily on cut stock and had a heavy demand for the different colors of ruscus. Oak branches and all Christmas supplies are selling well.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society held its annual meeting in Hollywood Inn, December 6. Vice-president Frank Drexler occupied the chair in place of President Howard Nichols, who was unavoidably absent, owing to sickness in his family. He also withdrew his nomination for secretary for the ensuing year, for the same reason, and the members accepted his withdrawal with regret.

The officers for 1913 were elected. A most satisfactory report of the fall show was read.

Louis Milliot exhibited Begonia La Patrie, of the Lorraine type, a useful plant for house work; it is not such a bright pink as Lorraine, but it will last much longer in dwelling rooms.

The Market.

The supply, with the exception of colored carnations, is keeping pace with the demand, which has been quite satisfactory since Thanksgiving. Mums are now a thing of the past and from reports proved to be a paying crop this season. A few Paper Whites are coming in and have found ready sale. Sweet peas are more plentiful and move well.

Club Meeting.

After a vacation of several months, the Florists' Club again held a meeting December 5, due to the urgent notice sent out by President H. V. Hunkel. It being the night for the annual election of officers, a good attendance was on hand and it seemed like the good old days. Officers for 1913 will be: President, Arthur Leidiger; vice-president, Geo. Holton; treasurer, James Livingston; secretary, Eugene Oestreich; trustee for three years, C. C. Pollworth. Installation will be held the first meeting of the new year. The club voted to get some of the cards and box slips, issued by the New York Florists' Club, to give that form of publicity a trial. Undoubtedly these will be distributed through our three wholesale houses.

Prospects are good of getting into our former meeting place, the Quiet House, if negotiations of our president-elect, A. Leidiger, prove successful.

Various Notes.

Richard Leitz went to Detroit last week to visit his mother, who has but a short time to live. While in that city, which was his former home, he

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

WM. CURRIE, seedsman, is vice-president of a new Milwaukee curling club.

THE new seed warehouse of F. H. Woodruff & Sons, Milford, Conn., is complete and occupied.

THE forthcoming catalogues will price peas according to the crop, all right—by not quoting on quantities greater than pecks.

THE holly shipments are coming forward rapidly and the quality of much of the stock is excellent. The market is weak.

THE Federal Horticultural Board will hold a hearing January 7, 1913, on the proposal to establish a quarantine against sugar cane.

WHILE the new crop of valley is disappointing in quantity, there is a larger supply of cold storage pips on hand than is usual at this date.

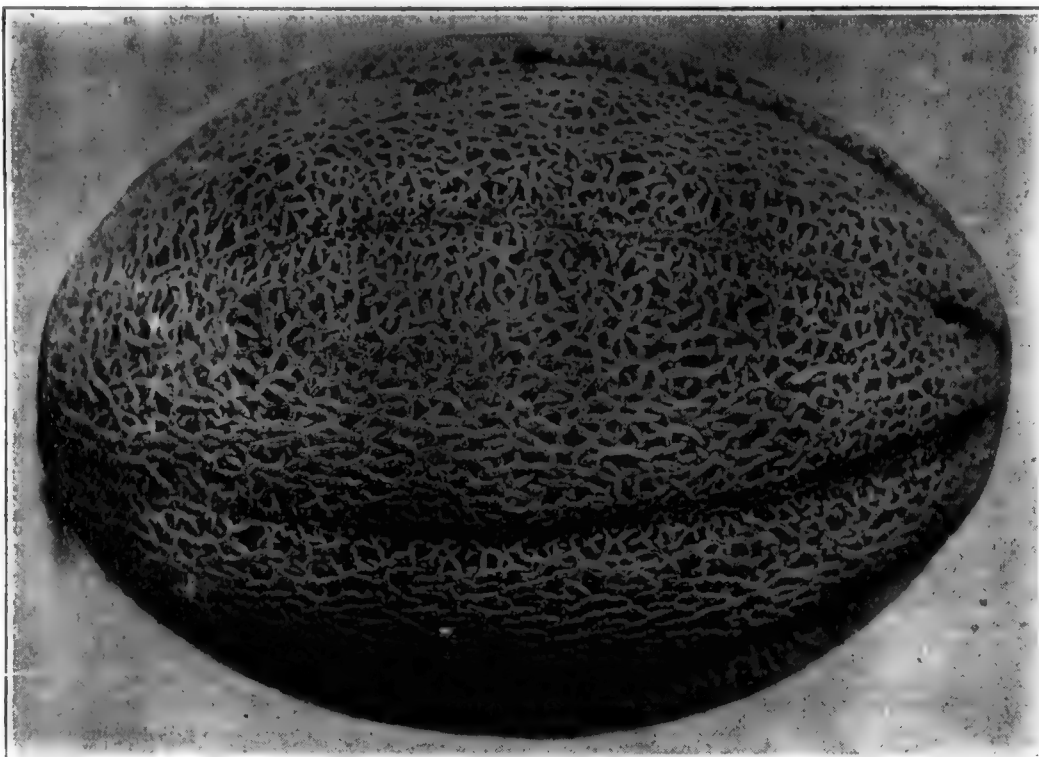

G. L. McCULLOUGH is now the proprietor of the Arkansas Valley Seed House, having purchased the interest of C. H. Browne December 1.

"FACTS About Cantaloupes" is the title of an interesting illustrated booklet issued by the Rocky Ford Cantaloupe Seed Breeders' Association.

POSTMASTERS are inquiring of seedsmen to what extent they expect to use the parcel post on this season's shipments. The trade is hardly able to give an answer, since so little is known as to how the new system will compare with old methods.

THE Congress which convened December 2 for the short session is expected to begin the tariff tinkering. The Democrats promise a general revision downward, but the seed trade is more interested in preserving the principle of specific duties than in any change in rates.

HOLDERS of bouquet green, especially the shippers from the woods, who acquired their stock at the high prices that prevailed early in the season, are slow to appreciate that the market has gone out from under them and from all accounts there is a lot of green being held back in anticipation of a recovery in price, although the season is rapidly drawing to a close.

VETCH FOR SEED IN OREGON.Common vetch, Vicia sativa, is strictly an annual, having much the same habit as the garden or English pea, but the stems are more slender and usually taller, growing three to five feet or more in length. Common vetch seed is produced in large quantities in the United States only in the Willamette valley, in Oregon. The methods of handling the seed crop vary, due partly to difference of opinion as to the best method, but more largely to the machinery which the grower has.

"It is the general practice to cut vetch for seed as soon as the lower pods are fully ripe, at which time the upper pods will be fully formed and the plant will be carrying a maximum quantity of seed," says C. W. Piper, the government agrostologist, in a recent bulletin. "Later cutting occasions more shattering of the seed, while earlier cutting results in a considerable percentage of immature seed. In a few places, where but little seed is raised, the crop is cut with an ordinary mowing machine. Two men with pitchforks follow the mower and roll the vetch back from the uncut area so as to enable the machine to get through when cutting the next swath. Sometimes the first swath cut is rolled on the uncut vetch, and when the succeeding swath is cut the two are rolled back out of the way. This puts the vetch in larger swaths than the first-mentioned method, and also somewhat reduces the loss from shattering. These two mower and pitchfork methods were formerly used generally, but now have been largely superseded by other methods.

"An ordinary grain binder is used by some growers, especially when the vetch is short and therefore quite erect or when it is grown with a supporting crop, such as oats. When thus harvested, the crop is put in shocks similar to grain shocks and allowed to remain until thrashed.

BURPEE'S ANNUAL FOR 1913

"The Leading American Seed Catalogue"

¶ Is now ready for mailing. The first edition of more than four hundred thousand copies will soon be distributed. As usual it is sent unsolicited only to "Customers of Record." We shall be pleased, however, to mail a copy immediately upon application (a postal card will do) to every one who appreciates Quality in Seeds.

¶ This Silent Salesman (and we employ no "talking" salesmen to solicit orders) tells the plain truth about The Best Seeds That Can Be Grown. It is a bright book of 180 pages and shows, besides colored plates of Burpee-Specialties, hundreds of the choicest vegetables and most beautiful flowers, illustrated from photographs. It is almost indispensable to all who garden either for pleasure or profit.

¶ The "House of Burpee" is known the world over not only as Experts in Sweet Peas, but also as Seed Specialists. No other American firm has ever introduced so many novelties of sterling value—and no other growers supply seeds annually direct to so many planters. It might be to your interest to read The Burpee Annual. It will cost you only one cent for a post-card to send us your address—and you are under no obligation to buy. We never annoy applicants with "follow up" letters!

¶ Shall we mail you a copy?

¶ If so, kindly write today.

Burpee's Blue List for 1913

THE most complete catalogue published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye ☉ placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given of many new and valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913 contains 146 pages, with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalogue we have condensed an experience of thirty-six years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalogue; but if you are a private planter please do not ask for it, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

ment. The swather, which is attached to and behind the sickle bar, rolls the vetch in a swath to the outside and leaves the way clear to cut the next swath.

"Whatever method is used in cutting, the vetch is put at once into shocks and remains there till thrashed. The most important rule in the growing of vetch seed is to handle the crop rapidly and as little as possible when cut.

"Common vetch varies considerably in the yield of seed to the acre. Five bushels is considered a low yield, and twenty to twenty-five-bushel yields are near the maximum. The average acre yield is probably from ten to twelve bushels.

"Vetch is thrashed with an ordinary thrashing machine, but in order to reduce to a minimum the cracking of the seed, it is necessary to remove most of the concave teeth. Common vetch thrashes slowly and consequently the expense is high, usually 20 to 25 cents a bushel, the cost being about the same whether the vetch is thrashed by the bushel or the thrashing machine is hired by the day."

SEED ADVERTISING.

Advertising is like a good many other affairs of business life in that it is likely to become habitual—and habits are not easily broken.

But a considerable number of the mail order seed houses, standing between the devil of increased cost of business living and the deep sea of higher prices of seeds, confronted with the necessity of getting better action on their money, have found one of the big leaks in the advertising account. Advertising was being placed with publications simply because it had been so placed for years, without regard for changed conditions, and catalogues were being mailed to a constantly increasing Every florist store is as incomplete without lilies as a grocery store would be without coffee. Horseshoe Brand Cold Storage Giganteum will force comparatively easy in from 12 to 14 weeks, and no good excuse can be given for not having lilies. Some of your customers will surely want them sooner or later, and if you don't have what they want they will go elsewhere the next time to get it. And could you have any flowers in your store more useful than good, pure white lilies? Is there anything better for funeral designs? Won't they go further in making up than most any other flowers? And for weddings—are there any flowers more appropriate than lilies? Then for general all around purposes, isn't it good policy to have lilies on hand at all times? There's another thing about Cold Storage lilies that's often lost sight of, and that is you always know well in advance just about what time your crop will be in flower. Good lilies will keep for several weeks, too, and it is not necessary to use them all up at once. All the above applies to good lilies—they must be of good quality to be money-makers for you.

There is a difference in bulbs just as there is in nearly all products of the earth. This difference is just what prompts this advertisement—and if you don't buy Horseshoe Brand Cold Storage Giganteum, we both lose—we lose a certain margin of profit and you lose a certain margin of flowers. Don't wait—send now for the Horseshoe Brand Planting Table for Cold Storage bulbs—the prices are all the same—no favorites. Full instructions given for forcing.

Cold Storage Lily of the Valley

FOR DECEMBER AND JANUARY FORCING

New crop should never be used for December or January forcing, as it does not force easily or give the requisite amount of foliage so early in the season. Cold storage Valley should always be used for December and January forcing.

We carry only one grade—the very highest quality obtainable. Cases containing 250 pips, $5.00 each; 500 pips, $9.50 each; 1000 pips, $18.00 each.

PAPER WHITE GRANDIFLORA NARCISSUS

We can still supply a splendid lot of these bulbs in perfect condition. Bulbs have been held in cold storage, so that they are perfectly dormant. We offer two grades—13-ctm. bulbs, 1250 to the case, and 14-ctm. bulbs, 1000 to the case—which we will supply as long as unsold at $10.00 per case in case lots.

SPIRAEA

Gladstone—Fine clumps. Case lot of 100 at $8.00 per case. Queen Alexandra—Fine clumps. Case lot of 100 at $11.00 per case.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM AND MULTIFLORUM

Giganteum—7 to 9-inch bulbs, case of 800 at $16.50 per case.
Multiflorum—9 to 10-inch bulbs, case of 200 at $17.00 per case.

FINE NAMED HYACINTHS

We have left a few thousand bulbs in the finest named commercial sorts—Gigantea, La Grandesse, L'Innocence, La Peyrouse, Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, etc., $4.00 per 100. Hyacinths, separate colors—red, white, blue—$2.50 per 100.

GLADIOLUS Peach Blossom—$9.00 per 1000. FREESIAS—French, mammoth bulbs, $6.00 per 1000. Purity, $10.00 per 1000.

list, some names on which never had turned in an order and many none for years. It was discovered that habitual advertising, like other habits, was wasteful and bad.

When the mail order seed houses began to keep a record of inquiries and sales from each publication used it was found to be a lot of work, but worth it. A good many dormant publications were shown up for just what they were; also some of the largest and highest priced general mediums in the country were proved to be unprofitable to the seedsmen. In one case it was too little circulation and in the other it was too much, of the wrong kind.

For the last two or three years the general magazines have carried little seed trade advertising, and orders placed for 1913 show that they will have still less this season, one or two more of the old houses having broken the habit of years. The seedsman does not usually try to make direct sales through his advertising; all he aims to do is to get from seed buyers requests for his catalogue. Records showed that the books sent in response to requests produced by the big general magazines resulted in a small percentage of orders. The average size of the order did not equal the cost of the inquiry plus the cost of the catalogue. It didn't pay out, so one by one the seedsmen dropped out of this class of medium.

The same test applied to specialized publications showed better results. The farm papers, reaching the market growers, and the gardening papers, reaching those who grow for pleasure as much as for profit, as a rule produce inquiries at a lower average cost, the inquiries produce a better percentage of orders, and the orders average larger. But an authority says there are 468 so-called farm papers. Only a few of them are of use to seedsmen as a class, and only a few more are valuable to individual houses. In fact, so few publications show first year sales equal to the sum spent for space that the problem of getting new customers at a cost that seems reasonable is one of the problems of the older houses; the newer houses are, as a rule, growing with their local territory. At any rate, most of the seed trade advertising for 1913 is going into class papers and in selecting the mediums not only previous results but quantity and distribution of circulation have been studied more closely than ever.

Even more wasteful than the habitual type of advertising has been the thoughtless distribution of catalogues. The modern seed catalogue costs a great deal of money, especially if it is charged with all the expense, from time to postage. Also if only half the books sent out produce orders, that doubles the catalogue cost to be charged against those individual orders. The only way to reduce the catalogue cost per order is to make the books produce a better percentage of orders. Since writer, illustrator and printer already have done their best, the problem is one of distribution. To constantly add names to the mailing list and never take any off means a steady increase, not only in the year's cost for books, but in the average catalogue cost per order.

There still are seedsmen who are mailing their books to everybody who ever asked for one, without keeping a record of results, but their number is growing rapidly less. It doesn't pay. Of course every seed house will send this season's book to all who ordered last season, and most of the conservative ones will mail the 1913 catalogue to all who asked for the book or ordered in 1911, even if they were not heard from in 1912. But beyond that not many will go.

The average seedsman is reluctant to reduce the run on his catalogue. If he has been printing 100,000 he hates to cut it to 80,000, even though he knows full well that he could prune his mailing list with profit. He looks on cutting his edition as a step backward. In such a case a study of the source of the orders has helped. One seedsman, confronted by the fact that his mail order department was not paying as it should, found his orders came prin-

SILVER PINK

The great American Snapdragon, will be a money-maker for Spring Sales and Memorial Day.

SOW NOW

for big plants and big profits. Seeds are sure and will produce stronger and better shaped plants than cuttings at one-eighth of their cost. Price, $1.00 per packet of over 500 seeds; three packets, $2.50 cash, delivered anywhere in the world.

SILVER PINK has true lineage and will give a bed of solid color. No other variety of Snapdragon flowered within a mile of our seed grounds, thus assuring purity and quality. It is a high-class novelty at small cost. Order today.

Pot plants with 3 to 5 branches, February delivery, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

cipally from within a certain radius and that both mail and counter sales were particularly good in certain suburbs and adjacent towns. So he concentrated his advertising in the publications circulating principally in his territory, cut his mailing list sharply and used the books saved for almost house to house distribution in his chosen localities. The concentration proved profitable both for the mail order and counter departments and solved the problem of advertising for that seedsman until competition became keener than when the plan was first tried.

Vegetable Forcing.

SNAILS IN LETTUCE HOUSE.

We are troubled with snails in our lettuce house. They are the soft, black ones. When they get onto a plant, they completely destroy it. We have tried sow bug poison and Slug Shot, and have scattered lime around the wooden benches, but all to no avail. We are now hand-picking them and we get as many as 200 per night, which we have put in kerosene oil, but after ten hours they are still alive. About the only remedy we have found for them is to burn them. G. & G.

Get a large quantity of air-slaked lime and dust it on the top of the soil, covering it all over until the ground is white. It will not hurt the plants, but will benefit the soil and help keep the slugs down, as they will not crawl over the lime. Then you can pick off a few by hand. H. G.

Livingston's Superior Strains of Forcing Radishes are developed through careful selection by the best growers of France. Seeds are grown from transplanted roots which are critically sorted by men who know types required for greenhouse growing. Uniform size and shape, brilliant color of skin, small tops and quick growth are the characteristics that make our forcing strains of radishes so profitable to the grower. Test the truth of our statements by sowing now sorts offered below.

Rosy Gem produces shapely roots of typical size and attractive appearance. It grows quickly to good size, is easily bunched and sells readily at fancy prices. Oz., 10c; 1/4-lb., 25c; lb., 65c postpaid.

Scarlet Globe is highly esteemed on account of its bright scarlet color. Roots slightly elongated, of finest flavor. A most profitable, early market sort. Oz., 10c; 1/4-lb., 20c; lb., 70c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Stevenson, Wash.—W. T. Jackson was at Spokane with the display of fruit which, at the apple show, won first prize, a gold medal and a silver cup for the Spokane, Portland & Seattle railroad.

Eugene, Ore.—G. R. Lawrence has sold the Eugene Carnation Farm, south of town, to George Israelson. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence will continue to reside here and will handle the flowers from the farm at the Rex Floral Store.

McMinnville, Ore.—S. H. Maris, proprietor of the Pioneer Greenhouses, says business has been good the entire year. Stock has been of excellent quality and has been kept cleared up at excellent prices. Greenhouse vegetables have sold well. Mums are gone, the carnation now being the principal flower. Ferns, primroses and cyclamens are the best sellers among plants at present.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Present indications point to an exceptionally heavy Christmas business. The Thanksgiving clean-up was away above the average and advance orders for the big day are much heavier than at this time last year. Stock in most cases is plentiful, the only shortage being in white carnations, which do not open freely when the nights are as cool as they have been recently. Reds and light pinks are plentiful and good. Centaureas are fine and to some extent take the place of carnations. Mums are past, the few stragglers now shown being hardly worth sending in.

Rose stock varies greatly. Grand flowers are sent in by some growers, while those from others are thin in texture, short-stemmed and of poor color—no better than they were at midsummer. Those growers who attempted to save money by not firing early are reaping the benefit in a sturdy growth of mildew and spot, and the chances of a good holiday cut are remote indeed.

Cut poinsettias are in and the flowers are extra good this season, both in size and color. The foliage has also been well retained and there will be a big cut for the holidays. Sweet peas do not make a good showing thus far, and there are prospects of a shortage for Christmas. Violets have improved greatly since the cooler nights have been prevalent. Valley is extra good for the season, both the local grown and that shipped in from the north. There is a nice show of orchids, principally cattleyas and phalaenopsis.

Plants so far are decidedly second-rate. The cyclamens coming from San Francisco are by far the best offerings and our local plant growers will have to improve their methods considerably to hold their own against the excellent northern stock.

Greens are plentiful and good. Smilax is much improved; there is plenty of asparagus, huckleberry and ferns, though the last mentioned are a little rough. The Oregon grape, or berberis, is attractive, and another long-leaved berberis is pretty and lasting. Solanum berries and a few plants of Ardisia crenulata give a bright touch and are welcome. Adiantum is good and there is plenty to go around.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Any florist on the Pacific coast not satisfied to do a local retail business can build up a prosperous wholesale trade by using space in The Review to let the buyers know where stock is to be found. This way:

We have found advertising in The Review to be very satisfactory. We have had orders from all parts of the United States, as well as from the Pacific coast, showing that your valued paper has a very wide circulation. At any time we have any special advertising to do we certainly shall send it to The Review.—Hogan & Kooyman, Oakland, Cal., October 3, 1912.

Various Notes.

The Superior Nursery has opened a retail store at 4309 Central avenue and Mr. Gutting says he is well satisfied with the business so far.

There has been a big run on poinsettias at the Los Angeles Flower Market, especially for shipping out of town. Charles Morton has been on a trip to San Francisco, Santa Cruz and other northern points, on the lookout for holiday stock, and he is coming out strong. In azaleas he promises something unusually good.

The experiments carried out by the H. N. Gage Co. with Chinese narcissus bulbs under lath have proven highly successful. The stems are considerably longer and the blooms finer than on outdoor plants. A large order was filled here this week for a golden wedding at a local hotel, all the flowers being of a golden hue. With the new grounds at Montebello, this firm now has over twenty acres devoted to growing cut flowers.

At the opening of the new Times building quite a number of choice floral pieces were used. One of the most striking was an American flag, 7 x 10 feet, with a 14-foot pole, made by Frank Lichtenberg of red and white carnations and vivid blue immortelles. This is the new building erected on the site of the one blown up some two years ago, which led up to the famous (or infamous) McNamara case.

The Roserie is preparing to move to its new quarters in Third street at the beginning of the year.

O. C. Saakes has secured a new lease on his Fourth street store and he expects to spend considerable money, after long experience, both here and in the principal eastern cities. Quiet, unostentatious and gentlemanly in his manner, he is conversant with all that goes to make up a true florist. No doubt he will make good in the more onerous duties he has undertaken and everyone will wish him well.

Morris Goldenson has been away on a northern trip. Trade keeps up well at the store. A large basket filled with azaleas and tied with red ribbon was one of the fine pieces sent from here to the opening of the Times building.

Tasteful work, both in the store and out, is characteristic of the Freeman-Lewis staff and the window displays are always good.

Tony Tassano is back on deck at the Los Angeles Evergreen & Cut Flower Supply Market, after a successful trip north. Business is keeping up well, especially in the high-class greens and ferns, for which this house has a good reputation.

The roses now being sent to Wright's Flower Shop from the greenhouses at Gardena are without doubt the best stock in this town. They are a credit to Mr. Brown, the capable and energetic grower, who now has his large range finely in hand. The gardenias are also excellent, with good foliage and large, pure white flowers. The valley is perfect and, in short, the whole of the stock is highly satisfactory in every way. No wonder Tom Wright beams benevolently on all and sundry. His spirited policy all through deserves the success he is getting.

Mrs. R. Mauff, formerly of Denver, who came to Los Angeles a year ago for rest and change, cannot break away and so has built a home and settled down at 1225 Logan avenue.

F. S. Poole, of Poole's Seed & Implement Co., Tacoma, Wash., has been in the city en route to San Diego, calling on friends and renewing old acquaintances.

A. Beverley, of the Mission Oak Nursery, Santa Barbara, is in town for a few days, introducing a new sprayer, or rather a series of sprayers, called the Pacific Adjustable, suitable for small areas, and the Vacher Rotary, for larger ones. Both have the earmarks of useful tools, practical and easily handled. A sprayer that will do its work, automatically, as Mr. Beverley claims this will, would be a boon to all growers. H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business for November exceeded that of preceding years. Satisfaction is expressed on all sides. December opened with a rush and plenty of stock to take care of orders. Mums we still have with us, but the gradual decline in quality is noticeable. Carnations are up to standard in all varieties and always clean up. Funeral work has served to keep the surplus moving. Maid, Bride and Killarney are in good crop and quality that brings the highest market price. Beauties are almost off crop. Violets and orchids are scarce. With Christmas near at hand, preparations are being made on all sides to handle the largest trade in the history of the city. Stock will be plentiful enough to go around and quality will be up to standard. Poinset-

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamon, Tacoma, Wash.

The Florists' Club met Monday evening, December 9. Considerable business was transacted in settling the affairs of the flower show. With all bills paid, a considerable amount will be left over, which shows well for the first attempt.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

As usual after Thanksgiving week, trade has not been quite so brisk and stock is hanging on longer than we should like. Chrysanthemums are still arriving in fairly liberal quantities and the quality continues good. The next two weeks will nearly clean them up, so that there will be few, if any, left for the Christmas trade. There is a good supply of carnations, but large shipping orders take care of the surplus, so that prices are well maintained and there is no sign of anything like a glut. Roses are scarce and of none too good quality, the foliage in some shipments being badly mildewed. The local supply is small, coming mostly from the east and south. Local violets are in fine condition, but the supply is not large. Discriminating buyers, however, are pleased to pay an enhanced price in preference to buying the California stock. Callas are in good supply and are extensively used. Paper Whites and Romans are selling briskly, but are not arriving in large quantities so far. Orchids are scarce. Greens of all kinds are in good demand. Pot plants are fairly abundant, but are not moving fast.

Various Notes.

The H. B. Burdett Co. has installed a motor delivery in connection with the ever increasing business at First and Denny way. The new vehicle is a Chalmers car.

Charles Muench is back in the city after spending the summer in Vancouver, B. C. He reports business as being good there, but says he prefers to reside in Seattle. He has accepted a position in the Third avenue store of Mrs. L. W. McCoy.

The Florists' Club's committee has been active in trying to put a stop to the peddling of California violets on the streets, with satisfactory results so far, and it is hoped that before long the florists will have one less complaint to make.

their ability to produce flowers under favorable conditions and at a reasonably cheap rate, have almost held a monopoly, but this season the highest grade of chrysanthemums are being sold at prices so low, quality considered, that local houses are declining to bid for the trade.

Prospects for a good Christmas are bright. There will be about the usual supply of flowers, and the plant supply will be considerably larger than in former years.

The famous Victoria holly is excellent this year. The price on the trees for first-grade stock is about 40 cents per pound. The whole supply is in the gardens of private residences and is limited.

We regret to record the death of Fred Street, F. R. H. S., a well known landscape gardener and florist here. Resolutions of condolence for the family of the deceased were passed at the last meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Association. F. B.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned rather cool. The days are comparatively warm, but there are slight frosts at night. This has had the effect of making outside stock a little scarcer than it was, with a stiffening of prices in consequence. Violets are plentiful and good and still cost the stores at the rate of 50 cents per dozen bunches. Narcissi are getting plentiful, but other outside flowers are on the wane. Carnations are plentiful enough and are being held at the same prices as were in vogue at Thanksgiving. Roses, with the exception of Maids, are not overplentiful. Fancy stock is scarce. Valley and orchids are held at about the same figures as for the last month. A few Lilium longiflorum and Roman hyacinths are seen. Plenty of poinsettias are here from the south, but the call for them is not at all lively. Cyclamens in pots are seen on every hand; there never has been such a good showing of them in the town's history. Begonias and azaleas help to keep up the color. Other lines of stock are about the same as last week.

Business, with the exception of funeral trade, is not brisk. Everyone seems to be waiting for the Christmas holidays.

Various Notes.

J. G. Lewis, formerly with the East Lawn Nursery Co., of Sacramento, is in town.

H. Behr, formerly of Chicago, has located in San Francisco and will devote his attention to landscape gardening. G.

LOOMIS, CAL.

The first crop of carnation cuttings is ready and in excellent condition. They are starting to move and the trade expects the continuance of good business as in former years. The weather has been excellent and gives prospects of continuing so for some time. We have had a few cold nights, the thermometer registering as low as 34 degrees above zero.

The California Carnation Co. has under contemplation the erection of more houses next spring.

At Sacramento trade is good. The supply of flowers does not exceed the demand, prices are good and the market gives a cheerful outlook. R.

DEUTZIA GRACILIS.

When is the proper time to pot up Deutzia gracilis to have them in for Easter, and how should they be treated? They are now in the field.

H. G. C.

Field-grown deutzias are not quite so satisfactory for forcing as those grown in pots. I would suggest digging up and potting the plants at once.
Firm the soil well about the roots, soak well with water and stand them in a coldframe or pit. Move them into a temperature of 60 degrees at night eight weeks before Easter, which comes as early as March 23 next year. Spray the plants freely and, as the flowers start to open, place in a somewhat cooler house to develop.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYRIMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pickington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

GLENN BROS., Rochester, have bought the Wayland H. Mason farm, south of Fairport, N. Y., for nursery purposes. A number of buildings will go up at once.

ALL the big orcharding and farming companies recently incorporated have used the word "nursery" in the title and stated in their articles that one of the objects is to grow, sell, or deal in nursery stock.

BERTRAND H. FARR, proprietor of the Wyomissing Nursery, Wyomissing, Pa., no longer has an office at Reading, the business being concentrated at the nursery. Mr. Farr is president of the American Peony Society.

T. E. CASHMAN, the Owatonna nurseryman, called the Minnesota State Horticultural Society to order December 3 for its forty-sixth annual meeting. Among members of the trade who had places on the program were C. S. Harrison, York, Neb.; E. C. Hilborn, Valley City, N. D.; G. W. Strand, Taylor's Falls, Minn., and J. M. Underwood, Lake City, Minn.

THE Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., has been organized and incorporated, to grow a full line of nursery products. Propagating houses will be erected for bedding stock, shrubbery, etc. The company has purchased the business and stock of the Peninsula Nurseries, D. W. Babcock, proprietor, also 165 acres of fine land for nursery purposes, in addition to what is now used. The specialty will be the production of material for forestry and ornamental planting, seedlings of all kinds for transplanting and lining out. D. W. Babcock becomes manager and secretary of the company. Robert J. Sherwell is president and treasurer.

ONE of the novel sights in Mesa, Ariz., is the burlap house over the young orange nursery of Paul Baxter Beville. Mr. Beville says it required 16,000 yards of burlap, 1,500 standards, 4,000 feet of lumber, five miles of wire, two kegs of nails and 1,000 laths to complete the work. In addition to the cloth house there are 200 firepots ready for use should the weather become cold enough to require them. The actual labor in placing the cover equaled one man's work for eighty days. Under this roof there are 25,000 trees—orange, lemon, grape fruit and tangerine—4,500 of which will be put on the market the coming spring.

THE Secretary of Agriculture has given notice of a hearing, under the quarantine act, January 8, 1913, with regard to a proposed quarantine against the Mexican fruit fly.

At the recent meeting of the Southern Illinois Horticultural Society the nurserymen of the district took a prominent part, W. W. Thomas, of Anna, being elected first vice-president, C. F. Heaton, of New Burnside, second vice-president, and E. G. Mendenhall, of Kinmundy, secretary and treasurer.

THE GYPSY MOTH CONDITIONS.

In his annual report the Secretary of Agriculture gives the following review of the situation as regards the gypsy and brown-tail moths:

"There was during the year comparatively slight increase in the territory infested by these two destructive insects. The work of attempting to prevent the further spread has been continued in the way of clearing up roadsides, in the way of the inspection of all plants and plant products going out of the infested territory, by the study of the diseases of the gypsy moth, and by the continued importation and establishment of parasites and natural enemies of both species from abroad. Conditions within the infested territory continue to improve, and neither the gypsy moth nor the brown-tail moth is any longer the pest in the villages and towns of New England that it was even five years ago. In the woodlands the damage produced especially by the gypsy moth is still evident, but great progress has been made in the study of woodland conditions, and this study has apparently arrived at the point where the preservation of the forest areas in New England seems to be a decided possibility, even in the presence of the gypsy moth, and this may be brought about by a varied system of forest management, the details of which are being prepared for publication and general distribution. But one new isolated outbreak of the gypsy moth of any size

NEW SCARLET CARNATION The Herald

Winner over all other Scarlet carnations the past two years.

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, St. Paul, 1912.

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, Cleveland, 1912

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, Cincinnati, 1911

DESCRIPTION

Color:—Brilliant scarlet, good even shade.

Form:—Large 3 to 3½-inch, well rounded flowers, full center, scalloped edges, outer petals standing out well, showing the flower off to good advantage.

Calyx:—Strong, large calyx; never bursts, very much on the order of Harlowarden.

Habit:—Ideal, upright growth; deep green colored foliage, breaks readily from the base, making a rapid growth and producing flowers in remarkably short time. Easy to grow and propagate.

Stem:—Long and strong, not heavy, always stiff enough to hold the large flower perfectly erect.

Guarantee:—We guarantee this variety to fill a long felt want for a good all around commercial scarlet; one that will produce high grade flowers with long stems right from the beginning of the season to the end.

The Herald is the Best Commercial Scarlet for you to grow, because it will produce more perfect flowers in a season than any other scarlet and bring a higher price than any other; because the flowers are all perfect; stem stiff and keeps the longest. Compared with Enchantress it will produce one-third more blooms. No culls; no splits; no weak stems. All rooted cuttings guaranteed strong, well rooted and satisfactory in every respect.

Rooted Cuttings ready for immediate delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

Club Banquet.

Early in October Leman Bradford wagered that Taft would carry New York and Pennsylvania; Arthur J. Todd wagered no. Early in December Mr. Bradford most royally banqueted the Springfield Florists' Club at the greenhouses of the Springfield Floral Co., on the Urbana road. The office door was found to be securely locked and guarded and the window shades closely drawn, while the members, upon arrival, interested themselves in inspecting the spacious packing sheds, boiler cellar and other features of the equipment.

The spell of mystery was broken when the office door was thrown open and a most unique sight met the gaze of the expectant and hungry guests. On the walls were a variety of mottos, referring in jovial style to different members, to items on the bill of fare and to special rules of table etiquette for the occasion. The surprising stunt, however, was in the setting of the tables, which was accomplished almost exclusively by the use of flower pots sealed at the lower end. There were celery and crackers in 6-inch, oyster stew in 5-inch, nuts in 4-inch, pickles, sugar and roses in 3½-inch, coffee and water in 3-inch, olives and cigars in 2½-inch, salt and toothpicks in 2-inch. Just for variety, the sauerkraut course and the butter were served on miniature flats. Such tableware served to make every florist perfectly at home and the repast was most heartily enjoyed. Incidentally, the product of the Springfield Clay Mfg. Co. was freely complimented.

Mr. Bradford more than made good his wager, and was profusely congratulated upon the originality and aptness of his entertainment.

In the business session which followed, William Campbell and Howard Brown were elected to full membership and the name of Rama C. Campbell was proposed by the membership for action at the January meeting.

C. C. Leedle, of the program committee, invited suggestions by the members as to topics of interest for the coming meetings.

KANSAS CITY.The Market.

Business this week was only moderate, but no complaint can be made, as all the florists are getting their share. Apparently the price of stock holds well and will continue so until spring. Last year at this time roses were a glut in the market; this year there seems to be a good demand for them. Carnations in general are good. From the reports of the different growers, the plants are full of buds and will be in for Christmas without any trouble. The price of carnations is rather heavy for the present. Shoppers are buying Christmas presents and are not spending much on cut flowers. Roses are good and are holding their own. Some have come on the market this week showing strong effects of sulphur, but are fine in color.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown is in the hospital preparing for an operation to be performed the last of the week. The trade hopes he will speedily recover.

John Stevens lost his wife December 5 and the same day was taken to the hospital with typhoid fever. The trade extends its sympathy and wishes him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. T. A. Mosely, Kansas City, Kan., reports business good.

W. L. Rock Flower Co. has just commenced to cut into its heavy crop of carnations, which will last until after the holidays.

Henry Kusik & Co. have decorated their new store and are now getting in Christmas stock.

W. J. Barnes furnished a decoration for Emery, Bird & Thayer Dry Goods Co. last week, using over 300 plants. Among the plants used were sixty scarlet salvias, full of bloom, and in 7-inch pots. W. J. B.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION NORTHPORT

COLOR, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years, and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W. Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather.

The growth is wonderfully free and continuous, and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting, and a look at its record on the show table will indicate its value from an exhibition point of view.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

Business continues good. Funerals, weddings and a large number of social events are keeping flowers well cleaned up. Mums are about gone; still a few good ones are coming in. Seasonable flowers are plentiful, including roses, carnations, violets, Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, valley, etc., and the demand for all is excellent. We are having the finest kind of weather.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. is making a large cut and Geo. Blackman says business is good.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are enjoying a fine trade. The family has moved into its new residence. The grounds are being put in first-class shape and promise to be the finest in the city. Julius Niednagel is being boomed for councilman from the Seventh ward. He is a good Democrat and will do his duty as he sees it. This firm has opened a store in the Intermediate Life building. A large Northey ice-box has been put in.

Ben Kramer is having his usual good business.

Henry Seymour is cutting some good carnations. He has a variety of pot plants, which are looking well.

J. C. Elsperrmann has his carnations in fine shape for a Christmas crop. His pot plants, as well as cuttings in the sand, are in good condition.

Louis Fritsch says business is better than ever with him.

Miss Nellie Goodge is enjoying better health.

Royston & Fenton are cutting excellent Bride and Maid roses. Ivory is good, too.

E. L. Fenton has twelve White Wyandottes, all washed and ready for the poultry show. He expects to capture some of the blue ribbons.

Carnations!

A word to the grower of carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this, gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We have 150,000 cuttings ready for DECEMBER delivery, and we shall have 200,000 for JANUARY.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore . . . $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family; extremely free; the earliest scarlet to bloom; continues to the close of the season in fine color. Brings a big Christmas crop; won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Southampton Horticultural Society was held in Odd Fellows' hall December 7, President U. G. Agar in the chair. The business of having the society incorporated is going ahead slowly. It was decided to have a dinner for members January 2, and a committee of three was appointed to make the arrangements.

At a special meeting two weeks previously W. Gommersall, of Nyack, N. Y., had a splendid paper on soils and fertilizers. He was awarded a standing vote of thanks and on motion it was decided to have 200 copies of the paper printed and distributed to members of the society. W. M.

Normal, Ill.—George J. Foster, of this city, has been chosen as president of the Horticultural Society of Central Illinois. He was elected at the society's annual meeting, held here. The other officers elected were: Vice-president, A. V. Schermerhorn, Ridge Farm; second vice-president, O. M. McElwain, Bushnell; treasurer, C. C. Winn, Griggsville.

Cromwell, Conn.—Miss Emily Pierson, daughter of A. N. Pierson, was one of the passengers who were injured in a collision which occurred at Columbia, December 1, on the Air Line division of the New Haven railroad. It was reported that Miss Pierson was considerably bruised, that one of her hands was lacerated and that her face and neck were cut with glass, but that the physicians believed her recovery was certain.

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

- ❑ This giant forcing rose is an American seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories and has been tested in our houses for several years.
- ❑ It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.
- ❑ Its large, pointed buds, of a clear rose-pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.
- ❑ It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

...NEWS NOTES...

La Grange, Ill.—John Gale, the North Kensington avenue florist, has been at North Judson, Ind., for a few weeks, assisting his nephew, Paul C. Arnold. Mr. Arnold is continuing the business formerly conducted by his father, the late C. C. Arnold.

Oshkosh, Wis.—John K. Downs, an expert florist and horticulturist, who recently retired from the orange growing and land business in Florida, has come to this city for the purpose of erecting greenhouses and engaging in the wholesale flower trade. He proposes to invest $30,000 to start with, in a range that will comprise three houses, each 27x200. His principal crops will be roses, carnations and smilax. Sites for the new greenhouses are under consideration and Mr. Downs expects to be ready for business in the spring.

West Liberty, O.—Frank W. Goe, who has been manager for the last two years of the greenhouses and farm known as the Mad River Onion and Truck Farm, has rented the place and will hereafter run it in his own name. He supplies the local markets with lettuce in winter, and in spring he handles a full line of vegetable plants and all classes of bedding plants. He had an excellent crop of chrysanthemums this season and they found a ready sale in the nearby cut flower stores. He will give the greenhouses more attention hereafter and will not grow truck on so large a scale.

CIBOTIUM SCHIEDEI

CIBOTIUM SCHIEDEI

We are long at the present time on Cibotiums of the size which we usually sell at $4.00 each; we need the room for other stocks. They can be supplied either in 10-inch tubs or 10-inch pans, and as long as the surplus lasts they will be furnished at the special price of $2.50 each. This is a special bargain and a chance to secure exceptional value in a good holiday plant. Order quick if you want them, as this offer will be withdrawn as soon as the surplus has been reduced.

In other regular sizes we can supply splendid 6-inch pots at $1.50 each and handsome specimens in 12-inch tubs at $6.00 each.

THE NEW GLORY FERN

ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE RUHM VON MORDRECHT

We have a splendid lot of 3-inch pots of this new Fern, which are hard to tell apart from Adiantum Farleyense, nice stock for making up Christmas work, which we are selling at $2.00 per dozen, $15.00 per 100, a trifle more than one-half of what Farleyense would cost, and a plant that will not go to pieces with you in a few days, and is as hardy as Croweanum or Hybridum.

ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE

Our usual grade of 4 and 5-inch pots, the fours at 40 cts.; the fives at 70 cts. each.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Stock of every description, with the exception of white roses, is scarce. Chrysanthemums are about on their last legs. Carnations are almost unheard of and according to present indications this flower will be scarce for Christmas. Roses are also short and not equal to the local demand, although trade has fallen off somewhat since Thanksgiving. Valley is not any too plentiful and lilies are scarce. Monday morning, December 9, found the market almost void of stock and the coolers at all the stores more or less empty. Many novelties in Christmas greens are available at the wholesalers'. The outlook is exceptionally bright for a good Christmas trade. Prosperity is the word all about town.

Various Notes.

John Breitmeyer's Sons had the decorations for the Assembly ball, in the Hotel Ponchartrain. Mr. Danzer, their decorator, fairly outdid himself.

A limousine, running into the rear of E. A. Fetter's fine new delivery car, damaged it to the extent of about $50. Fortunately, no one was hurt in the accident.

Robert Jean was considerably worried December 8 over the loss of a large shipment of roses and other stock from Kalamazoo.

Every available auto in the city, convertible into a delivery car, has been already engaged for the holidays. Retailers who left this to the last minute are now decidedly up against it.

There is a rumor to the effect that a retail flower store will be opened in the new Broadway theater building within the next few weeks. H. S.

Idaho Falls, Idaho.—G. H. Lawrence has established a downtown salesroom.

Nashville, Mich.—John Means has erected a range of greenhouses here and will grow both flowers and vegetables for the market. The range consists of three houses, besides the office and boiler shed.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There was plenty of rain this week, continuing for about four days, after which the weather began to get much cooler. The temperature dropped to about 34 degrees. However, trade is still holding its own, in spite of the poor outlook. There has been a great deal of funeral work and this has kept everybody hustling. The retail stores are beginning to show signs of preparation for Christmas. Many pot plants of holly are to be seen. Carnations are beginning to come on and are of good quality, but the demand more than equals the supply, especially for the whites. Roses seem to be plentiful, with a little advance in price. American Beauties, unlike the teas, are somewhat scarce and are selling at a high figure. The sale of potted plants has been quite heavy, and will probably increase as we near the holidays. Violets and lily of the valley are in brisk demand. Orchids are not plentiful, but there are enough of them to go around. All other flowers are going well at the usual figures. Good crops are in sight for the holiday trade. The prophets are figuring to get only moderate prices this season.

Various Notes.

F. C. Bauer has a fine show house of potted plants of various kinds in readiness for Christmas.

L. A. H. Klein is cutting some fine tea roses, which are easily disposed of.

M. Thau & Co. are growing a fine lot of Victory carnations, which surely ought to create a demand for the holidays.

H. Fortuber, formerly connected with the Baltimore Florists' Exchange, now is engaged in the retail florists' business and is doing well. S. W.

Natchez, Miss.—Chris Maier & Bro. have completed their new greenhouse, boiler house and workroom. The two brothers are experienced landscape gardeners as well as florists.

Midland, Mich.—W. E. Thayer has just completed a new greenhouse, 20x100, which he will use for lettuce and radishes, as he finds that all the space in his former houses will be required for flowers.

Binghamton, N. Y.—W. H. Graham has disposed of his flower business here, with the intention of removing to Little Falls, N. Y., and taking charge of the business of his brother, J. O. Graham, in that city. The brother in Little Falls has been in ill health for several weeks and has needed assistance. W. H. Graham has been in the trade here nearly twenty years, for five years of that time being in partnership with his brother.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green.

These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When In Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

MANHEIM, PA.

The Lancaster County Forists' Club made its first visit to this town November 30. Those who came from Lancaster were: Rudolph Nagle, Harry Rohrer, Lemon Landis, Albert M. Herr, Abraham Rohrer, F. Spinner, D. D. Schultz, Jacob Fleer and Frank Bachler. From other towns came: B. J. Wiggins, New York; W. R. Denlinger, Vintage; Amos Rohrer, Strasburg; H. B. Weaver, Birdinhand; Elmer Weaver, Ronks; James Brown, Coatsville; John Toland, Sadsburyville; Henry Ginder and Benjamin Wike.

The first call was at the establishment of Munroe H. Hostetter, the second at Phares Hostetter's, and the third at E. P. Hostetter's. They all grow sweet peas, snapdragons, carnations and baby primrose for the wholesale market. The quality of the stock was high for sweet peas and by no means low for the other stock grown. At E. P. Hostetter's, the largest of the three places, the smallest house being 200 feet long, there were three houses of Sprenger, one of plumosus and one of mignonette, the balance of the place being devoted to sweet peas, snapdragon, carnations and baby primroses, of which he has a fine white. His 400-foot King house was an eye-opener to some of the visitors. A fine lunch was served by the three Hostettters and their wives, assisted by Mrs. Burkholder and Miss Flory. A few speeches of appreciation followed. A. M. H.

Holland, Mich.—Henry Ebelink is building another greenhouse, which will connect two of his former houses.

Be Successful This Christmas

Don't be defeated by buying somewhere else. It is now getting too late to monkey around. There are signs of a big demand for Christmas Plants. We were not slow in looking forward by raising an immense stock of Choice Christmas Novelties, Godfrey Aschmann's quality, such as described below, now in prime condition for the holidays, ready for immediate shipment. This is our catalogue—we have no other prices; so save unnecessary correspondence. While other firms took life easy during the summer and fall, Godfrey Aschmann looked forward and advertised to the extent of $100.00 per month, clearing the path for himself for the Holiday season now here.

Cheap, Good, Reliable. Don't be deceived—be on the lookout! Buy only from the man who is well known to be in a position to give you good bargains and good stock. Can handle largest order on short notice.

Present View of a house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in bloom and bud for Christmas, ready for shipment.

ARAUCARIA—THE SUBSTITUTE FOR A CHRISTMAS TREE

Christmas trees are scarce this year. I know a good substitute. Just look at the picture above. Doesn't it look nice? It is an Araucaria Excelsa in Christmas attire, out of Godfrey Aschmann's Araucaria house. A beauty, it's everlasting green will please and will amuse the dear little ones. It will take less room than a Christmas tree and will serve two purposes; first, on the Christmas table, second, as an ornamental tree in the parlor after the holiday. We have them in all sizes, 5, 5½, 6 or 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 tiers, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 25, 30, 40 to 50 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each; some as low as 40c each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa specimen plants, 28, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

All Plants Must Travel at Purchaser's Risk Only. Cash With Order, Please. All Plants 25 at 100 Rate. Please state if in or out of pots.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. One of many reports: "Pansies arrived in good condition and are much better than any received from any other grower. Send me 1,500 more."—J. H. Booth, Chester, Pa. Large lot of plants protected from freezing. Shipped any time from now on. Delivery in good condition guaranteed. Hardy field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Boddington, the Advance Co. and the Stumpp & Walter Co. will all take large blocks of space, but have not definitely decided on the location or the amount of space they will require.

The receipt of further special prizes is reported by Chairman Charles H. Totty, among them the following:

From the Missouri Botanic Garden, St. Louis, a cash prize of $500 for the most meritorious new plant exhibited, the plant to be judged as to its economical value or aesthetic qualifications, or both, and to possess characteristics making it distinctly different from, or an improvement over similar plants previously grown.

From the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, $25 for the best fifty feet of geraniums and $25 for the best fifty feet of bedding plants other than geraniums.

Joplin, Mo.—Frank and Harold Treganza, of this city, have purchased the greenhouses at 534 North Moffet avenue, formerly conducted by the late David A. Graham. The new owners are making plans for a number of improvements.

Hartford, Conn.—J. Albert Brodrib has been engaged in litigation with the city on account of the city's proposal to extend Cemetery street. As Mr. Brodrib's greenhouses are situated at the head of this street, the opening of the street would necessitate the removal of the houses, but Mr. Brodrib has sued for a permanent injunction restraining the city from disturbing his property.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

WHAT'S THE USE.

The manufacturer of an oil burner used by many western florists says: "Since the Standard Oil Co. has been brought to time (Oh! Oh!) the good people are having a harvest in oils, there only being a raise of 6½ cents a gallon on gasoline and 3 cents to 6 cents on fuel oil. One more haul to the carpet and users of gasoline will have to resort to grain alcohol. Only a few can get fuel oil at any price, and the oil companies refuse to make any contracts, even at market price at time of delivery, to guarantee delivery. Now what is the use of an oil burner?"

UNDERGROUND STEAM CONDUIT.

My present place consists of about 18,000 feet of glass, and I am planning a new place across the road, the boiler-room floor of which will be about twenty-five feet lower than the present place and 380 feet distant from it. Will it be practicable to heat the present place from the new? If so, what kind of conduit would you suggest, and what size of flow and return? The present place will be devoted to carnations and peas, the new place to roses. I am located in northern Maryland.

J. P. K.

There will be no trouble in heating the present range of greenhouses from the new heating plant, and there will be relatively little loss of heat, especially if the steam is carried in the conduit at a pressure of forty to eighty pounds, with a pressure-reducing valve on the main where it enters the greenhouses. With the fall that can be given the return, there will be no difficulty in returning the water by gravity and a pressure of five to seven pounds will answer.

Even with low pressure, the loss of heat by radiation will not be great if the pipes are properly insulated. For the main feed pipe, using low pressure, the size need not be more than 4-inch, and a 3-inch main will answer if the steam is under high pressure. It will be well to use a 2-inch pipe for the return water.

A concrete conduit will not be particularly expensive and will prove quite satisfactory. The walls need not be more than three inches thick, and two inches will answer for the upper edges of the sides. Concrete slabs can be used as a covering. To prevent radiation from the pipes, they should be enclosed in asbestos pipe covering. While a smaller conduit might be used, to permit the mains to run side by side and give plenty of room for putting on the covering, a width of fifteen inches is desirable, with a depth of about twelve inches.

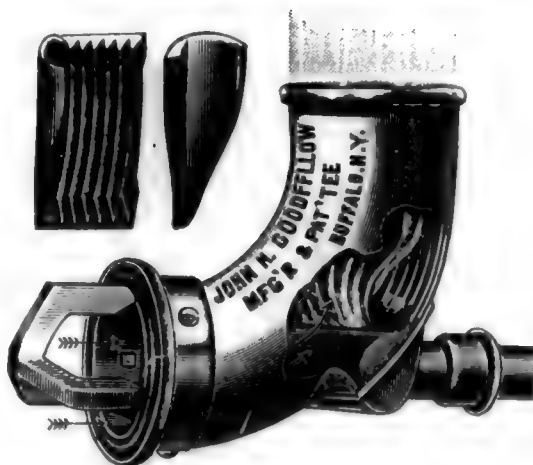

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a Cottage boiler, with a grate 20x30 inches. Will you kindly tell me how much 1½-inch pipe it will heat, with a 1½-inch feed 150 feet long; that is, from the boiler to the end of the greenhouse? My location is southeastern Pennsylvania. C. A.

A Cottage boiler of the size mentioned should handle 1,000 linear feet of 1½-inch steam radiation, in addition to seventy-five square feet of radiation in the main.

IN WASHINGTON STATE.

TO MAINTAIN AN EVEN TEMPERATURE in your greenhouses, use a Foster Pressure Regulator CLASS "Q"

That's the class you want. Attach this simple device to the steam main just inside of your greenhouse and obtain the exact temperature desired by turning the adjusting nut "K" (see illustration) to the "right" for greater heat, to the "left" for less. At whatever pressure the valve is "set," the pressure at all times will be absolutely constant. Sizes 3/4-inch to 2-inch have composition bodies; larger sizes, to and including 10-inch, iron body, composition mounted.

As an expert in your line, let us talk it over, as experts in ours. We recommend, we aid you in the selection of the proper size, and should you require higher pressure than 15 lbs., the most suitable type of our other styles of pressure Regulators would be recommended.

of the house and connecting it with eight 2-inch returns, which can be carried either on the walls or under the benches, or both. A boiler rated for 300 square feet of radiation, and with a grate twenty inches in diameter, should heat the house easily.

FEED PUMP AND RECEIVER.

Please have your heating expert give me some information with reference to the kind of steam pump and receiver for the circulation of steam and for receiving the condensation which is returned to the boiler. What size of apparatus would be sufficient for 25,000 square feet of glass? The engineer who installed the boiler stated that the receiver of the pump should be three feet below the level of the pump. Please give me full information about the kind of pump, the size, installation, etc.

M. L.

The temperature at which the houses are to be kept is not given; neither is the pressure to be maintained in the system stated. Both of these considerations would have much to do with the size and kind of pump to be used. It is probable that the range described can be heated by means of 5,000 square feet of radiating surface, and if a steam pressure of five or six pounds is maintained a duplex boiler feed pump rated as 3-2-4 would be of sufficient capacity to return the water to the boiler. This would have a steam cylinder three inches in diameter; the water cylinder would have a diameter of two inches, and the length of the stroke would be four inches. A 4-2½-6 single cylinder pump could also be used, or an electric pump might be installed.

The reservoir to receive the water from the coils should be low enough so that they would drain by gravity. A steel tank holding five barrels will answer for a heating plant of this size, which will evaporate 100 to 120 gallons of water per hour.

For an up-to-date arrangement a self-contained automatic pump and receiver should be used. With the automatic feed a comparatively small receiver will answer; a capacity of twenty to twenty-five gallons will be sufficient. Whether self-contained or not, the receiver should be on a level with, or above the pump, as hot water cannot be lifted by suction. While most of the self-contained pumps have the reservoirs from one to two feet above the cylinders of the pump, it is only necessary to have sufficient head for the water to flow to the pumps by gravity.

These pumps are automatic in their action. They have a float in the re-

The Market.

The Consumers' League and the Chamber of Commerce have so emphasized the idea of early Christmas shopping that the large stores decorated as early as December 1. This naturally means that the florists were benefited by the early start on decorations. The flower shops also have taken on a Christmas look much earlier this year and the poinsettia and other red are much in evidence. This idea is bound to create a better demand for our product and we hope to feel the effect in the next two weeks. An early start is always a big advantage to any business, and we can easily see how in the past we have confined our business to too short a space. The prospects for stock are good, with the exception of carnations, which are scarce, perhaps more so than other years. Plants, however, are available and stock this year looks promising. Begonias have sold well and will no doubt be in big demand for the holidays. The poinsettia in pans is the big feature with everyone.

Various Notes.

An unfortunate accident happened to J. Wiese while on his way home from the market a few days ago. As he turned into the street with the horse and wagon, two young fellows driving an auto ran squarely into the horse's head, breaking its neck and throwing the boys some distance. As it happened, no one was hurt to any extent except the horse, which, of course, was killed. Mr. Wiese says it was the closest he has ever been to cashing his accident policy and considers it remarkable that he was not killed.

Miss Schultz, of Tonawanda, has recovered from a severe attack of typhoid.

HOUSTON, TEX.

Houston has two new florists. The Brazos Greenhouses have been opened by Mr. Kosch, lately of Cornell University. They have bright prospects. The Forestdale Nurseries have just opened an up-to-date store in the business section of town and business has started off with a rush. In fact, business with all the florists has been especially good and they are all anticipating a heavy business this season.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With the advance of the season a steady increase in business is noticeable, especially in the demand for choice cut flowers. Weddings, receptions and an occasional big funeral help to clean out the daily shipments of cut flowers from out of town. In honor of the officers of four big battle-ships, visiting the city from November 27 to December 3, many social functions were given, adding some extra work for the retailers. Some of the stores are beginning to put on their holiday attire. Besides the elegant displays of cut flowers, all kinds of seasonable flowering plants are placed on view. The supply of flowering and foliage plants for the Christmas and New Year's trade is about the same as in other years. Some extra fine Petrick azaleas and Gloire de Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias can be seen.

So far there has been only a light frost in the latter part of November, doing no damage to outdoor flowers, such as roses, poinsettias, sweet peas, etc. Although the weather at present is too warm for bulbous stock, especially hyacinths, several growers began to cut their Paper White narcissi December 10, cutting mostly either from bulbs planted in boxes or in coldframes with sash coverings.

The landscape gardeners are busy sowing winter grass and replanting carpet and other summer beds with all kinds of flowering plants for winter and spring. Many new gardens, big and small, have been laid out during the year, but they consist chiefly of a lawn and a few palms; not much money was spent for attractive beds, either in the foliage or flowering line.

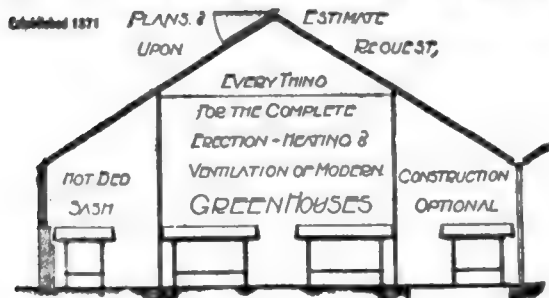

Various Notes.

Mrs. Carrie Rehm reports a continuously good business. Peter Noordam, who has charge of her place, keeps it always in fine shape and exceedingly attractive.

Jacob Thomas is well satisfied with his share of work. He disposes of all he grows at fair prices. R. E.

New Castle, Ind.—Wm. Dittman has a nice crop of Beauties, with splendid prospects for a Christmas cut. Charles E. Holland is one of his growers.

STORM-TIGHT AND RAIN-PROOF IN... 30 SECONDS!

This is the famous "Blizzard" Front in actual use, while a furious storm is raging.

With the handy "Blizzard" in place, you can drive in comfort, regardless of snow, rain, wind or cold.

It will keep out every drop of rain and no matter if it is zero weather, the heat of your body will keep the inside of the buggy as comfortable as your "den" at home. No foot-warmers or extra robes necessary. Notice the large window. It is 12x20 inches and made of tough, transparent celluloid, and a side light on each side.

The line pocket is 14 inches wide, and so strongly reinforced with metal that it cannot tear out or sag. Allows you perfect control of the horse.

You can quickly open the "Blizzard" at either side and get in or out with ease.

THE "BLIZZARD" FRONT

equalizes the strain on the buggy top and prevents it from rattling. It is made of Blizzard Cloth and will last as long as the top.

Why risk the dangers of exposure—Rheumatism, Colds, Pneumonia? Why not drive in comfort?

The "Blizzard" Front sells for $3.50. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship you one on receipt of price. Your money refunded if not exactly as represented. Write for attractive "Blizzard" booklet today. We send it free.

THE MT. GILEAD POTTERY CO., Mt. Gilead, Ohio

MOOSIC, PA.

A visit to Wm. MacDonald's extensive plant shows that Mr. MacDonald is maintaining his reputation as a grower. His carnations, numbering 22,000, can all be seen with one view of the eye; they are all tied and are standing in fine shape, and are thickly studded with buds, equally distributed over the large expanse. He has under cultivation the three Enchantress varieties, Dorothy Gordon, Apple Blossom, Beacon and Harlowarden. These varieties seem better suited to his soil and conditions than any others he has ever tried. He has about 30,000 geraniums, a quantity of verbenas and many other plants coming on for the spring work; also, a host of plants for Christmas and Easter store trade, having some particularly well grown poinsettias, mostly potted with ferns. Cyclamens are coming on finely and Primula obconica already is in first-class shape for immediate marketing. He will have a magnificent supply of azaleas for the holiday trade and his ferns are in the pink of condition. Mr. MacDonald has just completed a large shed of part wood and part glass to run his auto truck under for loading, storing of soil and for holding plants that are a little advanced.

Prospects for Christmas trade are exceptionally bright; all industries and particularly the mines are working to their full capacity. In all probability there is not an idle man in the Lackawanna or Wyoming valleys. G. R. C.

West Park, O.—The firm of Robt. Kegg's Sons, conducted for years by Robt. J. Kegg, one of the oldest growers in Cleveland, and now by his sons T. J. and Robt. J., Jr., are adding 5,000 feet of glass to the present establishment, comprising in all about 25,000 square feet of glass.

RIGHT at the start, get it out of your mind that our Curved Eave is an imitation or infringement of any other Curved Eave. It absolutely is not. It's an entirely different construction from any others. In detail it is the same as our first Curved Eave, which was originated by us over nine years ago and which was the first Flat Rafter Curved Eave construction ever constructed by any greenhouse builder. From the first it was simplicity itself—to-day it is still the same strong, neat, light eave, entirely devoid of any cumbersome reinforcement fittings.

It's economically adaptable for either commercial or private greenhouses.

The trade shows signs of opening up after the brief lull which followed the Thanksgiving rush. Everyone is busy getting ready for the Christmas holiday trade and additional help is being put on at most of the stores. Christmas greens are coming in good shape. The holly is probably a little better this year than last, carrying more berries.

Mums are getting to the tail end of the season, but a few good ones remain. Carnations are still scarce in all varieties. Roses are good, especially Killarney, White Killarney, Milady, Melody, Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland and Lady Hillingdon. Easter lilies are more plentiful. Callas are scarce. Violets are good. Valley is of good quality.

Various Notes.

The West Main street store of Salter Bros. is being repainted and will look spick and span for the holidays. The other night someone sneaked in over the transom and robbed the cash register.

George Boucher has ordered a new automobile for delivery work. For the Christmas trade he has a large supply of fine poinsettias. Cincinnati begonias and cyclamens are coming on.

H. P. Neun had a large wedding decoration last week at the Central Presbyterian church. H. B. Jones, of the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, O., made up the eight or nine bouquets.

E. C. Armbrust, formerly of J. B. Keller Sons, is now at Springfield, Mass.

Chas. H. Vick has been called to serve on the trial jury. S. A.

MONTREAL, QUE.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club commemorated its Twenty-fifth Anniversary at a banquet held in Cooper's restaurant November 29. The chair was occupied by Joseph Bennett, of Lachine, the first president of the club. One of the features of the evening was the exhibition of Milady rose from A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. Among those present were: Walter Muston, president of the Canadian Horticultural Association; Hermann Simmers, of Toronto, and H. B. Cowan, of Peterboro; Messrs. J. Bennett, J. Doyle, A. Wilshire, John Eddy, Geo. Higgin, John Perrin, John Dunbar, Geo. Tussell and J. Meyer.

You Can't Mistake a U-Bar House

This is the U-Bar—the Bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the famous greenhouses they are.

The very minute you see a U-Bar you know it is a U-Bar. It has that U-Bar light airiness about it—that nicety of detail and perfection of finish that stamps it as the finest of greenhouses. Everybody knows they can't be equalled for growing houses, and that's what you want houses for. Don't make the mistake of getting a house that looks like the U-Bar; have a U-Bar and then you know you have the best house. Glad to send you a catalogue if you will write for it.

Give Your Plants All the Sun

You can do so by simply using the SUN-LIGHT DOUBLE-GLASS SASHES on your hot-beds and cold-frames. A 3/8-inch layer of dry air between the layers of glass affords ample protection. No mats or other covering ever needed.

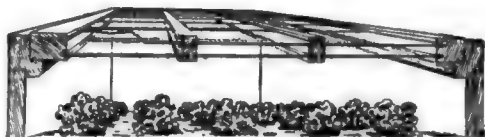

They let in all the light and all the heat that the sun's rays carry. But they never permit the stored heat to escape or the outside cold to enter.

With these sash half the labor and cost are saved, and far better and earlier plants secured. They give you flowers and vegetables when they are luxuries.

Many thousands giving perfect service.

"LEST YOU FORGET,"

we want you to know that we make a wood gutter, and a good one, too. It combines all the good points of other wood gutters,

"AND THEN SOME"

NOTE that the condensation and drip run down the sides and sloping bottom to a drip pan placed under the gutter, where it makes no shade

We know it will do that, for we have tried it. This gutter lends itself to an outside wall as an eave most admirably

GREENHOUSE GLASS

It is the ambition of every grower to be successful, and while considerable thought is given to the style of greenhouse to be built,

WHAT OF THE GLASS?

There are a number of important things to be considered in purchasing material of this kind, and as we are the largest jobbers of greenhouse glass in the world, particular care is taken to have the very best BRANDS of glass manufactured shipped on each order. We have made a careful study of this one point, having supplied some of the largest and most successful growers in the country.

In sending orders, by mail or telegraph, please be explicit in stating either length or price of Roses wanted, as otherwise we can only use our best judgment in an exceedingly busy time and can not afterward entertain complaints. On account of every customer calling for extra quantities of flowers at the Holidays, we frequently find it advantageous to ship part of an order and let the balance follow on a later train. Unless customers designate the train stock is to be shipped on, we use our best judgment in such matters, in order that every customer may get all the flowers he wants. No complaints entertained where definite shipping instructions do not accompany the order.

8-inch pots, very heavy.....$24, $30 and $36 per doz.

BEGONIA LONSDALE.

We have a large stock of this light sport at the same prices as quoted above for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant, and holding the flowers much better. The color is a little lighter than the original Lorraine.

BEGONIA GLORY OF CINCINNATI.

This variety is endorsed by all the leading retail florists and will in time displace Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Do not overlook this grand plant when placing your order for Christmas.

5 inch and 5½-inch pots, strong plants.....$5 each, $50 a doz., $300 per 100

DRACAENAS.

There is no variety of foliage plant as attractive as the highly colored Dracaenas. The small and medium sizes can be used to great advantage in making up the popular Christmas baskets, while the large specimens have always been in great demand for decorative purposes. We are now growing more Dracaenas, in greater variety, than any firm in this country. Following is a list of varieties with descriptions.

DRACAENA MASSANGIANA.

The variety with the golden stripe down the center of the leaf. This handsome plant is the best of all Dracaenas for the house. We have an exceptionally large stock, well colored, and of the very highest quality.
6-inch pots.....$15 and $18 per doz.
8-inch pots.....$2 and $2.50 each

DRACAENA FRAGRANS.

6-inch pots.....$6 and $9 per doz.
9-inch pots, very heavy.....$24 per doz.
8-inch tubs.....$18 per doz.

DRACAENA LORD WOLSELEY.

One of the very best varieties for Christmas, being bright red in color.
2-inch pots.....$12 per 100
3-inch pots, heavy.....$25 per 100
4-inch pots, heavy.....$35 per 100

DRACAENA TERMINALIS.

Exceptionally well colored.
2½-inch pots.....$10 per 100; $90 per 1000
3-inch pots.....$20 per 100
4-inch pots, strong plants.....$30 and $35 per 100

DRACAENA GODSEFFIANA.

Fine for baskets.
3-inch pots.....$15 per 100
4-inch pots.....$25 per 100

DRACAENA DESMETIANA.

This is one of the most desirable of the broad leaf varieties, a strong vigorous grower, with bold, dark green foliage which becomes beautifully suffused and variegated. Our stock is exceptionally fine for Christmas.
7-inch and 8-inch pots.....$2, $2.50, $3 and $3.50 each

DRACAENA BRONZE BEAUTY.

This variety was offered three years ago with Dracaena Mandalana by the introducer, Wm. A. Manda, and is the strongest growing Dracaena we have. Although not as highly colored as Dracaena Desmetiana, we have found it wonderfully durable as a house plant. We offer splendid specimens.
8-inch, 9-inch and 10-inch pots.....$3, $3.50, $5 and $6 each

PHOENIX ROEBELENI.

This is unquestionably one of the great palms of the future, combining the grace of a Cocos Weddelliana with the hardiness of a Kentia. It will prove an invaluable plant for the house. Our stock in the following sizes is unusually fine.
6-inch pots.....$1.25 each
10-inch and 12-inch tubs, specimen plants.....$5, $6, $7.50, $10 and $12.50 each

PANDANUS VEITCHII.

Well colored plants.
2½-inch and 3-inch pots.....$30 per 100
4-inch pots.....$6 per doz.; $45 per 100
5-inch pots.....$9 per doz.; $70 per 100
6-inch pots.....$12 per doz.; $90 per 100
7-inch pots.....$15 and $18 per doz.
8-inch pots.....$24 and $30 per doz.
Large specimen plants, fine for decorating.....$3.50, $4 and $5 each

ABIES NORDMANNIANA.

75c, $1 and $1.25 each.
In tubs, very large.....$2.50 each

ADIANTUM HYBRIDUM.

The best variety for either pot plants or for cut fronds.
3-inch pots.....$10 per 100
6-inch pots.....$6 per doz.; $45 per 100
8-inch pots.....$12 and $15 per doz.
10-inch and 11-inch tubs.....$18 and $24 per doz.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS NANUS.

3-inch pots, very heavy plants.....$7 per 100; $65 per 1000

NEPHROLEPIS IN VARIETY.

We are now the largest growers of Nephrolepis Ferns in the country, in the following varieties; in fact, we are headquarters for them. The demand increases each year and it is our aim to have

EVERY VARIETY IN NEPHROLEPIS

IN EVERY SIZE
EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

May we have your Christmas orders on Ferns? Excellent values in all sizes. Our entire stock, in all sizes, are all pot grown plants.

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI.

This is an ideal crested fern, holding the same relation to all other crested varieties that the Neph. Scottii holds to the old Boston.
2½-inch pots.....$8 per 100, $50 per 1000
4-inch pots.....$20 per 100
8-inch pans, heavy.....$12 and $15 per doz.

Branch plants, exceptionally fine.....$2, $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4 and $5 each

FICUS CHAUVIERI.

This is an old variety, taken up again by us. We believe we have the only stock of this variety in the country. It is in a class with the old Elastica, being very hardy and doing equally well for both inside and outside decoration. This plant has already given great satisfaction.
6-inch pots, 18 inches high.....$12 per doz.
Large plants.....$1.50, $2 and $2.50 each

KENTIAS.

Strong stock for growing on.

THE ART OF FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

By FRED C. W. BROWN

DOUBLE INTEREST DESIGNS.

The Standing Harp.

In the preceding articles of this series we have restricted ourselves to the use of the wreath, and the reason for so doing is that the simple and proportionate lines of a wreath lend themselves readily to the explanations we have tried to present. Now we are going to proceed into a little wider field and introduce what are called double interest designs.

By a double interest design we mean a form such as the standing harp shown in the illustration, with its double subject of form and base. In this class of designs are included all the standing forms, such as wreaths and crosses with a base, gates ajar, broken columns, etc. In these designs we find our artistic skill taxed to its limit to produce a pleasing effect, a result that does not border on the grotesque.

Body and Base.

If you will analyze one of these double interest designs you will find they are all composed of two strongly opposing factors, the main interest or body, and the foundation or base, as exemplified in the picture of the standing harp. You will plainly see that we have two distinct subjects and you will readily recognize that the identity and purpose of each must be kept apparent. Just here is where the skill of the designer is called into play.

We have the harp proper as our main attraction and the base as our direct opposition or double interest. So let us turn to the rules and see what is our proper and natural course in such an instance as this. Let us select our rule from the book of common sense and reason.

A Third Factor.

Where there are two strongly opposing factors, then a third factor, if properly chosen, will almost always unite the two into a harmonious whole. We have identified our two factors in

Mr. Brown will be pleased to answer, as this series of articles progresses, any criticisms or questions that may occur to his readers. The first article of the series was printed in the issue of October 10. The next installment will appear in an early issue.

the harp proper and the base. As explained before, the point of greatest opposition is the point of greatest interest or attraction, so we easily recognize this to be the junction point of our two interests, and we qualify and combine them with the cluster of lilies as our third factor.

We have intensified this interest of our design. Here, again, is where the artist demonstrates his skill, for it should be clear that up to the time of placing the lily high light the work was practically mechanical and required no great exercise of ingenuity.

Is the Meaning Clear?

Whether we have succeeded in telling a story with our lily high light is the question. Our desire was to tell of a harp of flowers on a properly proportioned base, with a cluster of lilies growing up and on the harp. If our meaning is clear to you, whether you are educated or uneducated in the theory of art, then our design is artistic—more artistic, at least, than if its two main bodies had merely been connected by the wire support, with a piece of smilax or green twisted around it.

Liberty Limited by Law.

There is undoubtedly room for a great amount of controversy as to the treatment of these double interest designs. Your manner of arrangement is limited only by your ability to originate different methods of conveying the combined principle of the harp on a base. The height of your power is reflected in the pleasing effect you produce by your finished article. Your ways and means are almost unlimited, but there are one or two essential features that you must not forget. Remember that you are making a harp ON a base, not a harp AND a base, and you may thus avoid two of the most common faults.

Two Mistakes.

As already intimated, sometimes the two distinct interests are well and carefully arranged, but there is no attempt made to harmonize them. The proportion is pleasing, but the harp stands clear of the base and is connected only by a thin wire, partly concealed with ferns, but giving the design, viewed at the distance of a few feet, the appearance of "Mohammed's coffin," suspended in midair.

Then, again, you must not make your

point by the prominence of our lilies. While we might have subdued it by the use of ferns and leaves in the background, instead of the lilies, we would then have made the design more objectionable by the unrelieved complication of the two interests. So we find that, with our harp and our base distinct, we have harmonized them by the third factor, the lilies. And by making the cluster prominent and using it as our connecting link, we have greatly reduced the complicated double interest

The height of your power is reflected in the pleasing effect you produce by your finished article. Your ways and means are almost unlimited, but there are one or two essential features that you must not forget. Remember that you are making a harp ON a base, not a harp AND a base, and you may thus avoid two of the most common faults.

Two Mistakes.

As already intimated, sometimes the two distinct interests are well and carefully arranged, but there is no attempt made to harmonize them. The proportion is pleasing, but the harp stands clear of the base and is connected only by a thin wire, partly concealed with ferns, but giving the design, viewed at the distance of a few feet, the appearance of "Mohammed's coffin," suspended in midair.

Then, again, you must not make your

point by the prominence of our lilies. While we might have subdued it by the use of ferns and leaves in the background, instead of the lilies, we would then have made the design more objectionable by the unrelieved complication of the two interests. So we find that, with our harp and our base distinct, we have harmonized them by the third factor, the lilies. And by making the cluster prominent and using it as our connecting link, we have greatly reduced the complicated double interest two interests run together so closely as to obscure the identity of either one. They must have relative and proportionate value; they must be simple and distinct and show reason for their existence.

There must be harmony between them, both in proportionate value and in color.

The Final Test.

If, when you have finished your design, a child just old enough to recognize the meaning of the main form, or a grown person uneducated in the principles of art, looks at your work and says, "It is a pretty harp of flowers, with lilies growing up and on it," and if you have pleased the eye with color and proportion and left a pleasant, lasting impression, then the chances are ninety-nine in a hundred that you have been artistic and that your work will stand the closest scrutiny of those versed in the accepted theories of the schools of art.

We shall deal further with these double interest and large designs in our next installment.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Frankfort, Ky.—With reference to the assignment of Louis D. Singer, already reported in The Review, the following announcement has been issued by D. L. Hazelrigg, the assignee: "Pursuant to orders of court, I will on December 20, 1912, at the Court-house door at Frankfort, Ky., sell the greenhouse stock, plants and fixtures to the highest and best bidder."

Wisbech, England.—J. W. Cross, bulb and seed merchant, recently laid his affairs before his creditors, with the result that a deed of assignment was executed. The statement showed liabilities of approximately $43,000 and assets of $13,300. The chairman of the meeting said he had always found Mr. Cross straightforward, although a somewhat optimistic and sanguine man. He thought it said a great deal for him that he made no claim on behalf of his wife, but put the whole matter in their hands. The only thing they could do was to try to realize the estate to the best benefit they could. These remarks were generally endorsed. Mr. Cross is a brother of Eli Cross, a florist at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Chicago, Ill.—Last week a petition for the appointment of a receiver was filed by Koropp, Inc., of which Leopold Koropp is the head, and the County Court named Charles Christmann to take charge of the assets and to continue the business under bond for the benefit of the creditors. The schedule of liabilities shows:

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

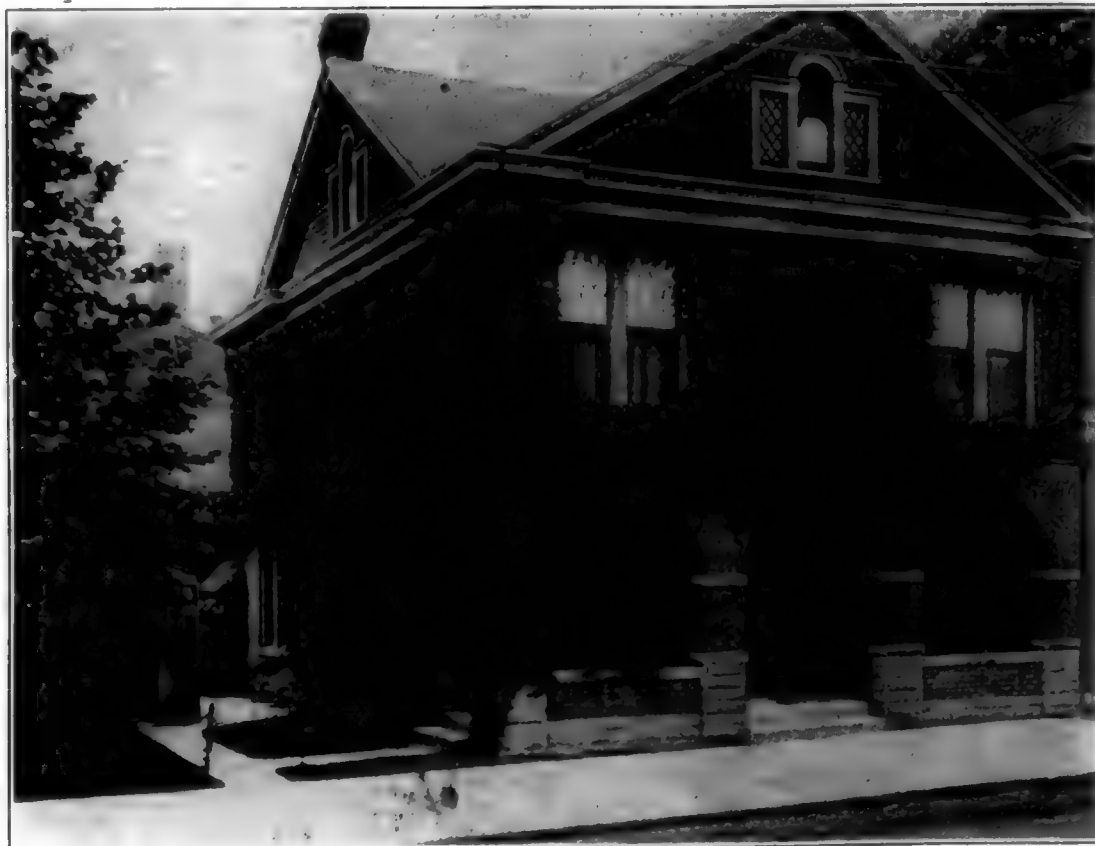

Notice is hereby given that the name of Gladiolus Dawn, listed for several years by John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., has been changed to Dawnray. This change has been made voluntarily by Mr. Childs to facilitate the work of the nomenclature committee. L. Merton Gage, Sec'y.

AMPELOPSIS VEITCHII.

The accompanying illustration may be of interest in view of the recent articles on the best American vine. It shows Ampelopsis Veitchii covering two sides of the residence of J. T. Herdegen, the florist at Aurora, Ind. The vine attracts much attention, the dwelling being located on the main business street of the city. The building at the right of the residence, just showing in the picture, is the grocery of Herdegen Bros., where flowers also are sold. At the left are the greenhouses of Mr. Herdegen. The hanging baskets shown in the picture are Boston ferns and Asparagus Sprengeri.

Cedar Keys, Fla.—It is reported that the United States Palm Co. intends to open a factory here soon.

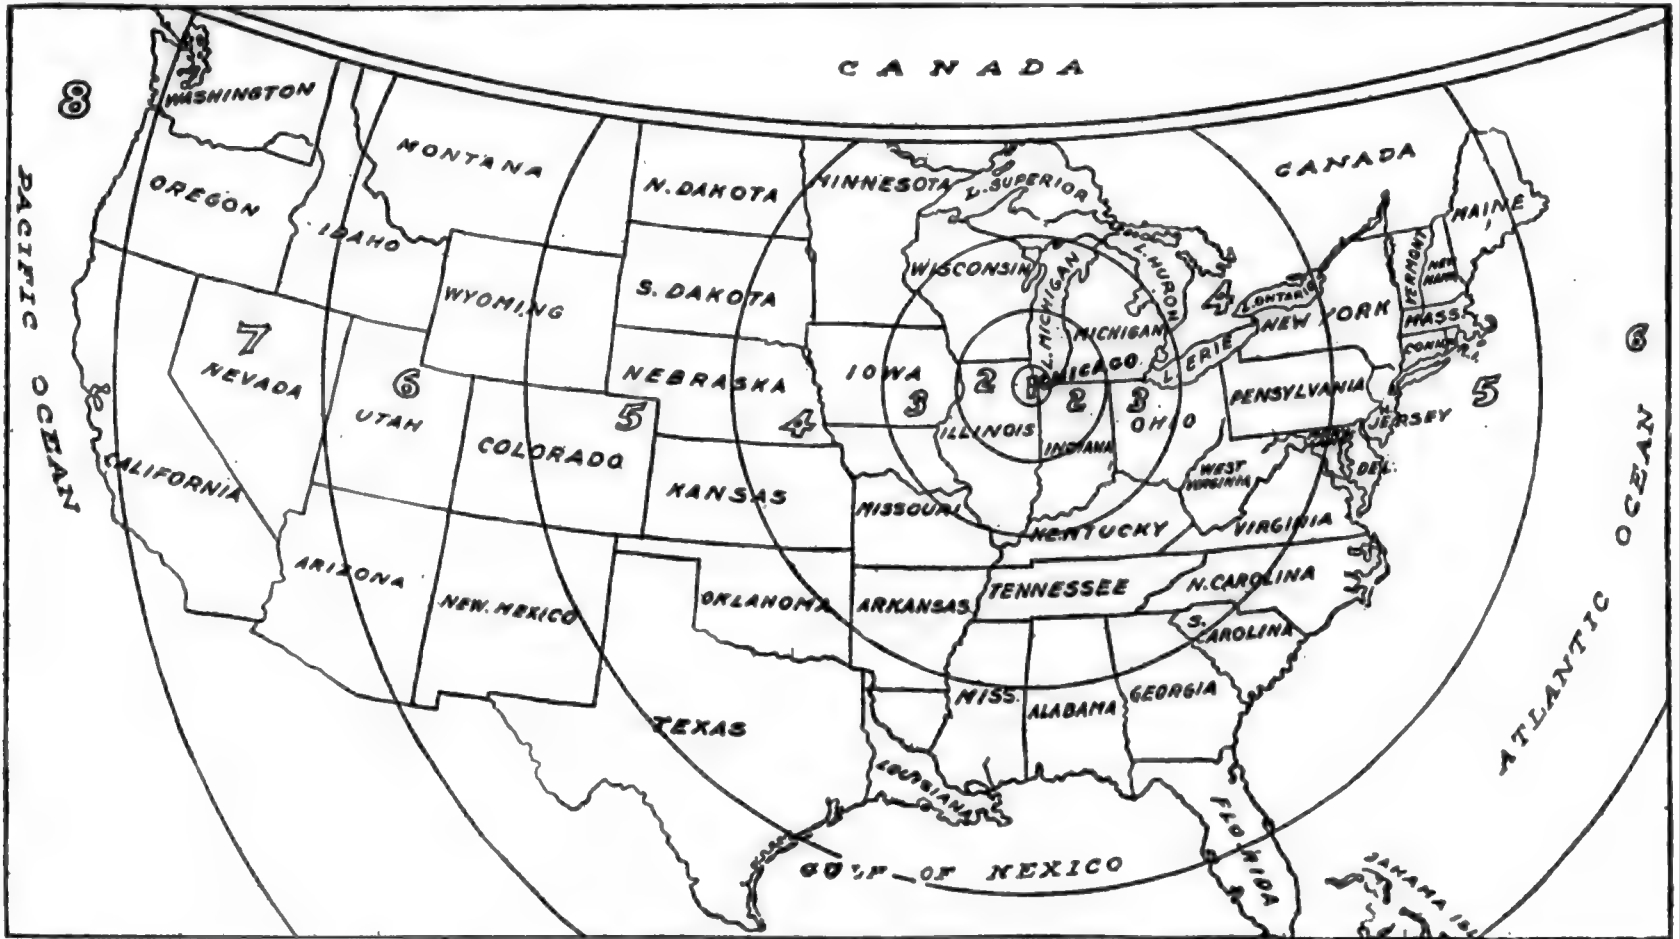

Camden, N. J.—Charles Jackel, the North Twenty-seventh street florist, has opened a new store and has also completed his new residence. Business during the last year, he says, has been excellent.

Parcel Post Zones and Postage Rates from Chicago

From the official map of the postoffice department. The rates here shown are from Chicago only. There is a different map for each of the 5,803 units into which the United States has been divided by the parcel post bureau. Each postoffice is the center of the smallest circle on the map to be used in that town. Each postmaster will soon be supplied with a map and parcel post guide showing the rate to every other postoffice.

The law specifies that "this act shall not in any way affect the postage rate on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants as fixed by section 482 of the Postal Laws and Regulations," the rate for which has been and still will be 1 cent for each two ounces, but the limit in weight will, after January 1, be eleven pounds, instead of four pounds, as in the past.

THE PARCEL POST.

It Will Be Here in Twelve Days.

The Postoffice Department has issued the regulations for the starting of the parcel post January 1, but they had not become available at the Chicago postoffice up to December 18, except in part, so that the details are more or less incomplete reports from Washington.

The regulations provide that parcels of merchandise, including farm and factory products (but not books and printed matter) of almost every description up to eleven pounds in weight and measuring as much as six feet in length and girth combined, except those calculated to do injury to the mails in transit, may be mailed at any postoffice for delivery to any address in the country. Delivery will be made to the homes of people living on rural and star routes as well as those living in cities and towns where there is delivery by carrier. Where there is at present no delivery by carrier the parcels will go to the postoffices as is the case with ordinary mail.

Facts About the Parcel Post.

The new parcel post goes into operation January 1, 1913.

Only mail matter now included in

RATES OF POSTAGE

Parcels weighing four ounces or less are mailable at the rate of one cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce, regardless of distance. Parcels weighing more than four ounces are mailable at the pound rate, as shown by the following table, and when mailed at this rate any fraction of a pound is considered a full pound.

fourth class, or merchandise, will be handled.

Perishable articles such as butter, lard, fruits, berries, and dressed fowls may be sent short distances. Eggs for local delivery when packed in containers may be sent. When packed separately they may be sent any distance. Fresh meats may be sent only in the first zone (fifty miles). There are no restrictions on salted, dried, or cured meats or fish.

Millinery, toys, musical instruments, glassware and breakable goods must be securely packed and marked "fragile."

The following may not be sent: Intoxicating liquors of all kinds; poisons; poisonous animals, insects or reptiles; explosives of every kind; inflammable articles, including matches; infernal machines; pistols or revolvers, disease germs, any obscene, defamatory or scurrilous matter now prohibited by law; live or dead animals, or birds or live poultry; raw hides or pelts; or anything having a bad odor.

Books and printed matter are included in third class and may not be sent.

The weight limit will be eleven pounds.

To find the size limit: Take a piece of string 72 inches long and wind it once completely around the parcel and then across the top lengthways. If the ends of the string reach the sides of the parcel it comes under the limit.

Parcels must be mailed at the postoffice or branches and special stamps must be used.

Delivery will be made of parcels the same as of other matter.

Maps and guides will be supplied by the chief clerk of the postoffice department, Washington, D. C., at the cost price of 75 cents for both. The price of the guide is 55 cents and map 20 cents. Neither is necessary, however, as in postoffices special clerks will attend to computing the rates for those who wish to mail parcels.

Effect on Our Trade.

Apparently the parcel post will not be the important factor to florists, seedsmen and nurserymen that it will be to others. Florists may send cut flowers by parcel post, but catalogues, bulbs, plants, roots and seeds take the old rates, which in certain instances are more favorable than the new parcel post rates and in other instances less favorable.

The postoffice has made comparatively little preparation for handling the increased bulk of mail; the task was too great and the needs too uncertain. Therefore the department will simply go ahead and do the best it can, meeting the new conditions as they arise.

great credit in even trying to sell such. The plants can be shaken out of the pots and pans, when such bracts have been cut as are needed, and stored in flats in a dry, frostproof shed for the next three months or more. Or, if preferred, lay the plants on their sides below the benches where they will not get too much drip. This latter method is the easiest, but the most slovenly to adopt.

If you have not yet tried the double scarlet poinsettia, plenissima, secure some stock. It is a little later than the type, but builds up a fine center and sells well. This is not at all a new thing, as it was common thirty or more years ago. It is, however, a good variety to stock up on. The so-called white variety is not wanted by anyone, and the pink one, while it sells in a limited way as a novelty, is not of the color wanted at Christmas.

Cyclamens.

Many of the flowering plants will now be disposed of. Such cyclamens as are unsold after the holidays can, if necessary, be held until Easter in a cold house. A better plan, however, is to try to clean them up before that time. They are good selling plants right through the winter and, if well flowered, there will not be much trouble in disposing of them.

The young cyclamen plants which are to flower a year hence will want some attention now. Never allow them to become potbound. Always give small shifts. Use some leaf-mold, not too much decayed, with the loam, and plenty of sand. Give them an average night temperature of 55 degrees. Scratch away any scum from them, whether in pots or flats, and keep them as close to the glass as possible. They should then make progress such as will please you.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies for Easter.

There should now be considerable bare bench space, with the Christmas flowering plants out of the way, and just as soon as possible the plants required for Easter should be housed or given more space on the benches. It is well to remember that Easter, 1913, comes at an unusually early date, and just three months now remain in which to grow and flower the stock. Lilies should be given immediate attention, and if you are growing Harrisii or Formosa lilies and they are six inches high, they are all right, and in a night temperature of 60 degrees will be in season. In the case of multiflorums and giganteums, if the growths are three to four inches high you are all right if you can give them a warm house. Where, however, they are just showing above the ground, or not up at all, they must have 65 degrees at night to have them on time.

In the case of giganteums, the most popular of the Easter lilies as a pot plant, let them have your warmest house and hold the minimum up to 65 degrees. Do not water the plants too freely until the pots are full of roots, but spray freely. Also syringe with nicotine or some suitable insecticide for aphids, rather than scatter tobacco dust in the tops of the growths, as is often done. It will take considerable moving around to flower the plants all together. Growers know that bulbs of the same batch will bloom weeks or months apart, but the careful grower knows how to push the laggards and hold back the early ones.

Dutch Bulbs.

The bulk of Dutch bulbs will now be pushing through the flats or pots and quite a few will be in condition for forcing. Not for many years have trumpet narcissi of the French type appeared so early as they have this season, and there will be a good supply of these for Christmas, both Golden Spur and Trumpet Major. If the Dutch stock of these two popular daffodils is not yet housed, get it in at once. These can go into a temperature of 60 degrees in full light. Tulips, on the other hand, are liable to be short-stemmed unless drawn up in a dark, warm case for some days. Such a case as is used for forcing valley is just what they like. The earliest sorts, such as White Hawk and La Reine, should be brought in now. Such varieties as Keizerskroon, Belle Alliance, etc., will be better in cool quarters a little longer. Of the polyanthus narcissi the variety Soleil d'Or has been in flower with us for ten days and can be had in quantity for Christmas. It forces more easily than Grand Monarque. Give all the polyanthus section a brisk heat in order to draw up the stems. Do not try forcing any of the Dutch hyacinths until they have growths two to three inches long, and then keep them dark and warm to lengthen them up. Be careful when watering not to pour any water over the flower spikes, as the buds in the early stages damp easily.

Poinsettias.

Be sure not to sell out the poinsettia plants so closely that insufficient stock will be left to propagate from for next season. Plants with poor foliage should be reserved, as there will be no

SWEET PEAS IN ALABAMA.

We have prepared eleven sweet pea rows, each fifty-two and one-half feet long. Will you please tell us how much seed to buy? We want to grow pink and white. Give us the names of a good pink and white, such as produce large flowers. Is February 1 too early to sow them here, in central Alabama? How deep should the furrows be made when planting, and how far apart should the vines stand in the row?

E. O. & H. A. C.

The sooner sweet peas are sown after frost has left the ground, the better. If your ground is open on or about February 1, it will be well to sow them at once. For a pink, Countess Spencer is still the leading commercial variety. There is one novelty, Hercules, of similar color, but with bigger, bolder flowers, which will probably displace it in a year or two, but the seed is expensive yet. For white, Nora Unwin is better than Dorothy Eckford or White Spencer. If you have a call for lavender, try Frank Dolby.

Cover the seeds two to two and one-half inches after sowing and do not follow the practice often recommended, of pulling the soil up to the plants as they grow, as this produces stem-rot and other troubles. Get supports in early and keep the soil between the rows well cultivated. Before the flowering season commences, mulch well between the rows with old manure, straw, grass or some other material. This will keep the soil moist and the roots cooler.

Do not sow too thickly; or, if you do, be sure to thin out the plants so that they will not stand any closer than four inches apart each way in the rows. Use an ounce of seed to twenty-five feet of drill. This will give you all the plants needed. Sweet pea seed will be scarce the coming season and it would be well to purchase your supply early.

In order to get an extra early crop, in advance of the outdoor sown ones, you can start some in pots, using three seeds to a 4-inch pot. Stand these in a coldframe. Sow them about a month ahead of your outdoor ones. When three or four inches high, plant them out a foot apart in the rows. This may seem thin at the outset, but you will find that they will branch out surprisingly and soon fill the rows. The secrets of successful sweet pea culture are: Thorough preparation of the ground, early sowing, getting supports in quickly, liberal mulching, watering in dry weather and careful removal of flowers and seed pods. BUFFALO.

Justice Louis W. Marcus in Supreme Court December 13 directed the jury to find in favor of the plaintiff in the action brought by William J. Palmer & Son, to compel the state nursery authorities to make an appraisal of and payment for a consignment of azaleas destroyed last year by state inspectors, alleging they were infested with gypsy and brown-tail moths. Appeal will be taken by the state, according to Attorney Henry W. Killeen, appearing as special counsel for the attorney-general.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

At the December meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club Theodore Wirth was appointed by President W. D. Desmond as chairman of the executive committee for the convention of the S. A. F., to be held here next August. As Mr. Wirth is vice-president of the S. A. F., the selection of his committee was left to his choice, resulting in the following members being appointed: Theodore Wirth, chairman; Hugh Will, C. N. Ruedlinger, W. D. Desmond, C. F. Rice. The first meeting was held December 10 at Mr. Wirth's residence and subsidiary committees were appointed. A second meeting was held December 15 at the same place and this meeting saw good headway made for caring for this great coming event.

C. F. Rice, Sec'y.

MORGEN AND HIS MUMS.

Peter Morgen, of Huntingburg, Ind., is one of those growers who simply delights in his work, and of course, as in all such cases, success attends his every effort. Beauties are his specialty and he never fails to have good quality and a steady cut. This year his Christmas crop is even a little better than usual. He also grows carnations and Killarneys with equal success. The accompanying illustration shows him standing in a house of W. H. Chadwick and Golden Chadwick that was cut out for Thanksgiving.

Mr. Morgen is his own builder and steam-fitter; he thinks it is almost as much fun to build and pipe a greenhouse as to run one. His special pride is his heating plant, installed with the Morehead double trap system; he asserts his belief that for efficient and economical heating his outfit is not to be beaten.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday, December 11, with a large attendance, President Johnston in the chair. The most important business transacted was the election of officers for the coming year. E. J. Brown, who has been treasurer of this society for a number of years, was unanimously elected president. Other officers are as follows: Vice-president, James MacCarthy; recording secretary, E. Westlake; corresponding secretary, J. MacDonald; treasurer, S. J. Trepass; trustee, J. F. Johnston. It was decided to hold the annual dinner January 23. The committee of arrangements consists of Messrs. Trepass, Everett and Johnston. Mrs. H. M. Adams, Glen Cove, was elected an honorary member. Four were elected to active membership and three petitions received. The treasurer's report showed a good financial standing.

Prizes were offered for poinsettias, carnations and violets. The winners were O. Bjorkgreen, V. Cleres and Alex. MacKenzie. H. Gaut was awarded a certificate of culture for a fine collection of vegetables and V. Cleres a certificate of culture for seedling tomatoes. Prizes are offered for eighteen carnations, twenty-five sprays of freesias, fifty violets, and six tomatoes at the January meeting. J. M.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been heavy, with stock rather scarce in most cases. There has been an abundance of funeral work of late, which has used up a great deal of stock. Christmas stock is coming on finely and the indications are that there will be a fair cut of carnations in most of the houses. Roses are fine and have met with ready sale. The crop of carnations thus far has been lighter than last season, even with all the bright weather we have had, and the growers can not account for it. Last season was quite cloudy the greater part of the early winter and still there was considerably more stock cut.

Mums are no more, with still quite a few calls; some customers can not realize they are gone. Narcissi are coming in quite strongly and find ready sale. There will be quite a few of them in for Christmas. Romans are more plentiful and help to fill in nicely. Sweet peas are more abundant and the demand is good. Violets are coming in quite heavily and are generally cleaned up. Stevia has been quite a seller of late and some growers have moved quantities of it.

Pot plants for Christmas will be good. Some extra good Cincinnati begonias are to be seen. Azaleas are excellent and in quite good supply. Cyclamens also are in fine shape and are always good sellers and easy to handle. Some exceptional poinsettias are to be seen and should bring the top-notch price. Christmas decorations are moving about as usual, with prices about the same as last season.

Various Notes.

E. Metzmaier reports business good, handling about the usual quantity of trees, etc.

Graff Bros. say things are moving nicely and expect a good Christmas trade.

C. A. Roth reports things about right for the time of year.

The Art Floral Co. has rented a room almost directly across from the store and is handling quite a lot of Christmas trees and decorations.

Livingston's reports good business in all lines at the present time.

The Munk Floral Co. is all lined up with Christmas goods.

G. H. Woodrow, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., is on the mend. All his friends are glad of that much, but would rather see him pick up a good deal faster than he is doing.

Another new flower store has opened, under the name of the Ohio Cut Flower Co. It is in the Mebs Drug Co. store. J. M.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market last week had plenty of everything daily. The wholesalers complained somewhat the last three days in the week, for stock moved slowly. The weather was clear and warm and this brought out the cut stock in large quantities. The retail business was reported only fair, but the retailers are kept busy preparing for Christmas. Holly and ground pine seem to be plentiful this year. The supply departments, at the wholesale houses, were kept busy all the week with shipping orders and the local demand. With the Christmas holidays close at hand, there is much speculation as to the supply of cut stock and prices. A great deal depends upon the weather and, if it keeps up as it has been, there is every indication that there will be plenty of everything in season. Blooming plants will of course be in great demand. The show houses of the west end florists are loaded down with plants of every description.

At the wholesale houses I saw a splendid lot of carnations. These are now on in full crop and a large cut is expected for this and next week, with prices for Christmas not over 8 cents for extra choice. There are still a few good mums coming in, but this week will about see the end of them. Roses are coming in fine quantities.

Killarney is somewhat off color, but the other varieties are in splendid color. Long, fancy Beauties are not any too numerous. Shorts are coming in with the bulk of them bulls. Violets are coming in much better now and quite a large cut is looked for this week, at $1 per hundred for the best. Romans and Paper Whites are up to the demand at present. There is also a lot of extra good valley and Easter lilies, both of which have a slow demand. There is a good market for greens of all kinds and there seems to be plenty for the demand.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, December 12. This proved to be the largest meeting of the year. The attraction was the presence of Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the Society of American Florists. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock. President Weber was reported sick and Vice-president Charles Young presided over the meeting. R. J. Windler, chairman of the publicity committee, read a report of the work being done, after which a publicity fund was started by the club and members and in a short time quite a sum was subscribed, the club heading the list with $50. Alex. Siegel made application for membership and the following applicants were elected: Adolph Jaenicke, Albert J. Windler, Oliver K. Sanders and Frank X. Gorly. Resolutions were presented by J. F. Ammann on the death of Francis Fillmore, which were adopted and spread on the minutes.

The Chicago Carnation Co. staged a fine vase of its new red carnation, The Herald, which was much admired by all and scored eighty-seven points.

The presiding officer presented Mr. Vincent to the members and for an hour he spoke of affiliation, publicity and S. A. F. matters and made a great impression.

Adolph Jaenicke, superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Garden, invited the club to meet at the garden twice a year. The invitation was accepted.

The oldest member of the club, Luther Armstrong, was reported sick and the club ordered a box of flowers sent him each week. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Vincent and Mr. Jaenicke for their entertainment during the meeting. The next meeting of the club will take place January 9, 1913.

The Shaw Banquet.

The twenty-third annual banquet given by the Missouri Botanical Garden, in accordance with the will of the late Henry Shaw, to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, took place at the Washington hotel, Friday evening, December 13. The Florists' Club was invited and nearly fifty members attended. The guest of the evening was Richard Vincent, Jr. After a splendid repast, Mr. Vincent was introduced by Dr. George Moore, director of the garden. The affair differed somewhat from the previous banquets. In all 130 guests were present and Dr. Moore acted as toastmaster. There being no speakers, the toastmaster called upon Mr. Vincent, who gave illustrated talks on the London flower show and the Holland bulb industry, both of which were most pleasing and instructive. At the conclusion Dr. Moore called for a rising vote of thanks to Mr. Vincent for the evening's entertainment.

Various Notes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., and accompanied by Mrs. Vincent, spent two days in St. Louis last week. They arrived Wednesday night, from Cincinnati, and were entertained by the Florists' Club on Tuesday and by the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden on Friday.

John Michelsen, representing E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, spent Saturday, December 14, calling on the local trade.

George Madsen, head of the Alton Floral Co., says his concern will build a large show house and store. This company will have to vacate its present quarters early next year.

Fred H. Weber has bought a new home on Berlin avenue, into which he moved his family last week.

The new home of F. C. Weber, Jr., is almost completed and he will move his family into it after the first of the year.

The growers of the south end have some fine blooming plants for Christmas. Wm. Schray & Sons have a great lot of poinsettias; Charles Beyer, azaleas, and John Held, cyclamens.

The Ladies' Home Circle will start the new year with twelve members. They are the Mesdames F. C. Weber, Sr., F. C. Weber, Jr., John Steidle, A. Meyer, Geo. Windler, J. J. Beneke, Theo. Miller, H. G. Berning, F. W. Bruenig, Otto Koenig, J. Koenig and E. Schray. They will hold monthly gatherings at each member's home during the year.

W. J. Pilcher, the originator of the Mazzura violet, says that he expects to be in full crop for Christmas. His crop and that of R. Wolfsberger, his brother-in-law, are both consigned to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

Phil and Geo. Goebel, of Kirkwood, have had a big success this season growing chrysanthemum cut blooms for this market. They will go into it on a larger scale next season.

Bedding by Harry Quint, at Brookline, Mass.

Blixen, John Connon, H. Emunds, Ed. Denker, Geo. Madsen and W. E. Rowe spent Thursday, December 12, in the city and attended the club meeting in the afternoon. J. J. B.

BEDDING AT BROOKLINE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a bed of King Humbert cannas which reached a height of about ten feet, bordered by Florence Vaughan, then bordered with red and yellow coleus, such standard varieties as Firefly and Golden Bedder, and finally outside these a border of dwarf ageratum. The bed was thirty feet in diameter and was probably the most beautiful flower bed of its kind in the vicinity.

The work was only one-tenth of what Harry Quint did last June at Reservoir Court, Brookline, Mass.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Benjamin Cull, formerly gardener on the Zabriskie estate, has gone to Galveston, Tex., where he will go into business for himself.

H. L. De Blois reports unusually heavy calls for Christmas greens of all kinds.

Considerable new building is to be done this spring on the estate of Mrs. French Vanderbilt. This will include a greenhouse on Harrison avenue, to cost $3,500.

Good progress is being made on the construction of the greenhouses on Parker avenue for H. A. C. Taylor. One house will be used exclusively for gardenias and roses; the second as a graperie and the third for propagation. There will also be a boiler house and potting house.

The last year for the Newport Horticultural Society was a good one, according to the reports submitted by the officers and committees at the annual meeting, held December 10. The membership now numbers 145. During the meeting Andrew J. Dorward, James Robertson and C. M. Bugholt were awarded cups for scoring the most points upon exhibits at the society's meetings during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Andrew S. Meikle; first vice-president, William Mackay; second vice-president, John B. Urquhart; secretary, Daniel J. Coughlin; financial secretary, William Gray; treasurer, Andrew McMahon; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Smith. These officers, with Richard Gardiner, Alex MacClellan, John T. Allan, C. M. Bugholt, Bruce Butterson, James Bond, James Boyd and James Robertson, constitute the executive committee.

Several new greenhouses are in contemplation for the Stewart Ritchie place. W. H. M.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been having some real winter weather. The mercury has been down to 12 degrees, with a few snow flurries and a strong wind. This has caused a diminishing of the coal pile and will probably take up any surplus profits that may be made at Christmas.

Trade from the wholesale standpoint has been good, taking everything available at fair prices and giving a clean-up every day. The retailers also are quite busy. Trade until within the last few days has been so heavy that there was no opportunity to get Christmas stock ready, but all hands are now busy making up the many novelties that bring the dollars later. After watching the Christmas business for years, I believe one can sell almost any old thing at Christmas if it only has some green and red in it and the price asked is not too high.

The supply men have done better this year than ever before, and by Christmas they will most likely be entirely cleaned up on everything that can be classed as Christmas goods.

The growers seem to have some cause for complaint, at least as far as carnations are concerned, and it is said that the trouble seems general. The houses of carnations are in fine shape, with wonderful crops of buds that look as if they were ready to open, but still from day to day the cut seems to get less instead of greater. No sufficient reason seems to be given. The plants are fine, but there is some "cussedness" in the general conditions which seems to hold them back, and the outlook is for a shortage of carnations at Christmas. Everything else is reported satisfactory, and if there are not enough carnations they will have to sell something else. Plantsmen are doing a nice business. The usual display of Christmas trees, holly and other Christmas greens is on the market at all kinds of prices and in all kinds of quality. The general business is good and everyone expects the holiday trade to be a record-breaker.

Various Notes.

The new carnation, Northport, from James D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., sent to the meeting of the Florists' Club, came one day late and is still on exhibition at the store of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. It is almost two weeks since it was shipped and it is really in fair condition still. It is a large flower of good form, and has a good calyx, stem and color. With its fine keeping quality, it should be a good addition to our carnation stock.

There has been an epidemic of some sort going the rounds of the flower shops, for almost every firm has had a couple of invalids on their hands, but all are getting back except Earl Tipton, who has some boils that are causing him much inconvenience.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has a house of orchids that are a fine show now and will give a big Christmas cut.

E. C. Ludwig turned his home over to the people who escaped the fire in the big apartment house that was burned December 13. Many of them had little more than their night robes to protect them, and his was the nearest house they could get into. Many of the women were carried down the ladders by the firemen.

Paul Randolph is cutting sweet peas at the firm's Sandy Creek houses. They also have a fine lot of Christmas plants of all kinds.

Among recent visitors were: Mr. Peterson, Cincinnati, O.; J. W. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.; C. W. Crissman, Punxsutawney, Pa.; Robert Groves, Adams, Mass.; J. W. Glenn, Kittanning, Pa.; Arthur Langhans, Wheeling, W. Va.; G. W. Kay, Youngstown, O., and L. L. Lamborn, Alliance, O.

Hoo-Hoo.

STRAWS.

There is one unfailing test of the advertising value of a periodical. It is found in the results the advertisers get. But a second test scarcely less infallible is the standing a publication has with its readers. It pays to advertise in a publication that is bought to read. So here are some extracts from recent subscription letters:

I will say that The Review is to the florists' world what Easter is to the florist's pocketbook.—Harvey Cotton, Brighton, Mass., December 9, 1912.

You can count on me as a subscriber as long as The Review keeps in the front, which will mean as long as I am in the business. I simply cannot get along without the paper.—H. P. Lodging, Mobile, Ala., December 4, 1912.

While I am writing I want to tell you that you have THE PAPER. I want specially to commend your articles on "Art in Flower Arrangement" by Mr. Brown.—William Walker, Louisville, Ky., December 9, 1912.

But results—those are what count. Solicitors may talk themselves black in the face, but it is the mail orders that convince.

I have had good results from my Christmas ad in The Review and another season shall use your columns more extensively.—Charles F. Uecke, New London, Wis., December 12, 1912.

We shall not need another insertion of our Christmas advertisement. The results have been perfectly satisfactory.—Evenden Bros., Williamsport, Pa., December 14, 1912.

I am all sold out of araucarias and have already moved quite some ferns as a result of my little classified advertisements. I thank you for your assistance.—C. B. Abeele, Chicago, Ill., December 15, 1912.

Our advertisement of desert holly in The Review seems to have worked three shifts of eight hours each every day. It has brought us all the business we can handle. The Review certainly has been a trade getter for us.—The O. A. Kimball Co., Goldfield, Nev., December 2, 1912.

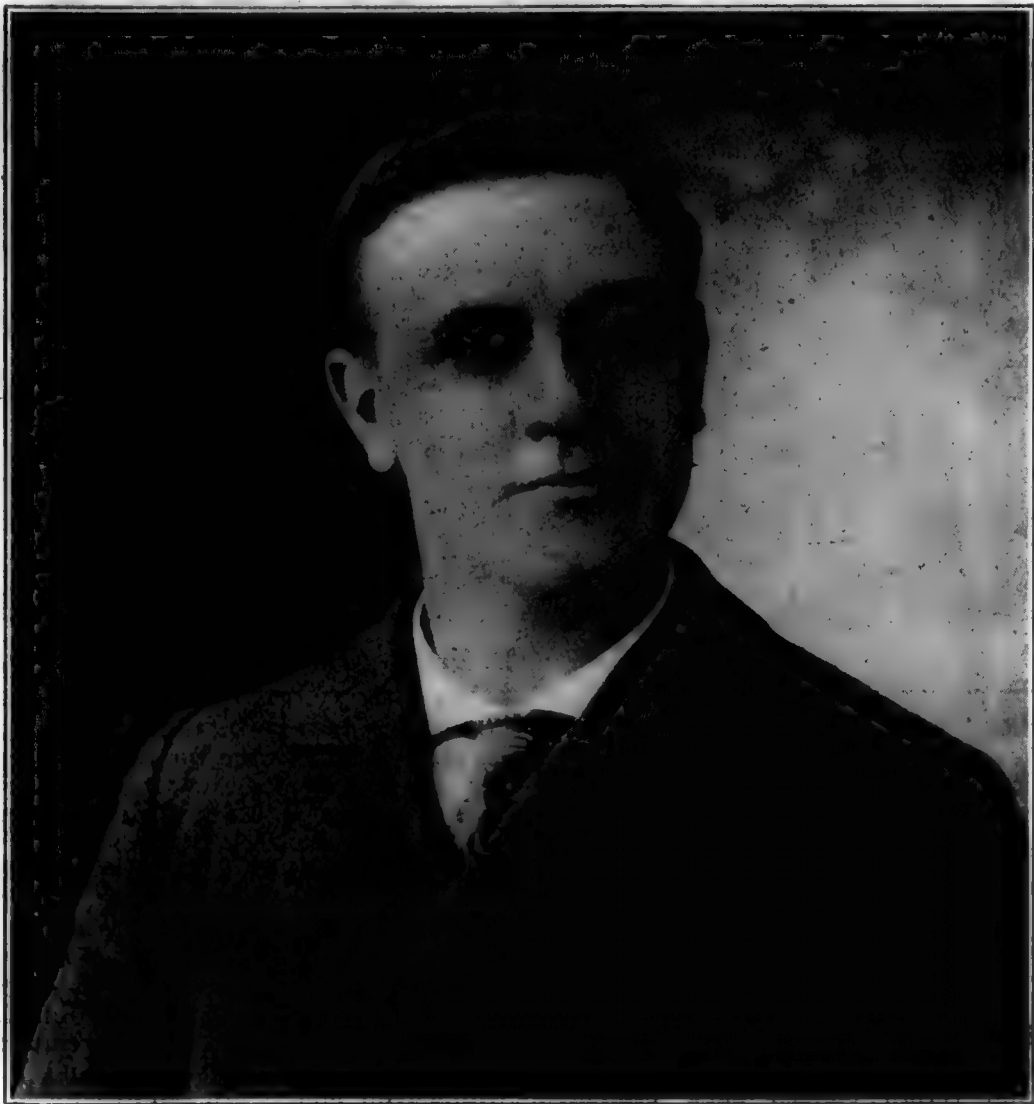

BOSTON.

The Market.

Not in a long time has the market been so bare of cut flowers as for the last few days. Whether this is due to plants being off crop, or flowers being held back in anticipation of higher prices nearer Christmas, is hard to tell. Roses are coming into their own at last and are selling well. There is a tolerably good cut of all varieties and prices are quite a little higher. Beauties and Russells are, of course, bringing the highest prices, and best quality flowers will reach the dollar mark for the holidays. Richmond is coming of superb quality, with stems equal to the finest Beauties. Such Sunburst as arrive bring fancy prices. Killarney, Killarney Queen, Prince de Bulgarie, Ward, Hillingdon and Radiance are all of excellent quality, selling from $4 up to $16 and $20 for select stock.

There has been a marked shortage in carnations and prices have ruled high. It looks as if a good deal of pickled stock would, as usual, appear before Christmas. Violets are also scarce. Growers report plants producing poorly and opening slowly. Sweet peas are insufficient for the demands. Valley has been selling well, but quite a little arriving is of inferior quality. Cut poinsettias are quoted from $2 to $6 per

NEW PRESIDENT BOSTON GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB

William J. Kennedy.

THE Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club has an "award of merit" which it uses wherever it will do good. The election of William J. Kennedy as its president for 1913 is such an award, as Mr. Kennedy has been vice-president and presiding officer during 1912. The illness which necessitated the retirement of President Pegler brought him to the chair, which he has filled so acceptably that now he can say, as did T. R. one November evening in 1904, "My dear, I am no longer president by accident."

dozen. Lilium longiflorum has been in good demand. In the way of bulbous flowers, Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi are abundant. Small lots of French Trumpet majors arrive, also Soleil d'Or narcissi. Freesia in small lots comes from several growers. Cattleyas are rather scarce. Some Trianae have appeared, although labiate is still seen, as well as Percivaliana. Gardenias are in shorter supply. In the way of miscellaneous flowers, stevia is abundant. Small lots of wallflower, annual lupines, Barberton daisies, and forget-me-nots are seen. The latter sell well at 50 cents per small bunch. Marguerites are still small and short-stemmed. Snapdragons are being mostly held for next week. There has been an excellent demand for asparagus, smilax and ferns. Specialists in holiday greens are rushed to the limit and report a heavier demand than ever.

In pot plants trade is active and the leading specialists are already pretty well cleaned out. The leaders are cyclamens, poinsettias, azaleas, ardisias and Cincinnati begonias. The old Lorraines will not bring the same prices as Cincinnati and will be less in evidence here another season.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting for the election of officers brought out an excellent attendance December 17. The results of the balloting were as follows:

President—W. J. Kennedy.
Vice-president—H. H. Bartsch.
Secretary—W. N. Craig.
Treasurer—Peter Fisher.

Executive committee—P. M. Miller, W. J. Patterson, W. C. Rust, R. S. Edgar.

Four new members were elected. While the ballots were being counted Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, entertained the club with an account of his recent trip to the Panama canal zone. William Downs, for the committee on landscape classes, reported an auspicious start, meetings being held on each Tuesday evening except on club nights, when they are held on Wednesday. The committee on publicity reported progress.

Exhibits of the evening included two pink carnation seedlings from Littlefield & Wyman, Carnation Princess Dagmar from M. A. Patten & Co., mixed carnations from Thomas Coles, and begonias, cyclamens and double poinsettias from R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

Frank Putnam was reported as convalescing from an acute attack of pneumonia.

Installation of officers will occur January 28, the hall being rented for the regular day, January 21.

Various Notes.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, has a heavy crop of carnations for the holidays. He prefers White Perfection to White Wonder, but grows both sorts. Benora, Gloriosa, Rosette and Pink Delight are all doing remarkably well with him. St. Nicholas is slow in coming into crop. He marketed fine freesia as early as December 10.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, grew 35,000 carnations, all on solid beds. He has Pink Delight with 42-inch stems, which shows how this variety thrives with him. Gloriosa and White Wonder are also remarkably good.

John Barr, of South Natick, has one of the neatest establishments in New England. He used to grow cyclamens and hydrangeas, but difficulty in sending pot plants to market forced him to drop their culture until now he grows carnations exclusively. He benches about 35,000 and they are a veritable thicket of flowers and buds. The new variegated, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, is continuing its good record. Pink Delight, White Wonder, Beacon and others are all equally good.

W. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, has a great holiday crop of carnations. Especially fine are Benora, Pocahontas, White Wonder, Gloriosa, Pink Delight, Rosette and Golden Ray. St. Nicholas so far is rather slow. He will have some thousands of Purity freesia for Christmas. His first were cut December 10. He is also getting a nice crop of forget-me-nots and marguerites. He has dropped Mrs. Sander marguerite, preferring Queen Alexandra.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, is sending in good Benora, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and White Wonder carnations, also forget-me-nots and sweet peas.

J. Streifer & Son, of Weymouth, are dispensing of a heavy cut of pink and white Killarney and Richmond roses.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, will have some thousands of French Golden Spur narcissi for Christmas. They have a heavy daily cut of longiflorum, Paper Whites and Romans.

R. P. Peterson, of Saxonville, is sending to W. A. Hastings some good Lepotosyne maritima, an excellent annual for winter forcing, also snapdragons, forget-me-nots and a good assortment of carnations.

Samuel Neil, of Dorchester, has a fine lot of azaleas for the holiday trade. He has increased his plantings of asparagus and has a good carnation crop. His home trade uses up all his flowers and plants.

W. B. Cobb, of Canton, was first in the market with wallflowers. He is also sending single violets and carnations to D. F. Lamy.

Penn, on Bromfield street, is featuring artificial flowers heavily, having a vacant store near his regular store entirely devoted to them.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, had practically sold out of Christmas flow-

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB

William H. Siebrecht.

THE president of the New York Florists' Club for 1913, the National Flower Show year, is one of the wheel horses. Two days after Christmas he will become 60 years of age—he has been a grower at Astoria, L. I., for upwards of thirty-seven years. He has been conspicuously successful as a forcer of bulbous flowers, especially valley, and of acacia. A leader in the community as well as in the trade these many years, he will prove an able administrator of the affairs of the club during what promises to be the most important year in its long and honorable record.

ering plants a week before the holiday. Cyclamens, poinsettias, azaleas and nephrolepis are his specialties. He says Glory of Cincinnati begonia will push Lorraine to the wall.

The store of Welch Bros. Co., on Devonshire street, is one of the busiest spots in the city at present. The demand for holiday greens breaks all previous records, and cut flower trade is also booming.

William W. Elliott is cutting unusually fine Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Ward and Christie Miller roses from his Madbury establishment.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, is strong on longiflorums just now.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports sales of Christmas plants as away ahead of all previous records.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, is one of our most expert carnation growers and his flowers are always cleaned up quickly. Extra fine with him this season are Pink Delight, Beacon, White Wonder and Winsor.

Frank Macdonald says F. J. Dolansky is cutting a fine lot of gardenias, as well as a splendid lot of cattleyas.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is well sold out of poinsettias, of which he had several thousands. He has a fine daily cut of lily of the valley, also Cypripedium insigne.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are in the height of their Christmas rush and have a large force working practically night and day to keep abreast of orders.

W. N. Craig.

GLASS ADVANCES AGAIN.

There was a notable meeting of manufacturers of window glass at Pittsburgh last week, at which there was discussion of trade conditions, resulting in a decision to again advance prices, this time practically ten per cent, effective December 21.

The new price will put glass almost exactly fifty per cent above the low price of a year ago. Those who know the glass industry, and whose word usually is accepted at par, say that at the low prices of last year the factories were not able to operate except at a loss and that, considering the advance in wages that had to be paid this season, the present prices leave no more than a narrow margin. Also, they say that conditions in the glass trade are such as to make any recession in prices highly improbable; the market is fairly bare, demand good, production not large and the season short. Steady if not advancing prices are looked for up to the time of starting up again next fall, which is farther ahead than one in the glass trade usually undertakes to look.

The present price puts the greenhouse sizes around $3 per box. The greenhouse trade would be satisfied with that figure if it would hold steadily. It is far better for the trade that glass should command a fair price than that it should be first high and then low.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The market since Thanksgiving has held up satisfactorily, both as to quantity and quality of stock and activity of business. The coming-out functions, together with numerous weddings, have called for much work on the part of the decorators, while several large funerals have added to the general demand. The largely increased demand for carnations and roses since the close of the chrysanthemum season has kept those flowers closer than some of the dealers would like. Carnations are up in price. They are expected to be scarce for Christmas.

Various Notes.

F. Macrae & Sons have purchased a handsome forty-two horse-power Royal touring car.

Fred B. Luther's automobile was considerably damaged December 13 by collision with an electric car.

Edward Murray, formerly employed by different retailers in this city, but now of New York city, was a visitor recently.

Eugene Buchanan, of Fall River, was in the city December 13 and reported that his boiler gave out during the coldest night of the season, December 10, but fortunately he was able to save his houses by using portable heaters.

Eugene McCarron has had several large decorations among the east side set during the last fortnight.

Walter D. Macrae, of F. Macrae & Sons, has been elected a trustee of Roger Williams lodge of Odd Fellows.

George L. Cook has been appointed custodian of the estate of the late Walter S. Nichol, of Barrington, pending probate proceedings.

Charles H. Hunt had the largest job of his business career last week, for St. Bernard Chapel.

W. S. Pino has the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances in the death of his wife December 10.

The decorations for the banquet of the Rhode Island Rotary Club at the Elysium were by the Westminster Greenhouses.

Maurice Miller, formerly with Hoffman, at Pawtucket, and also with William B. Hazard, has opened a retail store at 637 Westminster street.

Timothy O'Connor has recently added a White auto truck to his delivery facilities.

James W. Shaw has completed a large greenhouse at his place in Slatersville.

R. H. Higgins is having his auto delivery rebuilt with a larger body.

The greenhouses of the Norwood Floral Co., at Norwood, were menaced December 10 by a fire believed to have been set by some boys in the nursery adjoining. When the blaze was discovered by Mrs. Nathan D. Pierce, wife of the proprietor, the flames were rapidly nearing the greenhouses. An alarm was given and a score of men turned out with shovels and brooms and succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

The Providence Market Gardeners' Association, recently formed, was granted a charter in this state last week.

W. H. M.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The greatest problem which confronts the Dayton florists at present is the carnation crop, which seems to be extremely scant, and it is an utter impossibility to fill more than half the orders. Judging from the present outlook, they will be a scarce article at Christmas, and customers, being aware of this fact, are placing their orders, though it does not seem possible to fill more than a quarter of them. White roses have been more plentiful than anything else, but the prospect is that they, too, will be off crop at Christmas. Fortunately, red and pink roses will be coming in well. Giganteums will also be rather scarce. Of yellow and white narcissi there will be a good supply. The majority of Dayton growers have a fine crop of poinsettias coming in for the holiday trade. Cattleya gigas, Roman hyacinths, bouvardias, valley and sweet peas will be plentiful. In pot plants there will be plenty of primulas, cyclamens and cinerarias. Many of the florists also have a fine trade in Cincinnati begonias and azaleas. There is likely to be an abundant supply of green goods.

Last week's trade was exceptionally good. Flowers of all varieties found a good market, while some encouraging Christmas orders were booked.

Various Notes.

William Niehaus, of Cincinnati, spent a pleasant week here with relatives and also visited several of the Dayton florists. He reports trade as excellent in his city.

The Oakwood Pottery reports business as highly satisfactory, and says there are enough orders booked ahead to keep the whole force hustling for some time to come.

N. O. Selby, who has just started in the florists' business at Middletown, O., was in town last week looking up stock for his Christmas trade.

The Heiss Co. is improving the interior of the Main street store by putting in a balcony, which will be used as an office.

Miss Bonnie Ewing has just recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

W. W. Horlacher reports a most satisfactory trade last week, with a great deal of work for parties and receptions.

John T. Conger, of Cincinnati, was in town last week, with a fine specimen of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati. He says he is doing finely with this begonia and has just completed two new greenhouses which he will devote to the growing of it.

The Dayton Floral Co. has a fine lot of stock coming in for the holidays.

J. W. Rodgers and James Ewing visited at Richmond, Ind., last week, and while in the city were pleasantly entertained by E. G. Hill and John Evans.

George Bartholomew, formerly manager of the Miami Floral Co., is now engaged in the florists' business at 1117 South Broadway, in this city. The new firm will be known as the Edgemont Floral Co.

Le Roy S. Tice, of the Miami Floral Co., was quietly married to Miss Effie Rose, December 7. The young couple will make their home with Mr. Tice's parents for the present.

M. Anderson has just opened a cut flower department with the Elder & Johnston Co.

Among the visitors last week were: F. H. Mutchler, of the Elixir Chemical Co., Columbus, O.; C. J. Speelman, Jr., of Ollioules, France; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; George L. Huscroft, representing Wm. Hagemann & Co., of New York city; Mr. Evans, of the State Agricultural Department; Fred Gear, of Cincinnati; Louis Schellhaas, of Miamisburg, O., and Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York city.

The new greenhouses of the National Cash Register Co. are nearing completion.

Warren G. Matthews had the pleasure of furnishing sixty-eight long-stemmed American Beauties for the sixty-eighth birthday of John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co. Mr. Matthews is making a specialty of boxwood and red ruscus wreaths, for which he is receiving some nice orders.

Miss Alberta Engle will be in Dayton through the holidays, and will assist Miss Katherine Young with the Christmas trade.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. I. Schaeffer were in Cincinnati on Sunday, December 15, and visited Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson.

R. A. L.

MOBILE, ALA.

All indications are pointing toward an unexcelled Christmas trade, and although the local supply never was larger or better in quality, there will not be enough to go around.

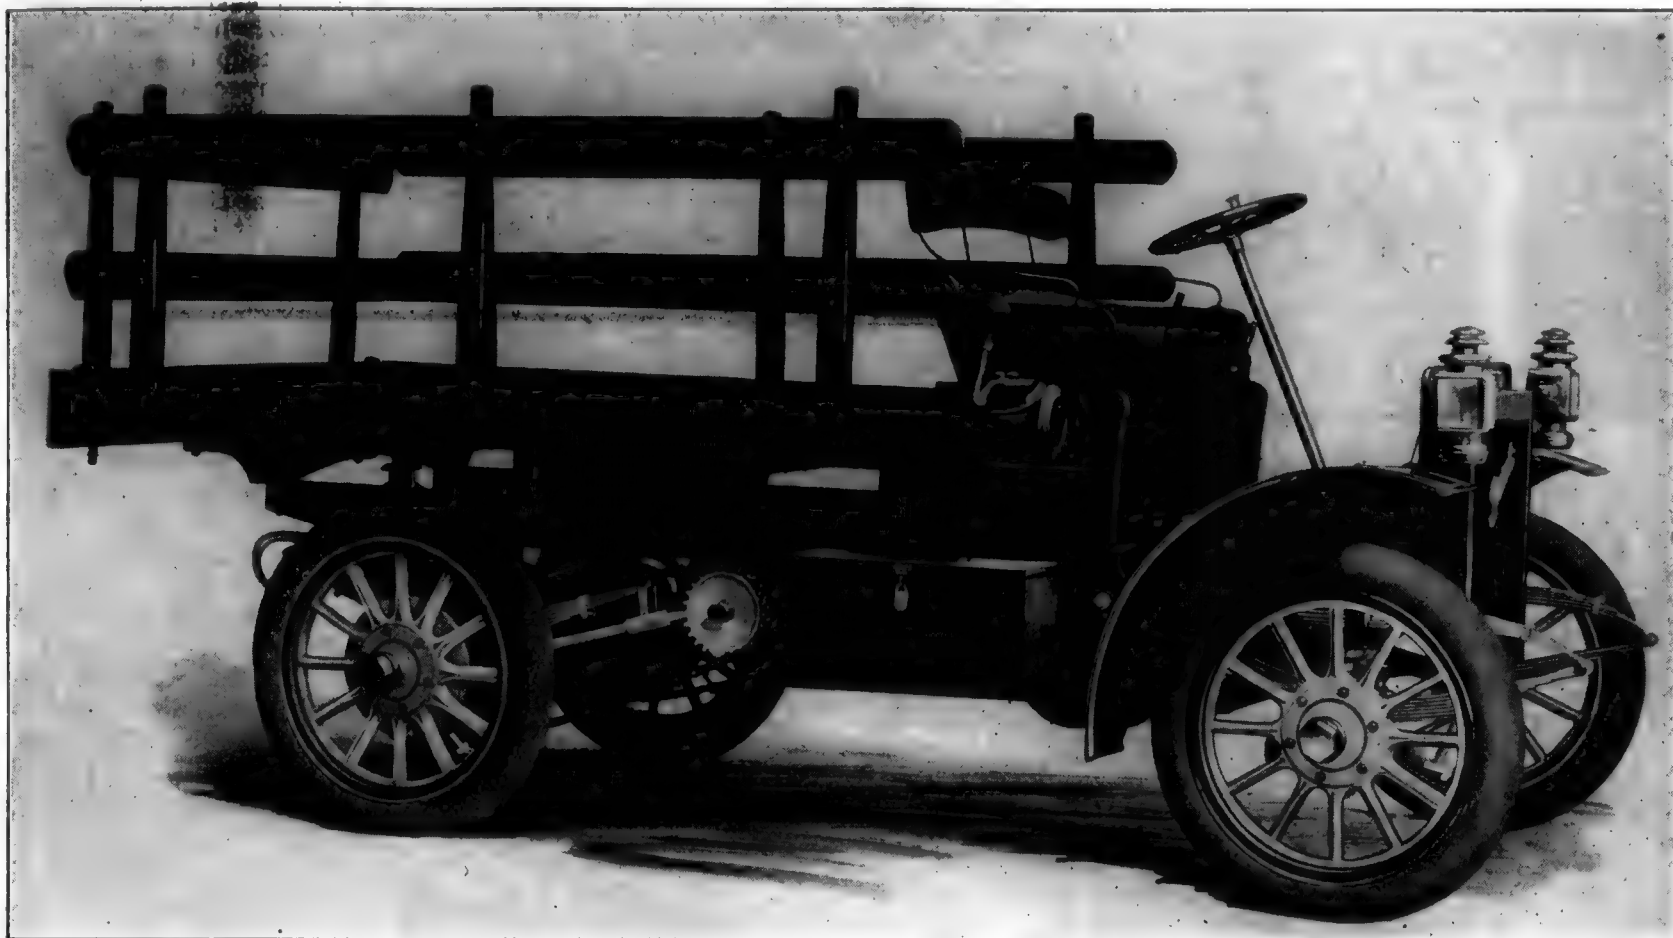

The Minge Floral Co.'s roses are in excellent shape, with prospects of a large cut for the holidays. Their Beauties, Richmonds and Marylands look especially well. Anticipating a great rush and consequently a fat bank account, this firm has taken fate by the forelock and invested in a fine auto delivery car, and the holiday air has invaded the whole store.

At Ravier & Sons' establishment everybody is as busy as a bee. A house full of poinsettias is a grand sight. Two new houses of late mums look as if they will prove a money-making investment. There are 3,000 hyacinths in full bloom and lots more coming on. Callas, Paper Whites and sweet peas are all coming on. The two energetic brothers, Louis and Fred Ravier, are catering to the plant trade, and if stock can do it they have got it. They report a splendid trade since business opened up on All Saints' day.

Mrs. Goodbrad has some nice roses and other stock in her new house and she reports business as better than usual for this time.

The Industrial Gardens are bringing in a fine lot of decorative plants, and their large stock of palms and ferns is in great demand for weddings, balls and other swell affairs.

The Mobile Floral and Horticultural Society was organized in October, with fifteen members. The membership is not confined to the trade, but anybody interested in ornamental horticulture may become a member. The object of the society is to promote the interest in flowers and trees and to help beautify the city in an intelligent and systematic manner. The membership has already passed the sixty-five mark. The local papers are doing their best to further the welfare of the society, by publishing the proceedings of the meetings in full, with the papers read at such meetings, in their Sunday issues. The society will undertake demonstration work, such as planting and caring for window boxes, on any one building and one school. The officers of the society are: President, H. P. Lodging; vice-president, John Douglas; recording secretary, H. A. Demeranville; secretary and treasurer, G. C. Little.

Altogether Mobile, the gateway to the Panama canal, is pushing to the front at a gait that cannot be beat. Some wide-awake nurserymen got onto this fact, and where a year ago we could not count a single nursery we can now boast of four growing concerns.

H. P. L.

AMLING'S AUTO TRUCK.

A good many florists select an automobile as much for looks as for utility, but not so the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill. This concern bought for service and for no other reason. The truck, which is of one ton capacity, is used for a daily trip from the greenhouses to the commission house in Chicago and serves to make the growers independent of the railroads and express companies. The truck has, upon occasion, made more than one trip a day, and it is of record that on a certain night it carried as its load 142,000 sweet peas. The truck has given excellent service ever since it was put into use, but in the beginning there was a great deal of tire trouble. This has been overcome by using a patent tire filler that prevents punctures or blow-outs. The truck puts the stock into the wholesale house in fully as good shape as when it was sent by express, the ride over the road being less rough than the handling the boxes received in the several shifts necessary when moved by train.

Few florists use a car without a top. The Amling concern gets a lot of service out of its truck on jobs that would be impossible with a top on the car. When carrying cut flowers to market they are covered with a tarpaulin and it has been found that even in the coldest weather the boxes need no heavier lining than would be given if they were to go by express.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. F. E. Blair.

Mrs. F. E. Blair, who some years ago was engaged in the florists' trade at Big Rapids, Mich., died December 4 at the home of her son Harold, in Indianapolis, Ind. She was succeeded in business at Big Rapids by H. M. Larson and removed about ten years ago to Ann Arbor, Mich. Six or seven years ago she was injured in a rush at the university gymnasium and since that time she had been an invalid. She is survived by two sons, Harold and Lewis. The body was taken to Big Rapids for burial.

P. F. Williams.

Professor P. F. Williams, head of the department of horticulture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala., and a member of the firm known as the Opelika Floral Co., at Opelika, Ala., died December 5, at Asheville, N. C. The funeral services were held at the Baptist church in Auburn. He was a native of Massachusetts and a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. He was secretary of the National Nut Growers' Association and was prominent in the work of the Alabama State Horticultural Society. His papers on the growing of pecans are in demand in all parts of the United States. He was a Mason and a member of the Kappa Sigma college fraternity.

Lee H. Bradley.

Lee H. Bradley, of 133 Grand avenue, New Haven, Conn., who for many years had conducted a flower business in that city, dropped dead in his home on the evening of December 6, as he was about to retire. He was found in his bedroom, having fallen on his face near the door. The medical examiner pronounced the cause of death to be heart disease. Mr. Bradley was 76 years of age. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Bradley, and one son, Smith D. Bradley.

Charles Noelke.

Charles B. J. Noelke, a well-known florist of Seventh avenue, New York, died December 4 at St. Luke's hospital, after a short illness due to pneumonia. For fifteen years he had conducted a store at One Hundred and Thirty-first street and Seventh avenue. He was particularly interested in the schools and the welfare of the school children. As a member of the school board of the twenty-first district, it was his custom to visit the schools in his district each week. He was 62 years of age, and up to the time of his last illness he had been in perfect health. His wife survives him.

Norfolk, Conn.—J. E. Scott has built an addition to his greenhouses on Grant street.

Shreveport, La.—A. J. Manheim, of the Rose Lea Greenhouses, has completed the erection of another greenhouse. The range now comprises five houses. Natural gas is used as fuel.

Oshkosh, Wis.—N. A. Rasmussen, of Rasmussen's Fruit Farm, went to Des Moines, Ia., to attend the annual convention of the Iowa State Horticultural Society. He was chosen as delegate to represent the Wisconsin society at this convention.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

G. L. GRANT, EDITOR AND MANAGER.

Cairo, Neb.—Hans Broderson has completed the erection of his greenhouses here and has his stock of flowers and vegetables in fine condition. While the heating system was being installed, he maintained a safe temperature by means of oil stoves.

Jacksonville, Fla.—James P. Hill has opened a flower store in the Cohen building. He has had twenty years' experience as a florist and for a time was associated with Mills the Florist, in this city. Mr. Hill is also negotiating for the acquisition of some suburban property suitable for the growing of stock.

We both have them.

THE ways and means committee of the lower house of Congress has given notice that a hearing will be held January 20 on the agricultural schedule of the tariff law, paragraph 263 of which covers the duties on plants, bulbs, etc.

FOR those wishing information regarding the course in floriculture at the University of Illinois a neat pamphlet has been issued, giving full details and description of the equipment. Copies may be had by addressing the registrar, at Urbana, Ill.

THE Department of Agriculture, of the Agricultural Experiment Station, at the College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., at which are the trial grounds of the American Sweet Pea Society, has just published part three of "Sweet Pea Studies," by Alvin C. Beal. This is devoted to a history of the sweet pea and a record of the results of experiments in growing the sweet pea in the open ground.

S. A. F. HOSPITALITIES.

Under a Minneapolis head in this issue it is reported that the florists there have organized and started preparations for the entertainment of the S. A. F. next August. It is a difficult task to decline the hospitalities of friends, but it seems to be the duty of the directors of the national organization to show the fine fellows in the next convention city, in all friendliness, that the society does not wish to be "entertained." The conventions have become so large that entertainment along former lines has become too expensive and too difficult—the society's good demands a change. Each city has outdone its predecessor in "hospitalities" until the task has become one not lightly undertaken; in fact, no city invited the convention of 1913; the decision to go to Minneapolis was made without consulting the florists of that city and after a full discussion of the situation had put emphasis on the desirability of again leading the simple life. It was made quite clear that the society should go where it can do the most good to the trade at large rather than to go where, perchance, it may be invited. Now these open-handed Minnesotans want to do "the right thing." Of course! Nobody likes to let friends come to town, even though unbidden, and not do something for them. It is up to the directors of the national organization.

There is another interest that deserves attention in this connection. The trade's display is the backbone of the convention; but entertainments have so multiplied that nowadays an exhibitor has to catch his customer on the fly, on the way from a luncheon to an excursion, or else keep the buyer away from the business sessions of the society, which is easier. The exhibitor has to steal most of his time—there is scarcely any he can call his very own. The program says the convention is four days long. But it isn't; it is only three, for the exhibitors. The fourth day is given to a junket that takes all the buyers away from the hall. The trade exhibitors pay for that fourth day. It is theirs. Give it to them. It will, at the same time, solve the hospitalities problem.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

No great change has taken place since the last report, but it is interesting to note that, with the demand increasing faster than the supply, prices asked and obtained are above the average for this time of the year. Carnations remain on the short side and not enough can be had to fill orders. High prices naturally are being secured and in some cases the higher grade reds have brought returns equal to the Christmas price lists. Practically every order contains a call for more or less carnations and, with the supply hardly equal to that of the previous week, the wholesalers are put to no end of trouble in meeting the demands. The question of the supply for the coming Christmas shipping trade is one that gives the wholesalers considerable concern and various opinions are being offered as to the extent of the probable supply. Growers report little change in conditions and do not give much encouragement for big cuts, but there are those who believe that the supply will be large enough to fill all orders except for red and dark pink. Few, however, are willing to take chances of overbooking on advance orders, at even the best prices, until it is known just how large crops will really be cut.

Roses have shown decided improvement for the last week. While the supply has increased to a good extent, the shortage of carnations has made it possible to bring about an advance in the price of roses. Killarneys especially have improved in both quality and quantity and show much better color, size of bud and length of stems. Killarney probably is cut in larger numbers than White Killarney, but there has been little trouble in clearing the tables of the whites. Richmond showed excellent quality, but has not been shipped in so freely as Killarney, probably due to the fact that the growers are counting on better returns during Christmas week. Beauties are excellent, too, and while there has been hardly any unusual demand during the week, they were moved at fairly consistent prices but without any material advance up until December 16, when the calls for the long-stemmed grade began to increase. Ward, Sunburst and Melody were in big demand and on the short side.

Of the other flowers, violets appeared to have the call and although there were but few home-grown shipments there were plenty of eastern arrivals. Poinsettias are abundant but not yet selling well. Paper Whites are more plentiful and Romans are coming stronger. Sweet peas are dropping buds since the dark days returned and are

We've Got The Goods

ORDER ALL YOU NEED.

There never were finer flowers and the quantity we handle is a marvel to those who have not kept in touch with the increase in glass we represent.

BEAUTIES

We never have seen a finer crop of Beauties than we now have—splendid color, large, perfect buds, fine foliage; specially strong on long to medium. When you have tried these Beauties you will agree with us that nothing finer could be asked. We shall be in full crop through the holidays.

KILLARNEYS

While the quality of our Killarneys is fully up to the famous crop of last Christmas, the supply is very much larger, for the growers greatly increased their glass. Of course, the longer the stem the finer the flower, but the medium lengths carry the largest flowers we ever have seen on these grades.

DOUBLE VIOLETS SINGLE

We handle the cream of the crops of the Hudson river doubles, and they are fine. Also fragrant, home-grown singles that are the best the market affords. An abundant supply.

Orchids

A large supply of the finest Cattleyas and all other varieties.

Valley

We always have the high quality stock your trade demands.

CARNATIONS

Buyers will find it to their advantage to order Carnations of us. We shall have the quantity and our stock is widely known as always the most uniformly high quality large lot in this market.

Poinsettias

A very large and fine lot, shipped to reach you in perfect condition.

Lilies

You need these every day in the year. We have a special crop now on.

not so plentiful as the trade would like. There is plenty of valley and Easter lilies are abundant, both local and eastern stock. Stevia is not so plentiful as it was, doubtless being held back for Christmas. There are plenty of fine cattleyas to go around at the prices, but not enough to weaken the market. There is a larger supply than usual of the miscellaneous orchids.

Red winter berries were again in demand and large quantities were to be found on all sides. Boxwood turned scarce last week, some of the large handlers getting word from their sources of supply in the south that anticipated shipments would not be forthcoming.

The mail Monday, December 16, in most of the wholesale houses, was the heaviest ever received. It seemed to insure a record Christmas business. The call for carnations was so heavy that some houses began stating that no further orders could be booked except from regular customers and others replied that they would take orders subject to doing the best possible with them when the time comes. The reluctance of the wholesalers to commit themselves on carnations has naturally turned a lot of business to roses and some of the houses have booked all the orders for short roses they care to undertake. In general, everyone is willing to take orders for roses at from 10 cents up, but the opinion is that prices will hold firm on all grades.

Various Notes.

W. J. Smyth met with a serious accident Friday, December 13, falling as he was getting out of his automobile at his garage at Sixty-third street and Princeton avenue. It was thought his hip was dislocated and he was rushed to St. Luke's hospital, where an examination showed the left hip to be broken. Not only is it a serious and painful injury and one that will keep him laid up for a long time, but it comes at a most inopportune time.

Peter Reinberg has ordered a motor truck to take the place of the wagon in hauling the stock from the greenhouses to the store. It is a Mack chassis on which a special body is being built by Wm. Erby & Sons Co. The body will hold forty of the big Beauty boxes and close on them in cold weather. When the tail gate can be down it can carry fifty boxes. The truck will not be ready for delivery for some weeks.

After having spent many years at 1306 East Sixty-third street T. F. Keenan has taken the store at 1222 on the same street and fitted it up in white enamel as his permanent headquarters, opening in time for the holiday trade. His lease on the old store, not quite a block east of the new one, runs to May 1, 1913. Both locations are excellent, but the new store is better for florists' purposes, being more modern.

was with the E. Wienhoeber Co., with Mr. Bergman, for many years.

E. E. Pieser is one of those who does not concur in the general prediction of a Christmas shortage in carnations. He says it will extend only to reds and Lawson. Plenty of everything else.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., made a trip to St. Louis, Indianapolis and Richmond between Friday and Monday. He says the E. G. Hill Co. has the best crop of carnations he has seen this season.

Stollery Bros., in Edgewater, always have good window displays, but their Christmas showing is especially good.

Miss Elizabeth Sadler, formerly with C. Frauenfelder, and Miss Agnes McLeash have opened a retail store under the name of the Leland Flower Shop at 1140 Leland avenue.

The receivership of Koropp, Inc., reported under the head of "Business Embarrassments" in this issue, affords another excellent argument for the organizers of the new credit association.

Applying the rules of the association, no seller can become involved more than one month's bill, instead of over $1,600 as one creditor appears to be in this case.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. had the store order December 13 for the funeral of the treasurer of Siegel, Cooper & Co. One piece was an open book to "Our Treasurer," on a pedestal.

S. A. Jamieson, who has handled the greenhouse trade for the Universal Portland Cement Co., severed that connection December 14. He goes to Minneapolis to open an office for the George M. Garland Co., Des Plaines.

George W. Scott can not keep out of the flower business at Christmas. He again is with the E. F. Winterson Co.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that, with its plant and florists' supply departments, this month's business will far exceed any other in its history.

Tim Matchen escorted the entire store force through the Peter Reinberg rose houses Sunday afternoon, December 15, to give them an idea what they are going up against in the next week.

Frank Ayers, right-hand man for C. W. McKellar, says the holiday rush is well under way and that nobody can sleep for a week.

D. E. Freres says he never has seen carnations sell so well as in the last week.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is understood to be figuring on another extension of its glass next season.

W. W. Barnard Co. is distributing a handsome calendar among its customers.

Department store decorations and similar affairs are keeping Henry Wittbold's staff on the jump from early to late.

A. T. Pyfer and the Chicago Carnation Co. had thirty retailers and growers as their guests on a trip to Joliet December 18. A private car was provided on the 11:45 train and luncheon served on arrival at the greenhouses. A good cut was found to be on and The Herald looking fine. Most of the visitors also inspected the neighboring establishment of the Thompson Carnation Co., which is in excellent shape.

John F. Kidwell, president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says the cuts of Killarney at the Wellworth Farm plant are as fine as he has ever grown. One house of Beacon carnations is in crop and Mr. Kidwell says he would not object had he retained his carnation houses in place of growing roses, in view of the present favorable prices on carnations.

A. Henderson, of A. Henderson & Co., reports heavy orders on holly the early part of this week and he says his firm disposed of more than a carload December 16 to out-of-town buyers.

W. P. Kyle, of Kyle & Foerster, was a visitor in Kenosha, Wis., December 16, where he was the guest of P. M. Obertin.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, is of the opinion that carnations ing back stock that could have been cut earlier.

Speaking of the present shortage of carnations, W. E. Lynch, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., asserts that he does not recall the time when the market was so shy of carnations at this time of the year.
Phil Schupp, who is looking after the growing department at J. A. Budlong's in addition to his regular duties as store manager, is well pleased with the rose situation.

M. C. Gunterberg comments that violets have improved rapidly within the last fortnight and that both eastern and locally grown flowers are of an unusually high grade.
J. H. McNeilly says he has decided on radical changes in his establishment at the southeast corner of Sixty-third street and Lexington avenue before next season, doubling the space for candies and soda water but bringing the florists' department strongly to the front. He has a ten-year lease on the three stores in the building, but now uses only two, the confectionery being in the corner store, the flowers in the second, with the third store sublet.

ROSES FOR THE HOLIDAYS

BEAUTIES -- RICHMOND PINK AND WHITE KILLARNEY -- MARYLAND

For Quality this stock is hard to beat—fine, large flowers and of splendid color. Our supply consists mostly of the medium and better grades. We will have plenty of good roses, and you can depend on us to fill your order.

We also wish to call special attention to our fine stock of

VALLEY -- NARCISSUS -- STEVIA -- POINSETTIAS SWEET PEAS -- BOUVARDIA -- LILAC

This stock is fine and should prove very desirable for the holiday trade.

He says he will put the candy and fountain in the two inside stores, with the flowers in the corner, which is probably the best location in Woodlawn for a florist. He says his experience with flowers proves that this branch is well worth pushing.

Erne & Klingel say that violets have found a better demand during the last week.

A Percy Jones has established himself at the corner of Evanston and Wilson avenues under the name of The Fashion Shop. Probably this should not be confused with P. Jones, florist.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The scarcity of carnations is the feature of an active market that is not heavily stocked with flowers. Business has fallen off just a little, which prevents the prices of all flowers, except carnations, from advancing. The trading in roses is heavier than in any other flower; most of the shipping orders contain a preponderance of the queen of flowers. The Richmond crops have been so well timed for Christmas that they are just beginning to arrive in quantity. The other leading varieties of roses show an encouraging improvement in quality. The cold weather has helped to brighten the color of Killarney. No one seems to have a crop of carnations for Christmas. The knowing ones predict that the short and medium grades of roses will have to do duty instead of carnations in many cases. Marie Louise violets are in fair supply, but Lady Campbell and the singles are hardly equal to the demand. The former is preferred out of town, while the other two are favored locally. More gardenias are sold at the higher listed price than a week ago. Valley is in active demand. Cattleyas have become firmer. Paper Whites are freely bought. The demand for poinsettias is still inactive. Greens of all kinds are brisk.

A Promising Carnation.

The smaller of the two mammoth houses of the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, Pa., is largely filled with carnations. They are planted in solid beds and look remarkably well. The star variety in this vast house is one of their own seedlings, named Ruth. This promising debutante is probably 4 years old. There were 500 plants last season; now there are nearly 10,000. Ruth is described as a cerise, or cherry pink, somewhat resembling the old variety, Tidal Wave, in color. It is of good size and pleasing form, with strong stems, and, best of all, it is wonderfully prolific. Half of the plants were grown under glass all summer; they look best. The other half were field-grown; they look extremely well. One of the house-grown plants taken at random had twenty flower shoots. So pleased are the managers of the Florex Gardens with Ruth that they have invited three of the leading carnation experts of this vicinity, Edmund A. Harvey, Edward A. Stroud and Henry M. Weiss, to call this week and see the new variety growing.

Various Notes.

The Market.

There was a shortage of flowers last week on account of the cold, cloudy weather. The cut of roses has fallen off considerably. Business the last two weeks has been fair, but the lull which usually precedes the holiday season has been felt the last few days. A few advance orders are coming in for Christmas at this writing and a number of decorations are booked, which gives promise of a good holiday trade.

Carnations are fine, with long, firm stems. Pink Delight is unusually good. There is a big demand for carnations just now. Killarney and White Killarney are in good condition, but specials are few. There are some excellent Taft roses in the market. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Hillingdon are falling off considerably in crop. A few Milady roses are to be seen. Richmonds are scarce. Violets, valley, orchids and Roman hyacinths are plentiful, but the demand is meager. Few gardenias are seen here, and few cypripediums. Poinsettias, rhododendrons, azaleas, heathers, ardisias and Baby Ramblers are all in fine condition for Christmas. Laurel is being used in larger quantities than other greens.

Various Notes.

H. Madsen, of West Springfield, is growing some fine stevia. He is supplying some of the other florists with it. The Flower Shop, on Worthington street, is showing some late yellow mums.

Miss May French visited friends in Dalton, Mass., not long ago and attended the funeral of her aunt.

Mark Aitken had quite a little funeral work last week. He has a shipment of English birds for Christmas.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is sending some good potted poinsettias to this city for Christmas.

there has been a steady demand for supplies and decorative material. Most of it has, however, been from out of the city. The local florists seem to be waiting until almost the last minute before they get into this line, for to date their purchases have been somewhat limited. Red ruscus is proving immensely popular.

Various Notes.

J. T. Conger was quite successful with a house of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati this year. The plants were elegant.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market with Roman hyacinths and new bronze galax.

P. J. Olinger confidently expects this to be his best holiday season.

The J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. is getting in elegant hyacinths from Albert McCullough's own place.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been in receipt of excellent poinsettias.

Miss Mae Carroll has just returned from a most successful trip through the northern part of the state. Miss Carroll reports business good and is more than pleased with the uniform courtesy which she is accorded by those with whom she comes in contact while on her business trips.

Among out-of-town buyers and salesmen in the city last week were Miss Fannie White, Lexington, Ky.; George Gause, Richmond, Ind.; Chas. Dieterich, Maysville, Ky.; Jas. P. Keller, Lexington, Ky.; Sam Seligman, New York.

The Market.

Extremely cold weather and light shipments held the cut flower market steady last week, notwithstanding extreme dullness, as usual, in the retail section between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Prices did not vary, and are not likely to until the end of the present week, when the slight uplift for the holiday may reasonably be expected. There are no indications of a surplus in any department and a healthful tone exists.

Retailers complain of light demand, the department store shopping season being in full blast. The majority have been accepting and arranging plant displays, filling branch stores and storage rooms, and getting ready for the rush that is inevitable by Saturday. Evidently the plantmen have no reason to complain. Most of them already say "practically sold out" when one calls upon them. Shipping plants has been an easy matter this year, owing to the mild weather.

Roses are now at their best in color, stem and bud. There seems to be no shortage of American Beauties, and there should be no unreasonable advance on this or any other variety of rose for Christmas. The new roses grow more and more popular as their quantity increases, while all the older varieties are arriving in abundance and never seemed of better grade and quality. Killarney in all its variations seems to be in as wide demand as ever and is the real backbone of the rose market. There will be a large supply of carnations. Enchantress loses none of its popularity. Violets have been actually scarce at times, an unusual condition for New York, but 75 cents has been top for a week or two, and that for the selects. More single violets are seen this season than usual. There is a good supply of orchids in the usual winter varieties; 60 cents seems to have been the price, although a few have commanded a higher figure. The outlook is for a sufficiency for Christmas, and at reasonable values. Valley holds firm at 4 cents for the best, and lilies at 10 cents. Gardenias are improving daily.

There are still some fine mums arriving and the shipments will continue until Christmas, making this the longest mum season ever known. Poinsettias are everywhere and assert their value as appropriate for the retail windows. Some stock of especial size touched $4 per dozen December 14. Even stevia, of which the supply is limited, sells well. Callas are here now to stay. Lilac is arriving. Sweet peas are improving every day. Narcissi, hyacinths, bouvardia, wallflowers and daisies all are here in quantity.

Various Notes.

the Christmas tree custom would pass for all time into innocuous desuetude. The leading stores are recommending araucarias for the usual method of gift distribution, with the big table for the overflow. Hence the increasing popularity of the big araucarias. Meantime every supply house is busy, with doubled forces, day and night, in completing wreaths and wreathing. These specialists in southern supplies will surely have their banner season.

Madsen & Christensen, of Jersey City, have been sending excellent wall-flowers and daisies, cut, to Wm. Kessler. M. Graf, of Elmsford, neighbor of Scott Bros., sweet pea specialist, also is one of his shippers.

Manager Coan, of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., complains of lack of room. The MacNiff Horticultural Co. is holding an auction sale of holly daily. The top price December 14 was $3.50.

Jas. McManus already is settled in his new store, at 105 West Twenty-eighth street. His walls are a veritable art gallery, orchid pictures predominating. These five similar stores in the Nicholas block are so deep that a trolley line in each almost seems a necessity.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht have added another office to their facilities. Here W. H. Siebrecht, the incoming president of the Florists' Club, will make his headquarters for the winter.

Woodrow & Marketos say many shipping orders insure a record Christmas.

The firm of Reed & Keller has been in existence since 1870, forty-two years. They declare that the last year has been the most successful in their history. Many useful inventions have been put on the market by this firm, and adopted by the leading florists of the country. One of their best sellers this year has been the Santa box, a reproduction of a chimney, for plants or cut flowers. J. Austin Shaw.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

There is every indication of a good holiday trade this year. The weather has been favorable and most of the growers had little or no disease in any of their stock. We have had more than a normal amount of sunshine this fall and all crops have come on just about right to catch the holiday season.

Roses are in plentiful supply, but the demand keeps them at good prices. There is a much larger proportion of the better grades of Beauties than is usual, partly owing to the abundance of sunshine. Carnations are as plentiful as they ever are in this market. The quality is of the best. Sweet peas are coming in more freely, but the prices are about the same as two weeks ago. Violets are of better quality than they were, as we have been having colder weather. They are all cleaned up. Paper Whites are in good supply and there is use for every one of them, as there always is.

The usual supply of inferior holly is to be found on the market square and on the street corners. This makes it hard to sell the really good grades. The native supply of mistletoe is small this year and there seems to have been none shipped in.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

WHOLESALE price-lists of seeds do not show advances in prices in proportion to the crop failures of the year.

"As the trade knows," say W. Atlee Burpee & Co., in their new wholesale price list, "sweet peas are in short supply the world over—America has never before fallen down on sweet peas as this year."

THE duties on seeds will be up for consideration at Washington January 20, the committee on ways and means having given notice of a hearing on Schedule G of the tariff law for 10 a. m. that day. Paragraph 263 of Schedule G covers bulbs and paragraph 266 covers seeds. A number of the trade interests are preparing to be represented.

THE A. A. Berry Seed Co., of Clarinda, Ia., has nearly completed a new three-story building, 40x50 feet. The new structure is an addition to a frame building used as a warehouse south of the Burlington route freight station. The company also has a brick building in the same locality, as well as a large two-story brick building uptown.

G. H. HUNKEL Co., Milwaukee, has purchased the Wernich Seed Co., of that city. The store of the Wernich Seed Co., 27-29 Juneau avenue, will be closed as a retail store and used as a warehouse, the store and offices of the G. H. Hunkel Co. being continued as heretofore at 327 Chestnut street. The Wernich Seed Co. is an old and well established concern, being established in 1879. G. H. Hunkel Co. was established in 1905. E. P. Hunkel is president and G. H. Hunkel secretary and treasurer.

THE Arthur T. Boddington 1913 general catalogue, from the McFarland press, is one of the handsomest seed catalogues that have thus far been issued. It appears to leave nothing typographical to be desired. Also, the book has become one of the most complete, for it contains 152 pages. While it has been customary for seedsmen to prepay postage on small retail orders, the Boddington book makes a strong bid for business under the new parcel post by offering to prepay postage on all cash orders coming within the weight limit of eleven pounds.

THE Galloway Bros.-Bowman Co., the seed firm of Waterloo, Ia., has nearly completed a new warehouse and expects to have it ready for use by January 1. The building is of cement block construction. It covers a space 48x60 feet and is two stories high, besides the basement. Part of the second floor will be occupied by the offices of the company. It is estimated that the building and its equipments will cost about $25,000. The firm has contracted with the German-American Nitra-Gin Co., of Milwaukee, for exclusive distribution of its fertilizer in the United States and Canada for a period of twenty-five years.

THE American growers of aster seed have harvested pretty fair crops this year.

W. S. PINO, Providence, R. I., lost his wife December 10. Mrs. Pino had been in ill health for several months.

THE Albert Dickinson Co. has been given a permit to start the foundation for its seed warehouse at West Thirty-fifth street and South California avenue, Chicago.

THE first of the eastern seed catalogues for 1913 to reach The Review were those of Arthur T. Boddington, New York, and the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O. They both came to hand December 16.

AN onion set warehouse belonging to a Chicago grower named Anderson was burned last week while it contained 16,000 bushels of sets. The owner claimed a total loss, but it is understood an adjustment was made on a basis somewhat more favorable to the insurance companies.

SOME startling variations in prices in the 1913 general retail seed catalogues are developing. For instance, in two books arriving in the same mail one day this week, the first one opened quotes Alderman pea at $15 per bushel, while the second lists it at $8. The latter has Alaskas at $7.50, while the former reads $12.

HOLLY has turned comparatively scarce at Chicago this week. The large handlers in the trade have not been overloaded and the vegetable commission houses on South Water street that supply the uninspected stock have had little to offer that a florist could use. A number of these South Water street concerns have declined to handle holly this year, having had difficulty in previous seasons in getting out of the grade of stock sent them the money advanced on the shipments. Several of these houses have ceased to speculate on bouquet green, having found it a losing game, but those still in it are heavily loaded with both bulk green and wreathing for which there is no demand at the prices asked and of which they can not let go for less without suffering a loss.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

The Whilldin Pottery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., flower pots; W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., advance wholesale seed prices for 1913; Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England, special offer of lilies; Arthur T. Boddington, New York, N. Men who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than men who try to do nothing and succeed. When Daniel Webster came up before the Bar Association for his legal examination he was told to go back and study—that he didn't know his lessons. He replied that he thought the best way to learn law was to practice it. He was finally admitted, and proved to be one of the greatest lawyers and statesmen the world has ever known. It is practice, after all, that makes perfect. The same principle applies to the lily growing business. Some florists have had results and get cold feet. You would not quit business just because a customer failed to pay you—no, you would keep right on working that much harder, to make up. Same in lily growing—if you don't succeed at first try again—and be sure and try harder. Perhaps you don't know how to treat lilies—ask, if you are not sure. But keep right on, plant more, work harder, and bring the general average up to standard, so you can pay for past experiences. Faint heart never won fair lilies. The growers who stick to it, through thick and thin, are the ones who finally make money. Get good, reliable bulbs—Horseshoe Brand Giganteum—use them right, and they will make money for you. They are the best in the world—no exceptions. Growing instructions upon application. Order your Cold Storage Giganteum now for delivery throughout 1913—the following are present prices—storage free—payment 60 days after delivery.

Cold Storage Lily of the Valley

FOR DECEMBER AND JANUARY FORCING

New crop should never be used for December or January forcing, as it does not force easily or give the requisite amount of foliage so early in the season. Cold storage Valley should always be used for December and January forcing.

We carry only one grade—the very highest quality obtainable. Cases containing 250 pips, $5.00 each; 500 pips, $9.50 each; 1000 pips, $18.00 each.

PAPER WHITE GRANDIFLORA NARCISSUS

We can still supply a splendid lot of these bulbs in perfect condition. Bulbs have been held in cold storage, so that they are perfectly dormant. We offer two grades—13-ctm. bulbs, 1250 to the case, and 14-ctm. bulbs, 1000 to the case—which we will supply as long as unsold at $10.00 per case in case lots.

SPIRAEA

Gladstone—Fine clumps. Case lot of 100 at $8.00 per case. Queen Alexandra—Fine clumps. Case lot of 100 at $11.00 per case.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM AND MULTIFLORUM

Giganteum—7 to 9-inch bulbs, case of 300 at $16.50 per case.
Multiflorum—9 to 10-inch bulbs, case of 200 at $17.00 per case.

FINE NAMED HYACINTHS

We have left a few thousand bulbs in the finest named single and double commercial sorts—La Grandesse, L'Innocence, Grand Maître, Grandeur a Merveille, Bouquet Tendre, La Tour d'Auvergne, Flevo, Othello, etc., $4 00 per 100. Hyacinths, separate colors—red, white, blue—$2.50 per 100.

FREESIAs—French, mammoth bulbs, $6.00 per 1000. Purity, $10.00 per 1000.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Things are moving along considerably better, on account of the number of dinners, afternoon teas and other social functions. There has been a marked increase in the demand for stock and prices are slightly higher. There are plenty of flowers in nearly all seasonable varieties. More carnations are making their appearance, but the supply is not heavy enough to fill all orders. Chrysanthemums are at an end and their place is being filled by roses. Narcissi are exceptionally plentiful and are a little in excess of the demand. Azaleas, Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, cyclamens and other potted plants have made their appearance in the stores in goodly numbers. There will be enough cut flowers, with the possible exception of some few novelties, for Christmas, and the dealers are looking for a satisfactory business.

The early coming of Lent may have some little ill effect on the trade, though society can be depended upon to endeavor to cram into the next few weeks nearly everything in the way of entertainment that would have been scheduled to take place if the intervening time were longer. This will bulk the amount of business done considerably and would normally cause the season of dullness to be much longer than it would otherwise be, but, this being the inaugural year, it is hard to tell what will happen after Easter. Should Congress be convened by President-elect Wilson just after his induction into office, the social season will be prolonged considerably. There is a plan on foot to extend the inaugural ceremonies to cover a whole week, with

Various Notes.

Elmer C. Mayberry, a member of the firm of Mayberry & Hoover and an ex-president of the Florists' Club, is at the Georgetown hospital, where his big toe was amputated December 13. On the preceding day, with two companions, he went into the woods of Upper Marlboro, Md., after rabbits. While walking along the edge of a gravel pit the ground beneath him gave way and, as he fell, one barrel of the gun was discharged, tearing off a portion of the large toe of the left foot. A surgeon dressed the wound, but the following day the amputation became necessary. Mr. Mayberry had but recently recovered from illness resulting from being knocked down and run over by an automobile.

There is some little talk of booming William F. Gude to fill one of the vacancies in the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, the highest honor that can be paid to any resident of this city. The Anacostia Citizens' Association has picked him as its candidate and other similar organizations can be counted upon to back him if he will say that he is out for the position.

George C. Shaffer, Fourteenth and I streets, northwest, will shortly move into a new store, located diagonally across the street from his present location. This store is in a building but recently erected and is far superior in every way to his present quarters.

should like to know how much hydrocyanic acid gas could be safely used to kill aphids on these, without any danger of burning the foliage. The house is 100 feet long, six feet high to the eaves and fourteen feet to the ridge. I am growing lettuce at a loss at prevailing prices. Would it be advisable to discontinue growing it and grow radishes, considering that I can average 50 cents per dozen bunches? E. C. S.

The sample leaf was so badly dried up when received that it was hard to tell what was the matter with it. Parsley and lettuce growers have been making little if any money this season, so far, on account of the extremely low price of lettuce. But from now on through the winter the prices will undoubtedly be good. I think that Grand Rapids lettuce would pay better than radishes at 50 cents, as that is hardly enough for them. I would advise watering the parsley as you do the lettuce, between the plants and without wetting the foliage. Pick off the affected leaves and keep the soil moist, but not muddy.

In using gas in that house, it would be safe to use about four jars, placing a half pint of acid and a half pint of water in each jar about an hour before you are ready to fumigate. Then take a heaping tablespoonful of cyanide, carefully wrapped in paper, for each jar. Drop the packages, paper and all, in the jars, starting at the farther end of the house, and get out of the house quickly. Leave it shut up until toward morning, when it will be safe to go in and raise the ventilators, although the odor of gas can still be plainly noticed. H. G.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Los Angeles, Cal.—C. C. Shafer, who is Pacific coast representative for the George M. Garland Co., greenhouse builders, of Des Plaines, Ill., has his headquarters at 215 West Fourteenth street, not 15 West Fourteenth street, as was printed in one of the Garland advertisements last week.

INSPECTOR DESTROYS GALAX.

A consignment of galax leaves shipped to me from North Carolina was condemned at the express office here by the local commissioner of horticulture, he claiming they were infested with the larvæ of Aleyrodes Nubifera, or white fly. He destroyed the entire shipment. The commissioner would not let me send a specimen for identification, nor would he let them be treated to destroy the larvæ. He also warned me not to buy any galax or plant or leaf of any kind from North Carolina and most other southern states, as he would destroy them, whether he found them to be infested or not. He said that is the law. It is a new experience with me and I find myself lost without the galax and other green that can only be had in those states. Will you please throw some light on the subject for me?

W. E. Johnston.

Nevada City, Cal.

The Review has not previously heard of any injurious insect or disease being found on galax or other southern greens. There has been much ill feeling because of what some regard as the harshness of the California inspection law, but it is probable that the inspector did not mean to threaten the destruction of uninfested stock. Has anyone else had similar experience? Let us have the details.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

As predicted last week, stock is becoming more scarce as the holidays approach and there will be none too much to go around. The supply does not vary much from day to day, but there has been a gradual shortening up. In outdoor stock this has been caused, to some extent, by the cool nights. The temperature has been hovering close to freezing point even in the most favored localities, while in others a few degrees of frost have been registered. A good rain would soften the atmosphere and help growth.

In special Christmas stock not much has to be recorded. Growers in this locality have found that it does not pay to stop their roses and run the chances of missing a holiday, when by taking a regular crop the year around they more than break even. I have noticed this in particular with reference to that beautiful rose, Prima Donna, which is beginning to have more than a local reputation. The way it was staged at the San Francisco show is proof that it is well suited to northern conditions and it is always in flower. It makes such good stems that pinching is not necessary and there is always plenty of fine foliage. Orchids and valley are plentiful now, but a week may make quite a difference.

There is no English or Vancouver holly at present, but consignments are on the way and will be here before they are needed for the holidays. However, it is scarce and high in price. Other greens are plentiful and there is enough of the local holly to go around.

Plants are not too plentiful, though more have been grown this year than usual. Poinsettias are good, especially the neat little plants in 10-inch and 12-inch pans, suitable for centerpieces. Gloire de Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias are also good, but the hot weather by day makes it difficult to hold them. Ferns, palms, and green plants in general, are good and plentiful, but berried plants are scarce; in fact, there are practically none to be had.

Various Notes.

One of the most interesting visitors to this city for a long time was J. G. Cole, of Tamingfu, China, who was on his way back to the Celestial Kingdom after a summer's trip to his home in the east. Mr. Cole is gardening superintendent of the South Chid Li mission, where he grows as many as possible of the English and American varieties of vegetables. The climate of Tamingfu is dry, except for a couple of months in late summer, and considerable irrigation is necessary. The wells for water supply are bored about thirty feet deep and Mr. Cole says his wells usually have about ten feet of water at that depth. Yet, with the life-giving element so near the surface, the dry atmosphere is extremely hard on the plants. Ash, elm and huai—whatever the latter may be—are the principal trees used for lumber, and Kaffir corn is grown for bread-making. Mr. Cole sailed from San Francisco for China, December 13.

A. Beverley, of Santa Barbara, gave a demonstration of his adjustable irrigating sprayers before Park Superintendent Shearer in Central park, December 7. Mr. Shearer expressed himself as well pleased with them and is figuring on the cost of using them at Exhibition park. It is quite likely that they will be used on the San Francisco fair grounds, as Mr. McLaren has several of the machines in use and under observation. There are so many sprayers on the market that I have become rather chary of recommending any, but these surely act well and are powerful, covering large areas in a surprisingly even manner and with practically no run-off.

I recently had the pleasure of a run through Dr. Barlow's Sierra Madre place in company with W. W. Felgate, his capable gardener, J. B. Feldman and John Blake, of Pasadena. While Mr. Felgate was undoubtedly lucky in finding a good deal of vegetation on the place, such as large eucalyptus trees, palms and others, yet he has so skillfully blended his new work with the old that it forms one harmonious whole which must be extremely satisfactory to all concerned. A tennis court and water garden have been made at the west end of the place and Mr. Felgate is busy planting this latter with bulbous and herbaceous subjects. This will make an ideal spot for lilies. There is just sufficient shade cast by the eucalyptus trees to prevent their burning, while they will have ample light. Leading to this from the north is a little coppice or wood that would lend itself finely to treatment at small expense. Among the specialties here we noted some elegant beds of Nemesia strumosa Suttoni, a charming old annual that is not sufficiently well known here, as it likes the dry atmosphere of California. Cocos australis was in fine fruit and is almost as good as pineapple in flavor. Fine batches of cinerarias, herbaceous calceolarias and ferns are grown, and the whole place is a credit to Mr. Felgate, who runs it entirely with the help of one man. [Continued on page 90.]

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is moving along in a quiet but steady way. There is always a lull before the storm. Preparatory work is rapidly being arranged and orders are being booked steadily and firm prices will prevail. At this early date it is hard to determine the results, but there seems to be plenty of stock of good quality. Roses are looking fine, especially Richmond, Killarneys and Maid, while Beauties will be a little off crop. Carnations of all colors will be plentiful. Red usually is the first to clean out. Mums will be available in limited quantities. Local violets will be scarce, but the California shipments will be plentiful and sold at a price that gives a good margin of profit. Business houses and department stores have put on a Christmas hue, wreathing and decorative greens being in evidence on all sides. Oregon grape, or mahonia, a local decorative green, is effective for decorating, with a variation of color from green to a dark bronze.

Various Notes.

Joseph Costagnas, a local violet grower, was judged insane and taken to the asylum, but has been released to relatives in San Francisco. His place has been leased and will be taken care of, pending his condition for the future.

Julius Schnapp, of Seattle, is now identified with the Tonseth Floral Co. He is well known to the florists of this city, as he was here during the recent flower show.

E. R. C.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

After an unusually busy Thanksgiving, business has settled down to its usual level for this time of the year. Christmas stock is coming on in fine shape and the stores are fast taking on their holiday appearance. Stock is selling well and the supply seems to be about equal to the demand. Roses are still rather scarce, but carnations are more plentiful, with the prospects good for a heavy Christmas cut. There are still some of the late varieties of mums on the market, but it seems to be the general opinion that mums have not been a profitable crop this year, because of the low prices prevailing during the first part of the season.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held an interesting meeting in the club rooms December 5. The event of chief interest was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected: President, Henry Benthien; vice-president, J. L. Simpson; secretary, Fred Smith; treasurer, A. A. Hinz; trustee, Harry Atchinson.

It was decided to drop the bowling

Roses are scarce and not of extra good quality. Sweet peas are seen in one or two stores, but are not in great demand. Bulb stock is plentiful, but it is not selling so briskly as of late. Orchids are scarce.

Pot plants are daily getting more in evidence and are moving off in good numbers. Holly is good this year; there seems to be plenty of it on the market and prices are well maintained. The call for greens is constant.

Various Notes.

The first annual ball of the Seattle Florists' Club, held on the evening of December 11, in Queen Ann hall, was a brilliant success. The various committees had spared no efforts to make it so; they were rewarded with a good company and everything passed off satisfactorily. Invitations were accepted by the mayor of Seattle, and by florists of Tacoma, Everett and Port Townsend, as well as nearly all the local retailers and growers. The hall is a splendidly equipped place for an occasion of the kind and was tastefully decorated with palms, evergreens and chrysanthemums. Every lady received a corsage bouquet, while the men were adorned with carnations.

The Seattle Florists' Club deserves hearty support in the efforts it has been making to remove the violet peddlers from the city streets. The last of these itinerant merchants have been ordered off and it is now anticipated that there will be no further trouble from them.

The Florists' Exchange, of this city, shipped a large consignment of Christmas trees to Los Angeles, Cal., last week. They also made a shipment of flowers to Calgary, Alberta.

Shipments to various points in Alaska were made by several of our retailers last week.

The Capitol Hill Floral Co. received a shipment of pteris ferns from the east last week, badly frozen in transit.

Mr. Wilkinson, of Victoria, and Mr. Peterson, of Everett, were calling on the trade last week.

The Aabling-Ebright Seed Co. has a large stock of evergreens, ornamentals and fruit trees at its yards on Fourth and Virginia streets.

Miss Beatrice Burns, of the Burns Floral Co., was married to Floyd O'Grady at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, December 11. She has retired from the firm, her place there being taken by Mrs. Ryan, another sister. Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady have taken up their abode at Laurelhurst.

Miss Wagner has sold her interest in the Crescent Flower Shop to George Steward and Miss Irene Glazier, who will continue it as formerly. T. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has moderated again and the chances are for a rainy spell, which is much needed. Flowers, on the whole, are getting much scarcer, which is to be expected. Outside stock is on the wane, with the exception of violets and narcissi. Mums, although holding out well, are showing the results of the late season and only a few late sorts can be had. Christmas berries have captured the town and, although they are a cheap article, they are handled by everyone. Unless frosty weather interferes, they will be in good shape for Christmas.

Inside stock is not especially scarce, but everything is being used up. Valley is not plentiful and Roman hyacinths have helped out somewhat. Orchids have been scarce for a few days. Roses and carnations have risen a little in price, but the growers have been quite fair in their charges thus far. For the holiday trade, from all appearances, there will be plenty of stock to go around. There will be only a few good azaleas, but of begonias, poinsettias, cyclamens and similar material there is an abundance.

of that country. Mr. and Mrs. Baldocchi will reside in San Francisco.

A visit to the nurseries of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., near San Mateo, showed a big lot of Christmas stock coming on in splendid shape. The stock of poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens, ferns and palms is strictly first-class.

The California Evergreen Co. has rented a large store for the holiday trade on Broadway, opposite the post-office, Oakland.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE first calendar of the season came, as usual, from George E. Dickinson, New York, representative of Edward T. Dickinson, Chatenay, France.

THE Home Nursery Co., Salt Lake City, Utah, has been incorporated with $5,000 capital. The officers are: President, F. P. Spitler; vice-president, G. D. Watson; secretary and treasurer, M. O. Randolph.

THE Fresno Nursery Co., Fresno, Cal., has closed a contract calling for the delivery of over 30,000 fig trees to the California Farms Produce Co., 12,000 of these trees to be delivered this season and the remainder next.

M. E. CHRISTOPHERSON has been elected as vice-president and general manager of the Salt Lake Nursery Co., at Salt Lake City, Utah. He succeeds Victor Christopherson, who resigned to attend to his private business affairs. W. J. Horne remains secretary and treasurer of the concern.

NOTICE has been given of a hearing January 20 by the ways and means committee of Congress on Schedule G of the tariff law, paragraph 264 of which covers the duties on nursery stock. Irving Rouse, of Rochester, is chairman of the tariff committee of the American Association of Nurserymen.

GEORGE W. EDEN, a nurseryman of Lone Tree, Ia., is said to have had a notable exhibit of seedless apples at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Iowa Horticultural Society, held at West Liberty. Some of the fruit, it is said, bears a small seed pod at the blossom end, similar to a navel orange, but other specimens are without even as much as a trace of the seed.

THE twenty-fourth annual meeting of the South Dakota State Horticultural Society is to be held in Redfield, S. D., January 21 to 23, 1913. It is the business of this society to gather all the information and experience possible con-

WESTERN NURSEYMEN MEET.

The Western Association of Nurserymen held its annual convention this year, as usual, at Kansas City. The dates were December 11 and 12. It was the twenty-third meeting. The attendance was sixty-five. The following officers were elected:

President—F. H. Weber, Nursery, Mo.

Vice-president—T. E. Greisa, Lawrence, Kan.

Secretary and treasurer—E. J. Holman, Leavenworth, Kan.

Nursery inspection and inspection laws were, aside from market conditions, the principal subject for discussion. It was the first meeting since the passage of the federal quarantine bill and W. P. Stark, of Louisiana, Mo., and Prof. S. J. Hunter, of Lawrence, Kan., who had represented the association in this matter, reported on it. Uniformity in legislation by the states and the elimination of red tape on shipments of nursery stock were demanded by the association. Peter Younger, of Geneva, Neb., chairman of the legislative committee of the national association, was made chairman of the committee in charge of the legislative program of the Western Association. Other members are J. W. Hill, Des Moines; W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Prof. S. J. Hunter, of the University of Kansas.

NEW SCARLET CARNATION The Herald

Winner over all other Scarlet carnations the past two years.

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, St. Paul, 1912.

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, Cleveland, 1912

Winner of first prize, best 100 red, Cincinnati, 1911

DESCRIPTION

Color:—Brilliant scarlet, good even shade.

Form:—Large 3 to 3½-inch, well rounded flowers, full center, scalloped edges, outer petals standing out well, showing the flower off to good advantage.

Calyx:—Strong, large calyx; never bursts, very much on the order of Harlowarden.

Habit:—Ideal, upright growth; deep green colored foliage, breaks readily from the base, making a rapid growth and producing flowers in remarkably short time. Easy to grow and propagate.

Stem:—Long and strong, not heavy, always stiff enough to hold the large flower perfectly erect.

Rooted Cuttings ready for immediate delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Guarantee:—We guarantee this variety to fill a long felt want for a good all around commercial scarlet; one that will produce high grade flowers with long stems right from the beginning of the season to the end.

The Herald is the Best Commercial Scarlet for you to grow, because it will produce more perfect flowers in a season than any other scarlet and bring a higher price than any other; because the flowers are all perfect; stem stiff and keeps the longest. Compared with Enchantress it will produce one-third more blooms. No culls; no splits; no weak stems. All rooted cuttings guaranteed strong, well rooted and satisfactory in every respect.

NEW AND STANDARD VARIETIES—January Delivery 200,000 CUTTINGS READY

We are propagating from flowering stems only, not from cut back stock. Propagating from stem cuttings only insures perfect health and the most free flowering qualities.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

Coming-out parties, receptions and some funeral work kept stock pretty well cleaned up last week. Carnations are still a scarce article and prospects are not any too encouraging for a large holiday cut, especially of the red ones.

From Sunday to Friday last week we experienced our first cold snap, for the mercury dropped to 2 degrees above zero.

Various Notes.

Archie McDonald, who recently had charge of the Pfister hotel flower stand, has accepted a better position in Cincinnati. Philip Frisch, a Milwaukee man, has taken his place.

Negotiations were completed December 16 by which the G. H. Hunkel Co. absorbs the Wernich Seed Co. If possible the Hunkel Co. will utilize the Wernich store as a warehouse and conduct all business from its own store, at 327 Chestnut street.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports a rushing business in holly, mistletoe and other green goods. Holly thus far has been of good quality.

The Gust Rusch Co. reports business fine, but the shortage in carnations is giving considerable trouble.

The Fox Point Floral Co. has its usual lot of cyclamens for the holidays. This concern has a reputation for fine cyclamens and this year is no exception. All were spoken for before this, some going as far as Pittsburgh.

During the cold spell last week, Henry Gabel, who represents the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., made the rounds in spite of the fact that his samples suffered considerably from the cold. E. O.

Painesville, O.—The Painesville Garden & Greenhouse Co. is much pleased with the results of its first year in the business and considers the outlook for the future highly encouraging. The company was incorporated about a year ago, with a capital of $20,000, by Alfred E. McKee, Chas. M. Hawley, Edmund Witzman, Samuel J. Potts and Edwin H. Hawley.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

TORONTO, ONT.

A Visit to Dunlop's.

While in Toronto I visited John H. Dunlop's place. I found everything coming on finely for the holidays. The roses all gave promise of big crops. The most remarkable in appearance was a block of Killarney roses. Their deep green foliage and luxuriant growth, six to nine buds to the plant, just right for Christmas, were to me so strikingly different from the average in growth and general appearance that I inquired particularly and found that this block had been forced, then planted in the open and left out three winters, potted last spring and at planting time put into the benches. The object was to put new vitality into the plants. The experiment seems to be highly satisfactory. Mr. Dunlop intends to propagate his stock for next season from these plants.

Some promising varieties in the new importations on trial are to be planted next season. Sunburst is doing nicely and is a good seller. Considering the disadvantage on account of the smoke and soot from the factory and other buildings, the Dunlop stock in general is in fine shape. It is necessary to wash the glass frequently, both inside and outside. Mr. Dunlop intends to look up a new location in the spring. The building operations all about him have increased the value of the land, which, when sold, will naturally increase the Dunlop bank account. He certainly has a fine trade at his Yonge street store and an extensive wholesale trade throughout the Dominion.

Opportunity Knocks

At your door to secure the very Best Silver Pink Snapdragon in existence. Will you accept it or remain in the same old rut, growing an inferior variety, and wonder why your competitor is prospering more than you?

Read what some of the Leading Florists have to say about Buxton's Silver Pink Snapdragon:

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

October 19, 1912.

Dear Sir: Your light pink Snapdragon I consider the best color of any I have grown. Just the shade of a Killarney rose and one that the ladies like. I have watched all the pink ones that are sent to the Boston market, but they are away behind your variety. I am growing your variety now entirely.

Very truly yours.

S. J. GODDARD.

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton.

Dear Sir: The light pink Snapdragon you are shipping is a winner, commanding a good price and snapped up quick by the best buyers, on account of its beautiful soft pink coloring and good all-round habit. Grow more of it.

Yours very truly,

THOS. PEGLER.

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

October 24, 1912.

Dear Sir: We have grown your light pink Snapdragon the last two years, and are very much pleased with it.

Yours very truly,

Carnations!

A word to the grower of carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this, gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We have 150,000 cuttings ready for DECEMBER delivery, and we shall have 200,000 for JANUARY.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore . . . $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family; extremely free; the earliest scarlet to bloom; continues to the close of the season in fine color. Brings a big Christmas crop; won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Trade was fairly good last week and is on a steady increase. Stock has not been as plentiful as it was, since the mums are now practically off the market, although there are a few Nonin and Chadwick left. Narcissi are more plentiful and they help to fill up the orders for funeral work with the retailers. Violets are selling well and none are thrown away. Roses are fair and bring a moderate price. There is no shortage, but the market keeps them cleaned up fairly well. Carnations are at a fancy price and are hard to get hold of at this time.

Various Notes.

E. H. Frandsen & Co. will have a full crop of fine roses and carnations for Christmas. They have two houses in cyclamens, in 4-inch, 5-inch and 6-inch pots, that are of fine appearance.

R. S. Brown was operated on Monday, December 9, and is expected to be out of the hospital before Christmas.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business improving and say that Christmas orders are coming in heavily. Carnations are scarce with them.

Wm. Foith has a fine lot of snapdragons and sweet peas. His carnations are full of buds, but he is afraid the main crop will be too late to come in for the holiday trade.

Ed. A. Humfeld has some excellent Chadwick in bloom, both white and yellow, which he expects to have for Christmas.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has an excellent stock of pot plants of all kinds for Christmas.

Samuel Murray's Lorraine begonias are as fine specimens as are to be found. He sells a large number every year.

The W. H. Sawvel Floral Co. has a splendid lot of carnations, full of buds, which look promising for the holidays.

Miss J. Murray says she has received a great many Christmas orders and that business is good.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

We have Begonias to beat the band; can supply all wants. Our skill to grow these to perfection is a secret only known to us; by our special treatment we give them that beautiful deep red tint.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is one of our so well known novelties; they are in a fine state, in bloom now, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Did you see the present view of a house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, in bud and bloom, in Review of Dec. 12?

Begonia Lonsdale, a pink variety, 5½ to 6-in., 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, in bloom now, in fine condition, 5½ to 6-in., large stock, a real bargain at 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Our usual strain of improved Begonia Erfordii now ready; bright red color; large 4-in., 15c to 20c.

Begonia Argenteo-Guttata, 4-in., 20c.

AZALEA INDICA

For later and for Easter blooming we only imported the well known American varieties, such as Mme. Vander Cruysen, Paul Weber, Niobe, John Llewellyn, Apollo, DeSchryveriana, Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, Vervaeckiana and a few others, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Blooming azaleas, assorted, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. We give good value for the money and use our judgment as to size; so when you order, don't mention any size; we will ship plants according to money sent, and you can rest assured that Godfrey Aschmann will give you your money's worth. POSITIVELY CASH WITH ORDER.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When In Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION.

NORTHPORT.

Color, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W. Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather. The growth is wonderfully free and continuous and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We have for immediate delivery A1 rooted cuttings of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Jas. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., N. Y.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

The weather has been bright here this week and so far this month we have not had our dreaded dark December days. Trade has been good all around and funeral work has helped to keep the retailers busy. Roses are of good quality, but the quantity is small. White Killarney is scarce, as also is Richmond. Killarney holds pride of place, the color being good and the flowers of good substance. American Beauties are more plentiful than they have been at any time this month, but more would be welcome, as they sell well. Mrs. Aaron Ward is the outstanding yellow, while Sunburst is hardly seen. Carnations are grand and come in on fine stems. Good Beacon are never left unsold. Pink Delight and Winsor find ready buyers. A few chrysanthemums are coming in, but they do not amount to much, as they are too scarce to make any impression on the market. Violets are exceedingly scarce, but sweet peas make up for this shortage, as some fine flowers are coming in. Poinsettias are arriving in large quantities, also ardisias, cyclamens, begonias and primulas. Asparagus is in good demand.

Various Notes.

A. N. Pierson is cutting some splendid poinsettias for this market. Rose Milady is showing up so well that all who see it say that it is the best red rose on the market.

George A. Parker has been appointed director of Keeney park, and the foreman, George H. Hollister, has been made superintendent.

Thomas R. McClunie is out again after a serious illness.

The Quality Flower shop reports business excellent and is looking forward to a heavy Christmas trade.

Frank Ranney has returned from a short vacation and is looking much better.

It is reported that J. A. Brodrib has withdrawn his case against the town. The city proposes to extend Cemetery street, which will necessitate the removal of his greenhouses. W. S. C.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

A MASSACHUSETTS HOUSE.

We have a house 35x140, sides four feet high and sixteen and one-half feet to ridge. Please inform us how many square feet of glass there are in this house and what would be the best way to pipe it for steam and hot water combined. If heated by hot water, what is the best method of forced circulation? Massachusetts climate.

F. B. P.

There would be not far from 5,880 square feet of glass in the roof of the house described, besides some 220 feet in each exposed end. When a house is to be heated with a combined steam and hot water system, it is generally advisable to put in only so much pipe as will be required to heat the house with steam in the coldest weather and then use it as a hot water system only in mild weather, when the radiation is sufficient to secure the desired temperature. While it is always advisable to use 1½-inch pipe for a steam system, for a combined steam and hot water system it is generally better to use 1½-inch pipe for the returns in a house more than 100 feet long.

The letter does not state what temperature is desired, but, for 60 degrees, three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 1½-inch returns would answer for steam and could be used for heating the house with hot water when the temperature outside is 20 degrees above zero. By connecting a mercury seal to the expansion pipe the temperature of the water could be raised to nearly that of steam and the system could 800 square feet of radiating surface: If one 3-inch overhead flow pipe is used, eleven 2-inch returns will be needed in each house, which will call for one more return on the inner wall than is proposed. Of course the house can be heated in ordinary weather if only ten returns are put in, but to maintain the temperature stated, when the thermometer is below zero, will not be economical unless at least one more pipe is added.

It would be better to run the flow pipe downhill than to carry it with a rise, and the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, instead of one 3-inch, is suggested. In that case nine 2-inch returns would be sufficient.

STATE COLLEGE, PA.

The seventh annual Farmers' Week at the Pennsylvania State College will occur December 26 to January 2. There will be much of general interest to florists and nurserymen and considerable of special application to the business. C. H. Totty is on the program for December 28, to talk on carnations and chrysanthemums. The other lectures on trade topics are by the instructors in the college. Last year several florists attended during the entire week, and no doubt others will do so this year. Senator Joseph Heacock says it was one of the most interesting experiences of his life.

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR ^A_ND MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2 1/4 inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

Morris Goldenson has returned from San Francisco and says there is plenty of stock around the northern city. He is showing some elegant Silver Wedding mums.

Walter Armacost, of Ocean Park, will be in with an elegant crop of roses and carnations for Christmas. The roses look especially fine, his Beauties having been kept hard all summer. All other varieties are equally strong and vigorous, and the initial holiday of the new plant will surely be a good one.

The outlook for the citrus fruit nurserymen here is of the brightest. With almost twice as many trees grown as in former years, prices are well maintained and business is brisk. John R. King, of the J. R. King Nursery Co., of Whittier, says that inquiries and orders are better this year than last, much citrus land being planted that has hitherto grown barley.

At the Roserie this week I saw much the finest azaleas so far seen, and inquiries showed they had been grown by Howard & Smith, at Montebello.

Murata & Co report business fine, especially in out-of-town shipments. Carnations are especially good here.

Progress is the watchword of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. Another addition to the holdings of this firm has been made, this time on the Whittier road, halfway to Montebello, where considerable acreage has been secured for a seed trial and sample ground. Greenhouses will be built, besides other structures for the growing of plants, largely vegetable, for which they have an enormous demand. The northern holdings of the firm also enable it to compete closely with other large growers of flower seeds, for which there is an ever increasing demand here and in the east.

Frank Lichtenberg's store is particularly attractive now, the red ruscus being used with good effect.

The H. N. Gage Co. is doing a big business in made-up garlands of redwood and other evergreens. The different species of berberis now being sent down from Oregon, under various names, make elegant decorative material.

O. C. Saakes is not any too well pleased to have his windows practically blocked up by scaffolding for the Christmas display time, and it is a shame so elegant a showing has so poor a chance. Funeral work is good here. Stanley Purdy is now with Mr. Saakes, and he and O. Schneider seem to be shaking down to good team work. I have seen O. C. frequently around the best shopping district of late; doubtless the work of selecting the first Christmas present for the boy is taking a good deal of his time and consideration.

If that were possible, I should say Charles Morton is going faster than ever since becoming sole proprietor of the Los Angeles Flower Market. One day he is in San Francisco, the next he is using that persuasive tongue of his to tempt the Fourth street buyers. "Big business" is the constant cry and Mr. Morton is sure "some hustler."

Tony and his brothers are almost snowed under with holly and fine greens for Christmas, but the demand locally is so good that the new Los Angeles Evergreen and Cut Flower Supply Market is likely to be well cleaned out for Christmas. Good business keeps all on the run here.

The two members of the firm of Boyle & Darnaud, of San Diego, were visitors here last week.

At Dieterich & Turner's Montebello place there is a magnificent display of ornamental stock in large boxes and Japanese tubs that I am sure could not be duplicated in southern California. In palms there are grand specimens of Kentia Forsteriana, besides splendidly grown Rhaps humilis, Cocos australis and C. plumosa, all fresh, green and in the most robust health. The philodendrons are magnificent; so are the ficuses, while a large number of Japanese box, or Buxus Japonica, must be seen to be realized. This is surely a winner; the habit is as good as that of the old B. sempervirens; it is just as clean in growth and as fine in color, while it stands the California sun with impunity. Always looking ahead, Mr. Turner has planted out some hundreds of thousands of this, and, unless all signs fail, this planting is going to produce enormously of green, to say nothing about plants, alongside of which the imported Belgium stock will pale. In the roses there are many novelties which must shortly be noted, but just at present I will only mention the fine stock of pot poinsettias. These are dwarf, well finished, with finely colored bracts, and in all sizes, from small stock fit for fern dishes to immense specimens and plants made up with Boston ferns. Surely this ought to be a record-breaking holiday for the firm.

H. R. Richards.

Comparative Costs of Erecting Iron Frame and Pipe Frame Greenhouses

THE MATERIALS FOR PIPE FRAME houses cost less—but the erection costs more.

This statement is based on the carefully preserved records of both kinds of construction erected in the past three years. This difference of cost in favor of the iron frame is of course greater in houses from forty feet wide, up. Mr. E. B. Sage, of Bradford, Pa., has three of our iron frame houses—the complete framework of which he put up in record breaking time.

Having set all his posts and attached the eave plates, or gutters—the rafters were laid on the ground, bolted together at the ridge, and the angle iron ties secured in place. Then with a movable tackle that he rigged up, the two rafters were lifted up and the lower ends dropped in between the gusset plates on the posts and bolted up. It was then an easy matter to put on the purlins and the house was all ready for the wood-work.

So before you get your mind firmly fixed on having one of our Pipe Frame houses—good as they are—let's go carefully into the comparative costs and see if in the beginning (as well as the end) it does not figure out in favor of the Iron Frame.

If you contemplate increasing your plant this coming year, get busy as soon as you can.

Send for us early, giving us time enough to go into your problem thoroughly, as well as to give yourself ample time to carefully consider things, after we have made our suggestions and submitted plans and estimate.

Do this and then place your order timely to insure its early completion.

HERE'S ONE IN THE FAR WEST

Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah

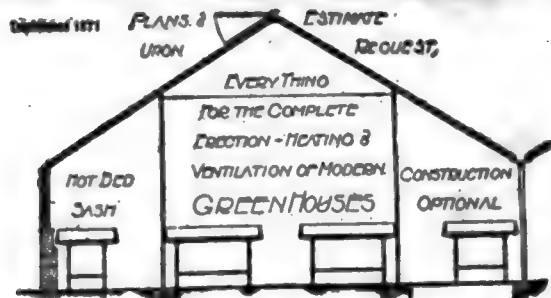

TWO WEEKS AGO you saw on this page a picture of the two steel frame houses built in New Castle, Pa., for Weinschenk & George. Here is a new, modern range of glass in far-away Utah, built entirely with Moninger material. It proves again our claim that distance cannot be considered if you are out to get the best house for the least money. You can't afford to build until you have a complete itemized estimate from us.

Mr. Miller, the business end of the Miller Floral Co., was for many years in the employ of various large growers in the east. He knew all about the eastern methods of building and thought they were perfect. When he came to us his eyes opened wide as we showed him how far Moninger construction was ahead of all others.

Winter weather slows up and kills off horse delivery.

The efficient, economical Electric Commercial Vehicle is a moving advertisement reflecting the modern methods of its owners.

Blizzards Bested by Electrics

Eight inches of snow blanketed New York City during the Christmas rush of last year. The Electric came through this severe test with flying colors—John Wanamaker and Gimbel Brothers running large advertisements to impress the public with the get-there efficiency of their Electric Delivery Systems.

Electrics Efficient at 30° Below 0

The Winnipeg Paint and Glass Company allowed one of their Electrics to stand three hours with the temperature at 30 degrees below zero, then loaded up and covered 30 miles that day.

What It Means to You

What Electrics have done for others they will do for you. You really should not put off investigation any longer. If you write us today, we will gladly send you interesting literature about Electric Commercial Vehicles.

190 Packages Delivered in One Day

During the busiest week of 1912, December 18 to 23, an Electric Delivery Car in the service of Wright Kay and Company, of Detroit, averaged 48 $\frac{2}{3}$ miles per day. It made an average of 100 stops per day for the first five days, and on the 23rd delivered 190 packages.

Public interest and private advantage both favor the Electric.

A RECORD-BREAKING BUSINESS.

Some of Its Lessons.

The Thanksgiving business in 1912 gave a tremendous stimulus to preparations for the Christmas trade. The Thanksgiving demand was so gratifyingly ahead of previous years that it afforded every encouragement to believe that Christmas also would break all previous records. There never has been any difficulty in selling all the stock of certain kinds which was available at Christmas, and this year extra efforts were made in all directions to add to the supply of the articles recognized as ready sellers. The trade everywhere was confident and never in the previous history of the flower business have florists offered such great quantities of material to the buyers of Christmas gifts.

In addition to preparing for a big business, the far-seeing members of the trade made special effort along the line of getting early orders. Christmas coming Wednesday this year left a short selling season. Ordinarily a holiday business covers three days, but this year Sunday intervened. Some sought to handle their Christmas rush in the two days preceding the holiday, but the more far-seeing ones recognized the impossibility of handling so big a volume in so short a time and made special effort to get the buyers started in the week preceding Christmas. This was done by providing an early display, and the use of the local newspapers.

Perpetuated Materials.

One of the notable features of the Christmas business has been the enormous increase in the sale of prepared foliages. This material also assisted the retailers in lengthening the selling season. It was possible to make a big display of the articles made of perpetuated materials, for there was no danger of deterioration. In many cases quantities of baskets of ruscus and other similar stock which had been made up some days in advance of Christmas, with the idea of providing a bright display and having the articles ready when needed, sold so rapidly that they were completely cleaned out days ahead of the anticipated time. The supply houses say they never have experienced anything like the rush of orders by wire asking the duplication of previous orders for small baskets, preferably red, ruscus, statice, pine cones and similar articles. Simply thousands upon thousands of baskets have been sold filled with red ruscus, boxwood, statice, cones, thistles and other similar material in endless variety of combination. Red has, of course, been the prevailing color, with red and green the popular combination. An immense quantity of ribbon has been used, more than ever before.

The use of "artificial" material has not met with unqualified approval, but the criticism is usually on the part of those who have expected to feel the press of this new competition. The retailers have been in search of variety—and dollars.

Blooming Plants.

The season appears to have been an unfavorable one for the plant growers grown plants of these varieties. The possibilities of marketing at profitable prices are simply without a limit.

Other plants have sold well but in rather less quantities. The Lorraine begonia has largely given place to Cincinnati, which is giving better satisfaction, but the buyers are afraid of the begonia. It sells well to persons who do not value money highly, but not in the average run of stores. The cheaper class of berried plants has sold stronger than ever before and there has been a big market for the higher priced stock in this line, ardisias having been offered in greater quantities than in any previous year and selling clean. Aucubas and skimmias have had good sale in the few localities in which they were offered.

With the flowering plants, more or less of the standard decorative varieties have been used. The araucaria appears to be returning to favor as a Christmas specialty. Dressed up with a little red bow near the tip of each branch, and in an attractive pot, it sold well. In spite of the fact that the fern is not ordinarily considered a Christmas plant, there has been a large business done in the Boston and its progeny. These appeal to practical people.

Cut Flowers.

The old conditions surrounding the cut flower markets at Christmas no longer prevail. With the advent of the newer varieties of roses, and the greater skill of the growers, it has become possible to time the crops so that there is fair assurance of adequate supplies of roses. The growers can get the Killarneys whenever they want them. Unfavorable weather may add to the difficulties, but roses have not been scarce in recent seasons. In many localities the same mastery of carnations was not apparent; the crops will be along in January; they were not ready for Christmas. Quite the contrary, in many cases poinsettias were too early and had largely been moved out before the holiday.

White flowers never have any special sale at Christmas; they are worked off with other stock. There never is any trouble in selling all the red flowers, and all the brighter colors. This year first-class prices have been realized, both at wholesale and retail. There is no longer the protest there once was at Christmas values. The retailer sells at a closer margin at Christmas than at other seasons and the public has be-and an exceedingly favorable one for the plant sellers. In many cases the stock was ready too early, and the variety offered this season showed little in the way of novelty. The big sellers have been the cyclamen, the poinsettia, and the primula. Of these the growers were cleaned up days in advance of the holiday, providing they let it be known what they had for sale, and the demand at retail has been something simply enormous. There appears to be no possibility of any early oversupply of well-come accustomed to expecting maximum prices in every department of trade at Christmas. There is no reason for anyone, grower or retailer, to feel otherwise than satisfied with the Christmas business in cut flowers. Naturally, now that other salable stock is available, the retailers are apt to push the less perishable articles, but the demand for cut flowers is world-wide and constant. The box of cut flowers is the refuge of the last-day Christmas buyer who does not know what else to send. It is as staple in a flower store as sugar in a grocery.

Greens have sold as usual. The holly wreath has never-changing vogue.

Easter Is Near.

The interval between Christmas and the next great flower day, Easter, is shorter this year than for many seasons. The character of the Easter business is radically different from that of Christmas, but the experience of the current week leads to every assurance that Easter of 1913 will consume everything of salable quality the trade can have ready in the third week in March.

the fact that the decoration shown in the accompanying illustration was for one of his luncheons at the Blackstone hotel will add interest to it. The function was in the English room, where all the furnishings are dark. Consequently Richmond roses were used. Since the table was long, to seat thirty-two guests, it was necessary to divide the decoration into three sections, identical except that the mound of roses in the center was slightly larger than the two at the ends. The decoration was by John Mangel.

BENSON'S NEW STORE.

Indianapolis recently has advanced perceptibly in its importance as a flower center and in the character of its retail establishments. Indianapolis always has been a first-class flower town, with several firms doing a large and profitable business. Recently the number has been increased by the opening of the new establishment of the Hill-Heller Co. and one of the old established retailers has advanced in rank through moving from his old store into a much larger and handsomer store in the Denison hotel, which is one of the best locations in the city. In the accompanying illustrations two views are given of the new Denison hotel establishment. Lester F. Benson is proprietor. He has now been in his new quarters long enough to have demonstrated that in this case, as in others of its kind, the increased and improved facilities have brought a prompt response from the public. His business is much larger than it was in the old store. Mr. Benson has greenhouses at Twenty-second street and Park avenue, but he is not able to produce anything like the quantity of stock he retails. He is a large buyer at Indianapolis and also in the Chicago market.

Champaign, Ill.—Thomas Franks & Son have completed the enlarging and remodeling of their greenhouses.

THE RETAIL

CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES.

Possibly the best selling Christmas novelty was the small split willow or braid basket, dyed red, mossed and filled with boxwood sprays, red ruscus and winter berries, of course with some red ribbon on the handle. Stores that were ready in time sold these in surprising numbers at from $2 to $5 each. There were plenty of ways to vary the filling, but in most cases the more red the basket contained, without being all red, the better seller it was.

The Christmas trees mounted on plateaus and trimmed up as shown in The Review for December 12 proved splendid sellers. A tree that cost 25 cents could, with the addition of the "fixings," be given a selling value of $2 or $2.50 in any store catering to prosperous people.

Ruscus was everywhere. Retailers who used ten pounds last Christmas used 100 pounds this season. Where it all came from is a question, for it is a natural product, but that the supply proved equal to the demand was a proof of the resourcefulness of the supply houses. In fact, most of them were so resourceful that they provided, at the last moment, just a little more than they could sell, though earlier in the season many were short. There was considerable variation in the quality of the ruscus, but the ordinary store florist cares less for the length of the sprays than he does for the color; a bright red is wanted, not a dull, dark red.

REX BEGONIAS.

Can you give me information that will enable me to grow good Rex begonias? Those I have in stock appear strong and healthy, but the leaves continually turn brown, as if burned.

G. I. W. C.

Give your Rex begonias a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night. Shade them from direct sunshine, or their beauty will be spoiled. If they show any signs of poverty at the root, either repot them or feed with manure water once a week. Spray overhead occasionally; some people imagine this hurts them, but it is purely a fable. Portions of leaves placed in sand now, with a good bottom heat, will root readily and make heavy plants before next fall.

CANDYTUFT FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I should like to know the proper time to sow candytuft to have it in flower for Memorial day. Please mention, also, the best variety for indoor culture and give me some cultural hints.

J. R. S.

Candytuft to be in flower for Memorial day should be sown about the middle of January. If vacant beds or benches are at disposal, sow it in rows twelve to fifteen inches apart and rather thinly. Do not leave more than three or four good seedlings to the square foot where fine stalks are wanted. Usually there are no empty benches in January. This being so, the best plan is to sow in 3-inch pots. Put half a dozen seeds in a pot and thin out to three. You can also sow in flats of light soil, but great care must be taken to pot off in good season, as candytuft seedlings do not transplant as easily as some other annuals. Place the pots or flats on a shelf or bench in a moderately cool and well aired house, with a temperature of not over 48 degrees at night. Water carefully. Do the necessary thinning in good season and spread out a little where the little plants crowd.

The plants must go into the benches before they become at all potbound, for if once they get stunted and hard no amount of after treatment will recuperate them. Use a generous soil, such as would grow good mums or roses. Keep the surface soil stirred frequently and ventilate the house freely. Candytuft will not stand any coddling and does better in a night temperature of 45 degrees than 50 degrees. If your plants seem at all late you can run them a little warmer as the flowers open. On the other hand, if early, you can keep them cool. Candytuft must be kept moving all the time, so be careful not to give it any check. It will pay best to have the plants thin in the benches where strong spikes are wanted, and these are what bring the money. As to the variety, every seedsman has some special strain. Giant White Perfection is the best I have grown, but many like Empress.

ADVANTAGES OF ORGANIZATION.

[An essay by August R. Baumer, Louisville, awarded first prize in a contest conducted by the Kentucky Society of Florists.]

I should like to make the title of this paper "Some of the Advantages Derived from Such Societies as the S. A. F. and the Kentucky Society of Florists." You will note I did not indicate that I would show the advantages of belonging to these societies, but I will try to show the advantages that arise from the existence of such organizations as our national and state societies.

Unfortunately for these societies, the man who is not a member receives many of the benefits that should go only to those who support and assist in making the societies the success that they are.

In more than twenty years' connection with the florists' business I have seen the S. A. F. grow from its small beginning at Cincinnati to its present standing, with its charter from the Congress of the United States. I have watched the many special societies that have sprung from it, and I know of the work that it has done. I also know much of the good that has been accomplished by our state society.

Work of the S. A. F.

The national society has been able, through the union of numbers and influence, to get one of the strongest combinations of capital, the express companies, to grant a reduction in express rates on plants that are properly packed, and also has secured the better handling, by the express companies' employees, of all packages containing cut flowers or floral work of any nature. This has greatly helped all florists, because it enables them to ship funeral work to the surrounding country with a great degree of safety.

The S. A. F. has by persistence and hard work had the United States government get its experts to take up the study of plant life. By this I mean especially such plants as are generally grown by florists, their diseases, their

A EUROPEAN SUCCESS.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. G. Lloyd Wigg has been one of the latest successes in Europe. The bloom is shown in the accompanying illustration. The color is canary yellow and just a shade lighter than the most popular yellow varieties grown for the American cut flower markets. It has been one of the notable successes on the other side of the Atlantic, some wonderful blooms having been seen at the English exhibitions. C. H. Totty staged it at some of the autumn flower shows in this country and is enthusiastic over it, although he says his stock was received so late that he believes he will get decidedly better results in 1913.

THE BEST EXHIBITION MUMS.

Ninth Annual Review of the Shows.

In accordance with our custom for the last nine years, we give below a summary of the varieties of chrysanthemums which a review of the season's exhibitions indicates as being probably the best in their respective colors for the exhibitor to grow.

The Leading Whites.

White.—William Turner, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, Annie Angus, Lady Carmichael, Mrs. David Syme, Naomah.

In this section it is simply wonderful the way William Turner has been exhibited during the season just closed. In every exhibition it was the premier white and as grown by some of the crack private gardeners in the west it was just a massive ball of beautiful white.

Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, which will unquestionably be a large factor next year, was the "largest flower in the show" at several of the exhibitions. It is a looser type of flower than Turner, has a much larger spread, and I look to see Drabble possibly top the list next season.

Annie E. Angus, as a reflexed or drooping type, certainly has made good. Some wonderful flowers of this variety were staged in New York and, while it is a little deficient in foliage as compared with the preceding varieties, it has a distinct place in the classes for short-stemmed flowers.

Lady Carmichael has climbed over Mrs. David Syme, chiefly because the latter has developed a tendency to run soft and on that account this fall many fine flowers simply rotted on the plant. Another year this tendency may not be apparent, but if it is Mrs. Syme will have to drop away down in the list.

Naomah gives us a beautiful flower and I believe should be more largely grown.

Improved Yellows Needed.

Yellow.—F. S. Vallis, Mrs. J. C. Neil,

Chrysanthemiste Montigny, Ramapo, Yellow Miller, Mary Donnellan.

We still are waiting for the variety larger than F. S. Vallis, but so far without success. Mrs. J. C. Neil meantime holds its own as an exhibition variety and when planted early and well done, although the color is pale, it certainly produces a handsome flower.

Chrysanthemiste Montigny is inclined to spot badly at the tips of the petals, but just at present is able, in spite of this handicap, to hold its own. As a matter of fact, we could use two or three improved yellows at this time.

Ramapo is a fine general service flower, but with most of us this year was a little too early for the exhibitions. For this I blame the weather, as the year previous it was shown in excellent shape at the November shows. Time will prove whether Ramapo will have to be classed as too early or not.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. Lloyd Wigg.

Yellow Miller and Mary Donnellan are both well known older varieties, the latter being almost invincible as regards color, although not any too well furnished with foliage.

Few Changes in Pinks.

Pink.—Wells' Late Pink, Lady Hope-toun, F. E. Nash, Miriam Hankey, William Duckham, Loiseau-Rousseau.

This year shows practically no changes in pink from last year, save that I have transposed and put Wells' Late Pink first and Nash third on the list.

Novelties are, of course, omitted from this list, but next year there will possibly be a different line-up in the pink section. Elberon as a novelty looks as though it would do some crowding in this section.

Crimson.—Pockett's Crimson, Woodmason, William Kleinheinz, F. T. Quittenton, Mrs. Harry Turner.

When it has had a long enough period to grow, Pockett's Crimson produces a flower that is simply charming. The color is glorious, it does not damp and, where the tips of the petals curl upwards to show the yellow reverse, it accentuates rather than detracts from the beautiful crimson.

Woodmason is a large, heavy flower that has still to be reckoned with in this section. I thought William Kleinheinz would displace it, but Kleinheinz this year did not show the size I had expected it to, and for the present it must stand behind Woodmason.

Quittenton was well shown in quite a few places, as was also Mrs. Harry Turner. Some of our best growers did not have much success with the latter variety, because they took the bud too early. A bud around September 1 produces a large, finely colored flower of Mrs. Harry Turner, with stiff stem and well able to hold its own.

Converse King of Odd Colors.

Bronze and any other color.—Harry E. Converse, C. H. Totty, Glenview, Mrs. H. Stevens, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, W. Mease.

In this section Converse is at the present time the king. Everywhere it was shown it was a winner and it is also an excellent keeper, which is no light consideration when the season happens to be, as it was this year, warm and bright and flowers are damping by the wholesale.

C. H. Totty is still good, although it is much better the last week in October than the second week in November, as is also Rose Pockett.

Glenview is a fine, hard flower that is always exhibited and generally comes pretty close to first money.

Mrs. H. Stevens is possibly the largest of this whole section, but it does not line up for color with Converse or Totty. The other two varieties, Mease and Kahn, are both almost too well known to call for any further comment.

Taking the shows as a whole, I think we are entirely safe in saying that the interest displayed was more than is usually the case in fall exhibitions, on the part of the public, and the quality staged by the exhibitors leaves little to be desired.

C. H. Totty.

Silverdale, Pa.—Geo. K. Kester, who sold his business here some years ago, has returned and has repurchased the property, including the greenhouses and thirteen acres of ground.

OBSERVATIONS ON GLADIOLI.

[A synopsis of a paper by G. D. Black, of Independence, Ia., read at the forty-fourth annual convention of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, at Des Moines.]

My attention was first called to the gladiolus by M. Crawford, who was the first large grower of seedlings in America. The interest in this flower has greatly increased each year, until now there are many who grow fields of them for the cut flower and bulb trade. This is a healthful, outdoor occupation, well adapted to women, several of whom are already making a success of it. A few of the specialists devote more than 100 acres each to this purpose.

For a succession of blooms, a portion of the bulbs can be planted as soon as danger of freezing is past, and the remainder at intervals of two weeks until July. The bulbs will endure some freezing under favorable conditions.

The bulbs should be planted from two to six inches deep, according to size, and only slightly covered, filling the furrows after the bulbs have grown up a few inches. They will stand close planting in good soil. We think the best distance for garden culture is two inches apart in rows twelve inches apart. In heavy soil we have found that a light covering of sand after the bulbs have been placed in the bottom of the furrow is beneficial. In the field we plant them quite thickly, in rows twenty-eight inches apart.

Diseases.

The gladiolus is afflicted with but few diseases or insect enemies. The bulbs are liable to become scabby in soil where scabby potatoes have been grown. I have proved that corrosive sublimate is a sure remedy for this by treating several lots of bulbs from other growers the same as we treat potatoes before planting. Another disease is a rust or blight, resembling potato blight in appearance, and it results in weakening the plant and causing the bulbs to ripen prematurely. Some varieties are immune or blight-proof. Most varieties are more or less resistant. There seems to be a disease in the eastern states which causes the bulbs to rot, the exact nature of which I do not know. We have the promise of a bulletin on this subject from the New York State Agricultural Department when its investigations are completed.

Securing Good Stock.

Old bulbs, after blooming a few seasons, lose their vigor and produce but few bulblets. Bulbs two years old from the bulblet are the most satisfactory. After buying the America gladiolus two or three times and always getting old bulbs, we endeavored to secure young stock from the introducers. They replied that they had no young stock of America for sale.

Many inferior varieties have been named and listed that should now be discarded. We have bought what several of the principal growers call their best mixtures and have planted them for comparison, and the most of them are only fair, with a possible good one mixed in. An extensive grower claims to have over 15,000 varieties. How many poor and ordinary varieties must be included in that number! If he would select the best one from each hundred and discard the other ninety-nine, he would have in the 150 selected ones all that are necessary for all practical purposes.

Some New Varieties.

It is interesting and somewhat expensive to test the new varieties that are offered each season. The past season we had Coblenz, No. 54; Taconic and George Betchter from different sources, and they all proved to be identically the same variety. Coblenz, No. 312, which, I understand, he has named Emma, is a fine, large, red variety, with very stiff spikes, and is much superior to Brechleyensis for border planting. Stewart's No. 52, which he has named President Taft, and which will be introduced by him this season, is very vigorous. The color is nearly the same shade of pink as Taconic, but with much larger, wide-open flowers. Among the new varieties from Europe, Sans-Pareil and Col. Desterane pleased us best. Primulinus, a native variety from South Africa, is the purest and brightest yellow we have seen. The flowers are small and the spike not much larger than a straw.

Propagation.

Gladiolus bulbs are produced and increased in three ways. One or more bulbs form just above the old bulb that is planted in the spring, and these are all that are usually saved by the average small grower. Varieties are perpetuated by planting the bulblets or offsets. Most of the bulbs of commerce are produced from these.

When you remove the wings or monoplane from a gladiolus seed, you have a miniature bulb almost identical with the parent bulb in shape, appearance and composition. The bulb grown from this seed is the first one of a new variety. We have grown many thousands of seedlings and have not yet found two exactly alike. Our first experience growing these seedlings was with seed procured from a friend, and we should judge from results that it had not been carefully selected. Our next planting was with seeds saved by ourselves from selected Groff's hybrids. Then we planted seeds from named varieties that were grown away from the others, and finally seeds that were produced by hand pollenization. Each step was an improvement on the preceding one. The gladiolus has been cross-fertilized for so many generations that it is only by chance that we sometimes get a seedling resembling its parents. The humming bird is to a great extent responsible for this. The fine feathers on its head collect the pollen grains as with a brush; to be used on the next flower it visits. We counted nearly a dozen of these birds at work on our field at the same time.

Producing New Sorts.

By keeping a record of our hand crosses for a number of years, we shall be able to produce with greater certainty the varieties that we desire. That many of the best varieties for Europe and elsewhere are not adapted to our climate, with its extreme droughts, is shown by observations during the last summer. Hand pollenization is nearly worthless unless care is used to exclude foreign pollen and also to prevent self-fertilization. We select a strong, vigorous spike, of the variety on which we wish to operate, on which the two lower blossoms are nearly ready to expand, and carefully remove the anthers from these with small pliers, then cover immediately with a No. 2 strong manila paper bag, by tying it closely about the stem. We cut away the remainder of the spike before covering, to prevent self-fertilization, and also that the seeds may have the full benefit and vigor of the parent plant. The conditions surrounding the parent plant have much to do in forming the character of the next generation. About twenty-four hours later, or when the pistils in the flower from which we have removed the anthers have come to maturity, we pollenize them with pollen from the selected variety, using the stamens as a small brush. This pollen should be obtained from flowers that have been previously covered, so that it may not be mixed with other pollen carried by the wind or insects.

Carnations

WEAK-STEMMED ENCHANTRESS.

I should like to get some advice on carnations. My plants have nice, large blooms, but the stems are weak. I used new soil last fall, with cow manure and some lime. I have not given any feed yet. How would chicken manure do? I run the house at a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. The varieties are Enchantress and White Enchantress. Would lime or wood ashes help them?

M. C.

The temperature at which you are carrying your carnations is about right, but could be reduced to 48 or 50 degrees with good results; 52 degrees is not too high if a fairly heavy soil is used, but if the soil is rather light the stems are apt to lack in strength. The growth will be a trifle slower in the lower temperature, but the higher quality of the cut will easily make up for that. One or two applications of hydrated lime or of wood ashes, applied a month apart, will strengthen the stems materially. Use a 2½-inch potful of lime to each row of plants halfway across a 5-foot bed.

A. F. J. B.

TO DRIVE OUT ANGLEWORMS.

How many pounds of slaked lime should be used in each 100 gallons of water, for watering rose beds? Would it drive out angleworms? Please state the proportion, also, for carnations.

W. W. R.

Instead of watering your carnation beds with lime water, I would suggest that you sprinkle the slaked or hydrated lime over the beds and water it in. Not that this method would be particularly superior to the other, as far as results are concerned, but there would be greater ease of application. Apply about a 2½-inch potful of lime to each row of plants halfway across a 5-foot bed. This will drive out angleworms, and will benefit your carnations in other ways as well.

A. F. J. B.

NITRATE OF SODA.

Will you kindly tell me what proportion of nitrate of soda to use in watering geraniums and carnations?

H. G. N.

The standard strength, in using nitrate of soda for watering plants, is one pound of the chemical to fifty gallons of water. The intervals between applications will be determined by the condition and the requirements of the stock. The weather will also be one of the principal factors in determining the amount needed. If the weather is bright and the plants are in full growth, one application each week will not be too much. But if the weather is cloudy, be careful not to overdo it. At the least sign of softness, weaken the solution and make the applications less frequent.

Nitrate of soda is one of the most valuable of chemical fertilizers for feeding pot plants, in order to put size and finish on the blooms, but does not find much favor with carnation growers, on account of its tendency to produce softness in the bloom and consequent poor keeping quality.

THE LONDON CARNATION SHOW.

A New Record Made.

The annual winter show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in the Royal Horticultural hall, London, December 3 and 4. In point of size, quality of blooms and attendance of the public, it eclipsed all previous carnation shows held in England. Altogether it was a marked success and members of the society were congratulating one another upon the remarkable advance in interest which each successive year brings forth.

In the leading class for group of cut flowers the gold medal went to C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, who staged quite a number of varieties of his own raising. Sunstar, among his novelties, was particularly radiant. Second prize and silver gilt medal went to W. Wells & Co., Ltd., Merstham. Scarlet Glow, White House and Benora were striking in their exhibit. The third prize was won by the Clury Nurseries. The Brunton challenge cup for British novelties was awarded to C. Engelmann for Sunstar, Carola and Lady Northcliffe.

The American Cup.

The American cup for novelties was won by H. F. Mason, Hampton Hill, with Dorothy Gordon, Gloriosa and White Wonder. W. E. Wallace followed with Gloriosa, Benora and Dorothy Gordon; third, C. Engelmann, with Benora, Pocahontas and Rosette.

The silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show went to a splendid vase of Lady Meyer shown by W. E. Guile, of the Newport Carnation Nursery.

In the color classes the leading awards went to W. E. Guile, Stuart Low & Co., W. E. Wallace, C. Engelmann and H. F. Mason. Enchantress, Baroness de Brien, Pink Delight, Una Wallace, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Scarlet Glow, White Perfection and White Enchantress were the leaders.

In fancies, W. E. Wallace was first, with Benora; Stuart Low & Co., second, with the same variety.

For novelty not in commerce, Allwood Bros. scored with Mary Allwood; W. E. Wallace, second, with Una Wallace; W. Wells & Co., Ltd., third, with Salmon Enchantress.

The principal non-competitive exhibits were as follows: C. Engelmann, gold medal, a comprehensive collection of American and British varieties; Stuart Low & Co., gold medal, with fine Baroness de Brien in the collection; Young & Co., Cheltenham, silver gilt medal; H. Burnett, silver gilt medal; Allwood Bros., silver gilt medal; G. Lange, silver medal; A. F. Dutton, silver medal; Wm. Lawrenson, silver gilt medal.

Visitors at J. E. Hostetter's, Manheim, Pa., November 30.

British Varieties.

R. F. Felton & Sons were awarded a silver gilt medal for a collection of twenty-four British varieties. The most noteworthy sorts were R. F. Felton, Lady Meyer, Snowstorm, Lady Northcliffe, Empire Day, Marmion, Una Wallace, Carola, Sunstar, Lady Alington, Baroness de Brien, British Queen, Union Jack, Queen Mary, British Triumph, etc.

To gain an award of merit, a variety must score at least 75 points out of a possible 100. The following were successful: Mary Allwood, 84 points, from Allwood Bros., a brilliant cherry red of perfect form, with smooth petals; Snowstorm, 82 points, from W. Lawrenson, a giant among whites, with fine depth of flower and substance; Mrs. A. F. Dutton, 79 points, from A. F. Dutton, pale pink, charming flowers, a sport from White Perfection; Baroness de Brien, 76 points, from Stuart Low & Co., clear salmon pink. Benora also received an award of merit.

Annual Meeting and Banquet.

The annual meeting and banquet were presided over by J. S. Brunton and all passed over with great eclat. At the banquet the leading speakers were: M. Todd, Edinburgh; W. Lawrenson, Yarm; W. H. Page, Hampton, and S. Mortimer, Farnham.

At the business meeting the committee reported on the work of the past year and referred to the donation of £11 from American visitors to the international banquet in May. The treasurer presented an encouraging report on the funds of the society. J. S. Brunton was reelected chairman; W. E. Wallace, vice-chairman; L. J. Cook, treasurer; T. A. Weston, secretary.

In connection with the show, a conference on carnation culture was attended by over 200 persons. J. Gardner read a paper and the discussion should have been opened by the champion grower, W. E. Wallace, but, unfortunately, he met with an accident at home about two days before and was unable to attend. He is progressing satisfactorily. Messrs. Sherwood, Engelmann, Page, Mason, Wells, Weston, Dutton, Hawes, etc., took part in the proceedings.

Carnations had a good inning during the week and the prospects are decidedly good for the society's future.

CARNATION CULTURE IN BRIEF.

[A paper by Aubrey A. Pembroke, of Beverly, Mass., read before the North Shore Horticultural Society.]

The carnation is one of the best flowers we have in commerce, as it is comparatively easy to grow and is so useful in almost all decorative schemes. It is also indispensable for bouquet work and designs of all kinds. It is, in my opinion, second only to the queen of flowers, the rose.

As regards the cultivation of the carnation, all that is necessary is almost any fairly good soil, enriched with good fertilizer, and a whole lot of care after planting. I think the care and attention bestowed on the plants after they are in the house has more bearing on the success of the crop than has character of the soil used. Such things as too much heat, too much water and too many draughts are the most frequent causes of failure. The best soil, to my mind, possible to get is the top sod from an old pasture, plowed about four inches deep and stacked either in the fall or early spring, it matters little which, as the results will be about the same. In stacking, use about one-fourth good cow manure, putting one layer of sod and one layer of manure alternately, sprinkling in about one bushel of lime to four cartloads of loam; also, a few pounds of salt can be added and will prove beneficial. The compost heap should be cut down a few weeks before planting and should be turned over as frequently as labor facilities will allow, mixing in a small proportion of bone flour, which I think is more advisable than top dressing with bone.

Benching the Stock.

The time for planting to get the best results is from July 10 to August 1, but good results will be obtained if the planting is finished by September 10. Later planting than that is not advisable, as after that time the plants will not be established and in flower by winter, and when they do flower they will be apt to be soft-stemmed, with smaller blossoms than the early planted ones. Large plants will suffer much more from late planting than smaller ones.

About five to six inches of soil in the benches or beds will be ample. There is a difference of opinion concerning benches and solid beds, some claiming the solid beds require more careful watering and are slower in flowering in the middle of winter. I, myself, think they more than make up for any lack of production in winter by being of much better quality in the spring and early summer months, which, after all, is the time the houses produce the greatest quantity of flowers and also of money, which is the thing that counts most to the commercial man.

The plants should be lifted with a nice ball and with all the roots possible. In planting, firm nicely around the plants and leave the soil around them fairly level. The habit of leaving a basin around the plant is objectionable, as in filling in there are sure to be lots of plants that will have too much soil piled around them, which is a great inducement to stem-rot. It is advisable not to dig more plants at a time than can be planted before their roots dry and the plants wilt, as plants that suffer in that way will not recover and start to grow half so quickly as their more fortunate companions.

When a bench is planted, give the plants a fairly good watering, enough to wet the ball nicely and the soil around them, but do not soak the bed down as though there would never be any more water to give them. Avoid draughts, and shade the house a little if the weather is hot, but do not put on too heavy a shade or far more harm will be done than by the sun.

After the planting is finished, the best advice I can offer is to watch them carefully and find out for yourself the exact condition of the plants, and be governed accordingly.

Heavy watering before the roots are established is detrimental to the plants, as is being too dry, but to a much lesser degree, as the harm done by their being too dry is much easier remedied than that done by overwatering.

Fumigation and Feeding.

Fumigation should be done once every week to keep down green-fly and thrips, and syringing should be started on the first appearance of red spider and kept up on every bright day until there is not one to be seen. Even then there will be plenty left to come forth on the first warm day or two in the spring.

It is well to support the plants as soon as possible after planting, either with one of the carnation supports offered in the trade journals or with wires lengthwise of the benches and strings across to prevent them falling about and becoming misshapen. It is better to keep ahead in this particu-

WEAK STEMMED ENCHANTRESS.

I should like to get some advice on carnations. My plants have nice, large blooms, but the stems are weak. I used new soil last fall, with cow manure and some lime. I have not given any feed yet. How would chicken manure do? I run the house at a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. The varieties are Enchantress and White Enchantress. Would lime or wood ashes help them?

M. C.

The temperature at which you are carrying your carnations is about right, but could be reduced to 48 or 50 degrees with good results; 52 degrees is not too high if a fairly heavy soil is used, but if the soil is rather light the stems are apt to lack in strength. The growth will be a trifle slower in the lower temperature, but the higher quality of the cut will easily make up for that. One or two applications of hydrated lime or of wood ashes, applied a month apart, will strengthen the stems materially. Use a $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch potful of lime to each row of plants half way across a 5-foot bed.

TO DRIVE OUT ANGLEWORMS.

How many pounds of slaked lime should be used in each 100 gallons of water, for watering rose beds? Would it drive out angleworms? Please state the proportion, also, for carnations.

W. W. R.

Instead of watering your carnation beds with lime water, I would suggest that you sprinkle the slaked or hydrated lime over the beds and water it in. Not that this method would be particularly superior to the other, as far as results are concerned, but there would be greater ease of application. Apply about a $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch potful of lime to each row of plants halfway across a 5-foot bed. This will drive out angleworms, and will benefit your carnations in other ways as well.

A. F. J. B.

NITRATE OF SODA.

Will you kindly tell me what proportion of nitrate of soda to use in watering geraniums and carnations?

H. G. N.

The standard strength, in using nitrate of soda for watering plants, is one pound of the chemical to fifty gallons of water. The intervals between applications will be determined by the condition and the requirements of the stock. The weather will also be one of the principal factors in determining the amount needed. If the weather is bright and the plants are in full growth, one application each week will not be too much. But if the weather is cloudy, be careful not to overdo it. At the least sign of softness, weaken the solution and make the applications less frequent.

Nitrate of soda is one of the most valuable of chemical fertilizers for feeding pot plants, in order to put size and finish on the blooms, but does not find much favor with carnation growers, on account of its tendency to produce softness in the bloom and consequent poor keeping quality.

THE LONDON CARNATION SHOW.

A New Record Made.

The annual winter show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in the Royal Horticultural hall, London, December 3 and 4. In point of size, quality of blooms and attendance of the public, it eclipsed all previous carnation shows held in England. Altogether it was a marked success and members of the society were congratulating one another upon the remarkable advance in interest which each successive year brings forth.

In the leading class for group of cut flowers the gold medal went to C. Engelmann. Saffron Walden, who staged quite a number of varieties of his own raising. Sunstar, among his novelties, was particularly radiant. Second prize and silver gilt medal went to W. Wells

& Co., Ltd., Merstham. Scarlet Glow, White House and Benora were striking in their exhibit. The third prize was won by the Clary Nurseries. The Brunton challenge cup for British novelties was awarded to C. Engelmann for Sunstar, Carola and Lady Northcliffe.

The American Cup.

The American cup for novelties was won by H. F. Mason, Hampton Hill, with Dorothy Gordon, Gloriosa and White Wonder. W. E. Wallace followed with Gloriosa, Benora and Dorothy Gordon; third, C. Engelmann, with Benora, Pocahontas and Rosette.

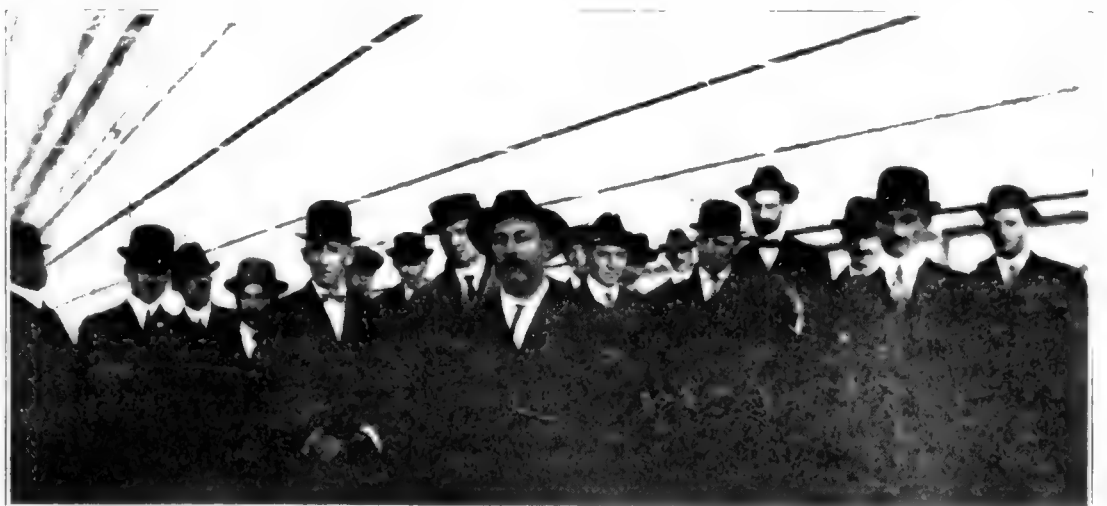

The silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show went to a splendid vase of Lady Meyer shown by W. E. Guile, of the Newport Carnation Nursery.

In the color classes the leading awards went to W. E. Guile, Stuart Low & Co., W. E. Wallace, C. Engelmann and H. F. Mason. Enchantress, Baroness de Brien, Pink Delight, Una Wallace, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Scarlet Glow, White Perfection and White Enchantress were the leaders.

In fancies, W. E. Wallace was first, with Benora; Stuart Low & Co., second, with the same variety.

For novelty not in commerce, Allwood Bros. scored with Mary Allwood; W. E. Wallace, second, with Una Wallace; W. Wells & Co., Ltd., third, with Salmon Enchantress.

The principal non-competitive exhibits were as follows: C. Engelmann, gold medal, a comprehensive collection of American and British varieties; Stuart Low & Co., gold medal, with fine Baroness de Brien in the collection; Young & Co., Cheltenham, silver gilt medal; H. Burnett, silver gilt medal; Allwood Bros., silver gilt medal; G. Lange, silver medal; A. F. Dutton, silver medal; Wm. Lawrenson, silver gilt medal.

British Varieties.

R. F. Felton & Sons were awarded a silver gilt medal for a collection of twenty-four British varieties. The most noteworthy sorts were R. F. Felton, Lady Meyer, Snowstorm, Lady Northcliffe, Empire Day, Marmion, Una Wallace, Carola, Sunstar, Lady Alington, Baroness de Brien, British Queen, Union Jack, Queen Mary, British Triumph, etc.

To gain an award of merit, a variety must score at least 75 points out of a possible 100. The following were successful: Mary Allwood, 81 points, from Allwood Bros., a brilliant cherry red of perfect form, with smooth petals; Snowstorm, 82 points, from W. Lawrenson, a giant among whites, with fine depth of flower and substance; Mrs. A. F. Dutton, 79 points, from A. F. Dutton, pale pink, charming flowers, a sport from White Perfection; Baroness de Brien, 76 points, from Stuart Low & Co., clear salmon pink. Benora also received an award of merit.

Annual Meeting and Banquet.

The annual meeting and banquet were presided over by J. S. Brunton and all passed over with great eclat. At the banquet the leading speakers were: M. Todd, Edinburgh; W. Lawrenson, Yarm; W. H. Page, Hampton, and S. Mortimer, Farnham.

At the business meeting the committee reported on the work of the past year and referred to the donation of £11 from American visitors to the international banquet in May. The treasurer presented an encouraging report on the funds of the society. J. S. Brunton was reelected chairman; W. E. Wallace, vice-chairman; L. J. Cook, treasurer; T. A. Weston, secretary.

In connection with the show, a conference on carnation culture was attended by over 200 persons. J. Gardner read a paper and the discussion should have been opened by the champion grower, W. E. Wallace, but, unfortunately, he met with an accident at home about two days before and was unable to attend. He is progressing satisfactorily. Messrs. Sherwood, Engelmann, Page, Mason, Wells, Weston, Dutton, Hawes, etc., took part in the proceedings.

Carnations had a good inning during the week and the prospects are decidedly good for the society's future.

CARNATION CULTURE IN BRIEF.

[A paper by Aubrey A. Pendroke, of Beverly, Mass., read before the North Shore Horticultural Society.]

The carnation is one of the best flowers we have in commerce, as it is comparatively easy to grow and is so useful in almost all decorative schemes. It is also indispensable for bouquet work and designs of all kinds. It is, in my opinion, second only to the queen of flowers, the rose.

As regards the cultivation of the carnation, all that is necessary is almost any fairly good soil, enriched with good fertilizer, and a whole lot of care after planting. I think the care and attention bestowed on the plants after they are in the house has more bearing on the success of the crop than has character of the soil used. Such things as too much heat, too much water and too many draughts are the most frequent causes of failure. The best soil, to my mind, possible to get is the top sod from an old pasture, plowed about four inches deep and stacked either in the fall or early spring, it matters little which, as the results will be about the same. In stacking, use about one-fourth good cow manure, putting one layer of sod and one layer of manure alternately, sprinkling in about one bushel of lime to four cartloads of loam; also, a few pounds of salt can be added and will prove beneficial. The compost heap should be cut down a few weeks before planting and should be turned over as frequently as labor facilities will allow, mixing in a small proportion of bone flour, which I think is more advisable than top dressing with bone.

Benching the Stock.

The time for planting to get the best results is from July 10 to August 1, but good results will be obtained if the planting is finished by September 10. Later planting than that is not advisable, as after that time the plants will not be established and in flower by winter, and when they do flower they will be apt to be soft-stemmed, with smaller blossoms than the early planted ones. Large plants will suffer much more from late planting than smaller ones.

About five to six inches of soil in the benches or beds will be ample. There is a difference of opinion concerning benches and solid beds, some claiming the solid beds require more careful watering and are slower in flowering in the middle of winter. I, myself, think they more than make up for any lack of production in winter by being of much better quality in the spring and early summer months, which, after all, is the time the houses produce the greatest quantity of flowers and also of money, which is the thing that counts most to the commercial man.

The plants should be lifted with a nice ball and with all the roots possible. In planting, firm nicely around the plants and leave the soil around them fairly level. The habit of leaving a basin around the plant is objectionable, as in filling in there are sure to be lots of plants that will have too much soil piled around them, which is a great inducement to stem-rot. It is advisable not to dig more plants at a time than can be planted before their roots dry and the plants wilt, as plants that suffer in that way will not recover and start to grow half so quickly as their more fortunate companions.

When a bench is planted, give the plants a fairly good watering, enough to wet the ball nicely and the soil around them, but do not soak the bed down as though there would never be any more water to give them. Avoid draughts, and shade the house a little if the weather is hot, but do not put on too heavy a shade or far more harm will be done than by the sun.

After the planting is finished, the best advice I can offer is to watch them carefully and find out for yourself the exact condition of the plants, and be governed accordingly.

Heavy watering before the roots are established is detrimental to the plants, as is being too dry, but to a much lesser degree, as the harm done by their being too dry is much easier remedied than that done by overwatering.

Fumigation and Feeding.

Fumigation should be done once every week to keep down green-fly and thrips, and syringing should be started on the first appearance of red spider and kept up on every bright day until there is not one to be seen. Even then there will be plenty left to come forth on the first warm day or two in the spring.

It is well to support the plants as soon as possible after planting, either with one of the carnation supports offered in the trade journals or with wires lengthwise of the benches and strings across to prevent them falling about and becoming misshapen. It is better to keep ahead in this particular than to let the plants get ahead of you. Keep all the shoots disbudded, as the flowers will be much better than if the side buds are allowed to get large before doing so.

After the houses have been planted about ten weeks, and if the plants are growing strong and hard, you may safely start feeding by top dressing, using either soot, sheep manure or bone. Rub it nicely into the soil, which should be loose on top if the benches have been cultivated as they should be, but do not dig deeply into the soil, as it tears the fine roots and checks the growth of the plants. This can be done every two weeks or so, always providing the growth is strong, which it invariably will be by this time if the plants were good and the soil rich and sweet.

With early planting and good material to work with there will be a nice crop of flowers and buds showing by October 1, which, if the plants have been systematically pinched back in the field, should continue to increase right through the winter and spring.

Top dressing should not be persisted in from December 1 to February 1, as the days are then short and the weather most likely to be cloudy. After February 1, if the plants are still doing well, they will need more food, and liquid manure can be used to advantage about once a week, or top dressing can again be resorted to, using dried blood or nitrate of soda in light doses, or sheep manure or shredded cattle manure in heavier doses, and, if available, a good inch or so of rotted stable manure, which also will help to keep the beds from drying out too quickly. If the grower has handled his plants properly, by this time (February 1) he will have the pleasure of having a fine crop of flowers standing on strong, straight stems thirty-six to forty-five inches above the soil.

The Temperature.

From now on the grower's worries grow less concerning the growth of his plants, but if red spider gets a good foothold at this time his real troubles have only commenced, as they will keep him busy with the hose and make him wonder where they all came from. But if his courage is good and he is persistent with cold water, he will be able to keep them down, although he cannot hope to utterly destroy them.

Carnations will do well with a night temperature of 48 to 52 degrees. The day temperature should be governed by the weather, not allowing it to rise above 60 degrees on cloudy days and 72 degrees on bright days in winter, but after March 1, when the sun is getting higher, it may rise to 80 degrees in the middle of the day. Nothing will be gained by getting a few extra flowers in winter by running the houses a few degrees higher, as the plants will be sure to suffer.

To have success with carnations it is essential that the plants have proper care from the time the cuttings are put in the sand until they are thrown out of the house at the end of the flowering season. Careful propagation is especially important. The cuttings should be taken from the flowering shoots, care being taken not to use those too near the top of the stem, as these are not so strong and will not make such nice, bushy plants as those lower down.

It Points the Way

IN the flower business a man is limited merely by his ambition—the opportunity is at his hand to go as far as he likes.

Location counts for little. It is as easily possible for the florist in the small town to do a business that covers a dozen states—or the whole country—as it is for the one who is located in a big city. Indeed, in many respects the small town florist has the advantage. It isn't a question of situation—it depends only on ambition and the ability to grow good stock.

The demand for plants has developed much faster than the supply. At Christmas, at Easter, in the spring, Propagation.

The best time to take cuttings is in January and February, as plants rooted at that time will make a better growth and will not be so likely to get hard as if rooted earlier. If a large number of plants of any one variety is needed it is advisable to get all the cuttings possible, both before and after those months. The sand used should be sharp and clean and free from loam. Whether it is fine or fairly coarse makes but little difference. It should be about three inches deep in the bench, with a good drainage, and it cannot be firmed too much. The cuttings should be taken with a heel and the ragged end cut off with a sharp knife. The long foliage may be trimmed off the top, as that allows the air to circulate among them more freely. Put them in about three-quarters to an inch deep and firm the sand nicely around them. Then be sure to give them a good watering, enough to wet the sand right through. Keep them from draughts and shade from the sun, but do not shade too heavily or they will get soft and will not do as well when taken from the sand. Give them a light spraying each morning for the first ten days, if the weather permits, and water them if the sand shows signs of drying out.

Care of Young Stock.

Most of our cuttings taken in the winter months receive no water from the time they are first watered in until taken out, and I find they root better than those that have to be watered.

The propagating house should be kept at from 50 to 54 degrees and air should be given on all bright days, always guarding against draughts. Enough bottom heat to keep the sand at about 58 degrees will help to make them root, but I would not advise anything higher than that.

and all the time, there is the field for the man who has the courage to work up stock and advertise it strongly. The stores without growing facilities stand ready to take all the good stock offered. Indeed, they are hungry for it.

Let the man take note who is not content with the prosperous little trade of his limited local field—here is an opportunity of which at the present no man can see the limits—a limitless wholesale market easily accessible through The Review—the opportunity to build up a business and a name that shall be known to the trade the country over—a source of pride and profit.

FLORISTS' REVIEW,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Please discontinue my full page ad of Christmas plants—have never sold out so completely. We had an immense stock of everything advertised. Of poinsettias alone 6030 3-inch to 8-inch, but they are all gone; could have sold many more.

Plants sold in order named: Poinsettias, cyclamens, Cincinnati begonias, primulas, azaleas, ferns.

Will have more advertising later and will surely use The Review.

Respectfully yours,

C. H. FREY.

Mr. Frey advertised exclusively in The Review

When rooted the young plants may be either potted into 2-inch pots or may be put directly into flats, about two and one-half inches apart, using a nice loam which does not contain too much manure. If 2-inch pots are used, the plants should be put into flats or 3-inch pots as soon as they show a nice lot of roots around the pot. Give the plants plenty of air as soon as they commence to grow and do not overwater, but allow them to dry out and then water thoroughly, as by doing this you will keep the soil sweet and the plants healthy.

Pinch the plants when they are high enough for the tops to be broken off clean, leaving four or five joints, which will give you strong side shoots and a sound foundation for good growth.

Plant out in this locality as soon after May 1 as weather conditions will warrant, so that the roots will have a good foothold before the hot weather comes.

The soil in the field should be made fairly rich with rotted stable manure. Attend strictly to cultivation and toping, going over the field at least once a week. Cultivation will bring the plants through a hot, dry summer in a much healthier condition than if watering is resorted to.

If I were asked which are the most popular varieties of carnations around Boston, I would name Pink Delight a good first, Gloriosa second, with White Enchantress and White Wonder pretty even for third place. Beacon is always in great demand for the holidays, but will be deposed as soon as one as free and of a better color is produced. Among the new varieties, Benora is doing finely and has every appearance of being the best variegated carnation yet raised.

Future of the Flower.

The carnation is without dispute a beautiful flower and I often feel that the man who chooses the growing of it for a livelihood derives far more pleasure from it than do his patrons who buy them to decorate their tables. There are no secrets in raising this wonderful flower, and there never was one man who could raise such fine flowers but that there were others who could raise them just as good.

In visiting the establishments of some of our leading hybridizers I have formed a firm opinion that more than one of the seedlings I have seen are destined to eclipse some of the present standard varieties.

The flower industry has grown wonderfully during the last twenty years, and the demand for the products of the florist is increasing all the time at a rapid pace. No one can say what the advance will be during the next twenty years. Owing to the enormous strides made in improvement of greenhouse building, and to the efforts of gardeners and florists to raise new varieties of sterling worth, the buying public is now able to buy finer flowers at lower prices, which has greatly stimulated trade, for where are the persons who would not deprive themselves of some other luxury in order to have some of nature's most luxurious creations?

The sale of artificial flowers should soon be a thing of the past, as to most people such a substitute must appear as the cheapest of all imitations.

HOME-MADE REMEDIES.

Some time ago The Review printed an article by someone on his trouble with the roller moths and his laborious method of catching them. I think if he will try the following method he will not be troubled so much. Take a large pan, such as a dishpan. Place an oil lamp in it, on a brick or such, and pour in about one and one-half inches of water and just a little oil. The light will attract the moths after dark and they will fall into the oil, which will quickly finish them.

The same remedy will do the work for those who are troubled with grubs in their grounds outside, except that a lantern should be used instead of a lamp. Try this in your carnation patch in May and June, when the June bugs are seeking a place to deposit their eggs, and see what you get. You will find the ounce of prevention is better than the pound of cure.

And another article about December 5, about a party trying to kill snails with oil. Tell him to try salt and I promise him they will turn their toes up at once.

TO REMOVE HARD PUTTY.

I should like to find out what is the best and easiest way to remove old putty from greenhouse bars.

R. H.

If the putty is too hard to be removed with a sharp chisel, run over it first with a hot soldering iron, which will loosen it so that it can be readily scraped off.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Pansies.

If you have what appears to be an insufficient stock of fall-sown pansies, you can increase your supply by sowing seeds in flats now, in a cool greenhouse. Sow the seeds rather thinly and transplant into flats before they get drawn or crowded. A temperature of 40 to 45 degrees for these should not be exceeded. These pansies will not bloom early, like the fall-sown ones, but for late sales and summer blooming are quite satisfactory. You can also sow double daisies, Delphinium Chinense and hybrid delphiniums now. All these will flower next season.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas are not so popular at Easter as some other plants. They sell better for Memorial day, but a good many are annually disposed of. The new race of French hybrids are now more common, and as these make excellent pot plants and are preferable in many respects to H. Otaksa we look to see a large sale for them the coming Easter. All the hydrangeas should now go into heat. Do not use too warm a house at first; 48 to 50 degrees at night will suffice. When nicely started they can have 10 degrees more heat and, as soon as the flower heads peep, even a little more can be added. If pot-grown through the summer it will be found that they respond more quickly when placed in warmth than do those potted up in the fall. It would be well to remember that the pot-grown stock will require a great deal more water than the others.

Rambler Roses.

As in the case of hydrangeas, rambler roses which have been pot-grown will give much the best account of themselves for an early Easter, but fall-potted plants can easily be flowered on time. The day of Crimson Rambler as an Easter plant has passed and the pink varieties now have the call. A year ago Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon and Lady Gay were leaders, with Hiawatha, White Perkins, Wedding Bells, American Pillar and one or two other sorts all appearing in fair quantity. It used to be considered that white plants only could be sold at Easter, but now the tendency is each year more marked to buy colored ones, and white a year ago was more druggy than any other color, apart, of course, from lilies themselves.

The roses must not be started warm. Provide 45 to 50 degrees until they break, after which give more heat, and still more may be given in the final stages if they seem at all backward, but I do not like to run them over 60 degrees at night, as hard forcing makes them soft and susceptible to mildew. Spray freely until the plants break, then more cautiously, so as not to get mildew. Cold draughts and too much moisture will soon start this trouble and, as it renders plants practically unsalable, every care should be taken to keep it away.

Lilacs.

Pot-grown stock of lilacs imported from Europe is now at hand. If wanted for the flowers alone, keep them dark and warm until the flowers start to expand, but if plants for store trade are needed give them a hot, moist house, frequent syringings and a cooler house when the flowers start to open. If taken from a warm house to a low temperature they will wilt badly, and it is well to give these and all other deciduous shrubs subjected to hard forcing a gradual lowering of the heat to prepare them for exposure to a comparatively low temperature. It is much too early to start these or any of the other deciduous flowering shrubs for Easter.

Seed Sowing.

There are a number of seeds which can be profitably started now. The germination at this early season will, in nearly every case, be found much better than if sowing is delayed a couple of months. Practically all seeds want a light soil; one containing two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and some fine sand to make it porous is suitable. For such seeds as begonias and gloxinias the soil is better sterilized. In fact, if facilities exist for sterilization, and it is possible on nearly all places, at least in a moderate way, it pays to do it, for then all weed seeds, fungoid germs, insect life and worms are destroyed.

A few seeds suitable for present sowing are: Tuberous rooted begonia, gloxinia, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, Ardisia crenulata, Grevillea robusta, antirrhinums for a late indoor crop, ten weeks' stocks for a spring crop, Early Wonder or Queen of the Market aster for an indoor crop, annual lupines, annual larkspurs, Dimorphotheca aurantiaca and Lepotosyne maritima, these latter annuals all being serviceable plants to grow for a spring crop, particularly where flowers a little out of the beaten track are wanted.

TOO MUCH FUMIGATION.

Enclosed you will find samples of violets, carnations and heliotropes. What seems to be the matter? I have the violets on a south bench, part of which gets no sun; the carnations are in the same house, on solid beds, and the heliotropes are in pots. I smoke the house with tobacco stems twice a week. The soil is black loam, enriched with cow manure, well rotted. The violets have not done well since I set them in from outdoors. They are almost all affected more or less. I have no success with alternantheras and will send a sample. I brought in plants that were doing as finely as one could expect, but in the pots and benches they wither and finally get into the same condition as the sample. Kindly help me out. L. M. S.

You are growing in one house a variety of plants that require radically different temperatures. For instance, violets want a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees; carnations, 50 to 54 degrees. Heliotropes will do well in the carnation temperature, but would be chilled with violets. Alternantheras might winter at 50 to 54 degrees, but would do much better 5 to 10 degrees warmer. But the temperature alone would hardly be responsible for your scorched foliage, and the leaves forwarded seem in each case to be burned.

Tobacco stems are not now used as they were even a decade ago. The various tobacco extracts, nicotine papers, hydrocyanic acid gas and improved insecticides to be used as sprays have relegated the tobacco stems to the rear. They are cheap, but messy and dangerous unless used with considerable care. They leave a disagreeable odor behind them, making flowers unsalable for twenty-four hours or more after using, and if the user allows his stems to take fire, which has probably been done with yours, foliage and flowers both suffer severely. I believe all your troubles are due to too much smoke. The house does not need fumigating twice a week; once a week is ample, and where proper spraying is done, little smoking is needed. I would advise dropping tobacco stems in favor of one of the nicotine papers. These leave no bad smell behind them, are cleanly and will not hurt the leaves or flowers. C. W.

USELESS AFTER BEING FORCED.

Are Paper White and French Trumpet bulbs good to use after blooming once? If so, what is the right way to dry the tops—by letting them dry in the flats or taking them out green?

C. L.

The Paper White and French Trumpet Major bulbs are of absolutely no value after being once forced, either for forcing again or for outdoor culture.

Highland Park Conservatory Greenhouses, Edward G. Bass, Proprietor, Topeka, Kan.

NOTHING MATTER IN KANSAS.

On East Fifteenth street at Topeka, Kan., Edward G. Bass has about 10,000 feet of glass which he operates under the name of the Highland Park Conservatory Greenhouses. This season four new houses have been added to the range, each 22x100. Mr. Bass was for twelve years employed in the business, but now for sixteen years has managed his own establishment. He does both a wholesale and retail business in cut flowers and plants and also handles all kinds of landscape gardening. No longer is there anything the matter with Kansas, and with a trolley by the door Mr. Bass needs the extra space provided by his new glass.

DICKSON GETS MEDAL.

The National Rose Society of England, at its December meeting, by unanimous vote awarded the Dean Hole Memorial Medal to George Dickson, as head of the firm which, in the opinion of the members of this famous society, has done most for the rose. The personal friends of George Dickson, and the many friends of the firm in this country, will certainly be glad to learn of this signal honor.

George Dickson entered upon his eighty-first year in July, 1912, and while relieved from active work by his sons, is still greatly interested in the annual introductions of the firm of which he has so long been head. As all American florists know, the firm of Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ltd., of Belfast and Dublin, has its nurseries at Newtownards, County Down, Ireland. Mr. Dickson has been certainly fortunate in having the assistance and hearty co-operation of his six sons. Of these sons Alexander Dickson and George Dickson are now the hybridizers and growers of new roses at Newtownards; Thomas Dickson is manager of the farms, while Andrew Dickson is manager of the rose gardens at Dublin. Hugh Dickson, so well known as an expert both in sweet peas and culinary peas, is manager of the seed business. The legal end of the business is under the able control of Gordon Dickson, solicitor in Belfast, who a few years ago protected the right of the name Alexander Dickson by securing letters patent for the distinctive name "Hawthorn" as applied to roses, plants and seeds.

The accompanying reproduction of a photograph of George Dickson will be interesting, not only to his many personal friends in America, but also to thousands of florists who have grown Killarney, Liberty, Mrs. Jardine and Melody. The lovely Fire Flame, about to be introduced, will still further advance the prestige of the premier rosarians.

Among the garden peas sent out by Alexander Dickson & Sons are Pilot, the largest podded first early smooth pea, and Royal Salute, the most popular of all large podded late peas in England. Among the sweet peas are Florence Nightingale, Irish Belle and Vermilion Brilliant, all three so deservedly popular in America.

PLANTS FOR EASTER.

Will you kindly tell me what plants, sowed or planted now or later, would bring a profitable crop for Easter?

N. J. H.

There is not time to sow any seeds and have the plants flowering for Easter, which is now only three months away. A few plants which you could grow and flower at that time, and which are always in demand, are: Spiraeas, such as Japonica, Gladstone and astilboides. These, if potted in January, will be on time. You can purchase such plants as lilacs, deutzias, rhododendrons, Azalea mollis, Azalea Indica, hydrangeas and rambler roses, and force them into bloom without much trouble, provided you have a temperature of 60 degrees at night. Some of these will flower in six weeks from starting, but the roses and hydrangeas must be placed in heat as soon as possible. There are no bulbs which you could now plant and flower for Easter; all should have been started before this time.

LIVE WIRES.

You hear a whole lot nowadays about live wires, etc.—how effective they are. That's all right, and live wires are all right, so long as they connect. But how many of them do?

Did you ever see a trolley wire break and fall to the ground? Not much doing, except a hurrying of people and great big flashes of electric light—a lot of waste power.

Didn't that sparkling trolley wire remind you a whole lot of a great many so-called live wire people? They furr around, fume around, apparently very much alive and very active, but like the broken wire they don't connect. They are mostly wasted energy.

I am heartily fond of active people, but give me the steady puller that's always ready to deliver the goods, that keeps up a steady plugging all the while.

He doesn't cause any interruptions in work, because he's a connected wire. That's the sort you ought to try to be. Be a live wire, but connect.—Buck's Shot.

State College, Pa.—Professor Arthur Westcott Cowell has been placed at the head of the courses in landscape gardening in the Pennsylvania State College, a position previously filled by Professor John W. Gregg. Mr. Cowell's training for the profession began at the Buffalo Botanical Gardens in 1898 and has continued through all phases of the work of a landscape designer. He has acquired considerable reputation as a designer, and as a field engineer and plantsman among landscape gardeners. A large number of private estates and parks and railroad improvements throughout the east bear the earmarks of his craftsmanship. He was one of the pioneers on the landscape gardening course at Cornell University, taking his degree there in 1903, and immediately went into active work.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—W. T. Gray, who has a range of greenhouses at Eleventh South and Seventh East streets and has been engaged in the wholesale trade for some years, has now opened a retail store at 5 East Broadway. The location is considered a first-class one, as it is in a district of the city where general business is rapidly developing.

SATURDAY, December 21, was the shortest day of the year—too short by far for every retail florist, but not so short, by any means, as were December 23 and 24 for all the work that had to be crowded into them.

FORTUNATE is the industrious florist who retails his own product—if the wholesale prices of mums have this season averaged less than before, the retailing grower has been able to get at least as much for his crop as in any other year.

THE Department of Horticulture of the University of Illinois has issued in pamphlet form, revised to date of publication, the two papers presented at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association held March 5, 1912, descriptive of the floriculture research work at the experiment station. The papers were printed in full in The Review at the time.

If there is one thing more than another
The Review would like to impress on the trade it is the necessity of keeping faith.
No advertisement should exaggerate and in every case the stock should be there when the order arrives. Handling a perishable commodity, complaints are bound to arrive, but the man who satisfies his customers will work up a big business, while the man who does not make good will go the other way.

MOST florists consider the retail prices of cut flowers and plants so greatly above the wholesale prices that it is a matter for concealment from all outside the trade—and certainly such matters are not those for advertisement—but did you ever take the trouble to investigate the manufacturing cost of any of the articles of staple merchandise? When you do you will find that what the consumer pays usually is about three times the factory cost, sometimes a good deal more.
Selling is what costs, and the florist is selling cheap.

OBITUARY.

Alexander J. Thomas.

Alexander J. Thomas, founder of the business which is now conducted under the name of A. J. Thomas & Sons, at Owego, N. Y., died December 2, at the age of 77 years. He was born in Germany, and had lived in this country about forty-five years, spending thirty-five years of that time in Owego. A year or two ago, when failing health compelled him to retire, the business was reorganized under the present firm name and two of his sons took charge of it. He bore an excellent reputation and had many friends. The funeral services were held at St. Patrick's church, and the burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Tioga. He is survived by his wife, by three sons, Joseph A., Fred J. and Albert A. Thomas, and by one daughter, Miss Anna Thomas, of Owego.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There were early indications that the Chicago market would break all records for Christmas. The number of orders was surprisingly large and they not only came earlier than usual but called for earlier shipment. As early as December 21 a heavy shipping business was being done, though the shipments of December 22 were many times heavier and those of December 23 still larger. As this issue goes to press, December 24, shipping is still going on, though the wholesalers have turned the greater part of their attention to getting out city orders.

There was an abundance of roses
this Christmas, although short roses were scarce. The same culture which enables the growers to bring in their crops of Killarneys at the date wanted produces a large proportion of long stems. The bulk of the business was in medium lengths. Buyers would have taken several times as many short roses could they have obtained them, but they wanted the grades selling at above 15 cents only in comparatively limited quantities. All through the Christmas rush there have been plenty of the special long roses while at times other grades have been well cleaned up. All roses were excellent except that Killarney was extremely pale in color because of a week of sunless skies. Beauties were plentiful. Much of the stock was of excellent quality but there were many blue Beauties, showing the process by which the quantity was obtained.

Carnations were practically the only flower not in adequate supply this Christmas. Shipping orders for these were the heaviest ever known and probably the average price will figure out the best thus far recorded. In other seasons quotations have been about as high, but not all the stock has sold so near to quoted prices as has been the case up to the present writing. Naturally, red has been the scarcest item, with dark pink next in demand and in even lighter supply than red. Even white has sold well. Good sun December 22 and 23 helped not a little.

There has been an abundance of violets, principally eastern stock. Most of these have sold locally and to a few big buyers, though of course everyone has used more or less. Cattleyas have

TIME TO TURN OVER A NEW LEAF IF YOU HAVEN'T BOUGHT OF US IN 1912

Why be satisfied with anything but the best? The quality of the stock we handle is the marvel of the market. And we have quantity of everything the trade requires in quantity. If you have not dealt with us, why not arrange to have us supply you for 1913? Write us about it TODAY.

DOUBLE VIOLETS SINGLE

We handle the cream of the crops of the Hudson river doubles, and they are fine. Also fragrant, home-grown singles that are the best the market affords. An abundant supply. You will need these in quantity for your New Year's corsages.

Orchids

A large supply of the very finest Cattleyas and all other varieties.

Valley

We always have in quantity the high quality stock your trade demands.

BEAUTIES

We never have seen a finer crop of Beauties than we now have—splendid color, large, perfect buds, fine foliage; specially strong on long to medium. When you have tried these Beauties you will agree with us that nothing finer could be asked. We shall be in full crop through New Year's.

KILLARNEYS

While the quality of our Killarneys is fully up to the famous crop of last season, the supply is very much larger, for the growers greatly increased their glass. Of course, the longer the stem the finer the flower, but the medium lengths carry the largest flowers we ever have seen on these grades.

CARNATIONS

Buyers will find it to their advantage to order Carnations of us. We have the quantity and our stock is widely known as always the most uniformly high quality large lot in this market. We want you to see the present cut; it's very fine.

Poinsettias

A fine lot, cool-grown, shipped to reach you in perfect condition.

Lilies

You need these every day in the year. We have a special crop now on.

been on the short side, only one or two having considerable supplies. Stevia has been pretty well cleaned up, the heaviest cut having been early this season. More chrysanthemums than usual have been seen and all those of fair quality have sold well. There has been a demand for mignonette of quality that has been difficult to supply. Paper Whites and Romans have sold because they were about the cheapest flowers to be had. Sweet peas were not available in quantity but sold well. A little freesia was seen and the first few trumpets. Also, some Proserpine tulips came in, but were too short-stemmed to find much favor. Valley sold well and such lilies as were offered found takers.

Poinsettias were not in so large supply as usual. Weather conditions appear to have been such that the growers could not hold the stock back. There was more of it than ever before in the early part of the month and the Christmas stock was both lighter and poorer than usual. Even under these conditions there appear to have been enough cut poinsettias to meet the demand, which seems to be getting lighter each year.

In the green goods department there has been enough of everything except boxwood. This has been scarce, due to

Various Notes.

Max Cohen, who for some time worked for the E. C. Amling Co., and later for a south side retailer, has opened a store at 1217 East Sixty-third street, having taken a lease for five years and fitted the place up in good shape. He calls his place the Jackson Flower Shop.

Steve Minon was burned out, December 16, in a fire that destroyed four stores on Milwaukee avenue, but he was able to continue.

W. N. Rudd reports having cut 5,000 red carnations for Christmas.

H. H. Wilkerson, of H. Wittbold's, believes that his firm sent out the largest holly wreath made this season. It was sixteen feet in diameter and went to an Evanston church.

Most of the growers had trouble with their poinsettias this year and good plants for basket work were not as abundant as usual. While many were lost, others were in too big pots to please the retailers.

A. Henderson reports that the holly market went on such a rampage December 19 that no one could figure where the price was going to land.

Joseph A. Paquette is a recent addition to the staff of E. Wienhoeber Co. He was with O. C. Saaks, Los Angeles, and later with Smith & Fetters Co., Cleveland.

Greenhouse Co., reports the death, December 20, of Mrs. Higinbotham, mother of the widow of the late Gustave Wittbold, at the family home on North Halsted street.

N. J. Wietor circulated a petition last week which was signed by all the wholesalers in the Atlas block and which resulted in freight elevator service Sunday.

The George Wittbold Co. now has charge of the plants at the Hotel La Salle, one of its men spending the hours from 1 a. m. to 6 a. m. on the job each night.

John Poehlmann says his company never filled so many orders as this Christmas but that the tickets did not average so large as in some other years, which latter fact he thinks due to the impossibility of supplying all the carnations and short roses that were called for.

Peter Reinberg is using all the wood on the Sunburst roses to work up stock for next season. Most other growers will do the same thing now that Christmas is over and the supply of cut flowers will not be large.

E. C. Amling Co. has invested in a latest model Burroughs adding machine operated by an electric motor.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had Proserpine tulips for Christmas, the first noted this season.

C. W. McKellar says the feature of the Christmas business was not the scarcity of carnations but the increased use of baskets of other material than flowers.

The A. L. Randall Co. has added basket making to its many activities. Three weavers were first put to work to meet the demand for special shapes made to order. The next step will be to manufacture stock items.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report that desert holly was unusually popular this year and they could hardly meet the demands, both local and out-of-town orders being heavier than in previous years.

John Winandy, who is in the greenhouses of Hoerber Bros., was called in from Des Plaines to help out on the shipping during the Christmas rush. Harry Manheim says the out-of-town orders amounted to an increase of about ten per cent over last year.

E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, writes from Pasadena that celebrating Christmas in California with Fourth of July weather was a novel experience to one accustomed to the "old fashioned kind" that Chicago enjoys.

The four days preceding Christmas set new records for Erne & Klingel and Mr. Erne states that before next Christmas they hope to have larger quarters.

P. L. McKee, of the John C. Moninger Co., has recovered from an illness with fever.

Additional space will soon be given to the plant department by Poehlmann Bros. Co., and C. G. Anderson, manager of the plant end, will make a trip through the east, where he intends to pick up new varieties from eastern concerns. The new department has more than been a success and the num-

The Southwestern Market.

The market last week was in splendid condition. There was plenty of stock coming in daily and it sold well at reasonable prices. The weather was fine all through the week and from all accounts there is going to be plenty of stock in this market for the Christmas demand. [This letter was written December 22.] Prices are going to be high according to the advance price lists of the local wholesalers, and especially so on red stock, as this has the greatest demand and will not be any too plentiful in any variety. Extra fancy red carnations are quoted at $10 per hundred, while pink and white will not go over $8 per hundred. The lower grades will be quite plentiful, at least enough to go around, and especially so in white and Enchantress. In roses we are looking for a large cut of the Killarney variety, also in Brides and Maids and Marylands, but Beauties and Richmonds will be scarce and high in price. Richmonds are quoted as high as $25, for extra specials, and Killarney at from $6 to $15 per hundred. A fine cut of poinsettias is seen at the markets. Violets will go to $2 per hundred and the supply and demand should be good, as the weather has been just right for them all week. The stock on which the prices will not advance will be lilies, valley, Paper Whites, Romans and stevia. In this stock a large cut is expected. Sweet peas are coming in fine and are in large demand at from 75 cents to $2 per hundred. Smilax, adiantum, asparagus, leucothoe and galax will, as usual, have a good demand at no advance in price. According to the leading retailers it is going to be another plant Christmas. Poinsettia, of course, is the main plant called for, but azaleas, begonias, cyclamens, valley and Romans in pots and pans also will have a heavy demand. All are looking forward to great Christmas business.

NEW YORK.

New York had one of the worst storms of the year on the eve of the holiday. December 24 there was six inches of snow on the level, street traffic was impeded and the flower business practically demoralized. There was plenty of everything, but shipments were delayed and prices had no stability.

The Market.

It was ideal weather for Christmas, clear and crisp. The end of last week found the retail stores all ready for the anticipated rush of Monday and Tuesday. More perfect preparation I have never seen. Before Sunday night arrived every store and branch store was filled to overflowing. The same tendency to handsome combination baskets and boxes was in evidence as in other years; blooming plants in perfect condition, beribboned and mossed and jardiniere, awaited selection.

The cut flower market had not been stirred, up to Saturday night, by any unusual demand. Prices held steady all the week, because of short supply, and the general range of values was not expected to advance unduly even for the Christmas trade, unless it be on red roses, and carnations. The top for American Beauty last week was 50 cents. A few of the novelties, including Shawyer, Russell, Milady and Sunburst, command fancy figures, and Richmond is not far behind. In fact, Beauties were sharing the honors of first place, December 21, with some of the specialties. There are not enough of any of the novelties for the holiday season. Of the older varieties, including Killarney, there is no shortage. The top grades of these dragged at times during the last week, the lower grades selling best and at good prices. Maryland, Killarney Queen, Richmond, Hillingdon, Ward, Bulgarie and Chatenay are all perfect. Such an array of desirable roses was never before seen in the New York market.

There is no surplus of carnations. In fact, every red carnation that could be expected was booked days before the holiday. Valley held at 4 cents all last week, some fine stock bringing $5 per hundred December 21, while the short and inferior stock sold as low as 2 cents. Oncidiums still are used effectively in the retail windows. Plenty of cattleyas are in the market. Some fine gardenias, long-stemmed and with immense bloom, sold at $5 and $6 per dozen December 23, Monday. The supply is light, especially of the higher grades. Lilies held at 8 to 10 cents last week. There is no surplus of these or of callas, the latter reaching $2 a dozen December 21. Violets have been scarce for the first time in many moons. Those up-state growers are shipping west and to local florists direct and last week 75 cents to $1 was already the local price. Poinsettias are everywhere and the medium grades are especially abundant. Some grand stock, long-stemmed and with immense flowers, has sold at $4 and $5 a dozen and was worth it. A large stock of poinsettias in pans was offered by the plantmen and these were on sale in nearly every wholesale window. Of stevia, wallflowers, hyacinths, narcissi, mignonette, sweet peas and daisies there is the usual abundance. A moderate supply of lilac is arriving and a few mums were available up to Christmas.

Boston Invasion.

Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., the well-known Boston retail florists, have made a lease on the property at 561 Fifth avenue, corner of Forty-sixth street, for a term of twenty years from October 1, 1913, with two renewal privileges, each for a term of twenty-one years. The lease shows an annual net rental of $37,000. The lessees will erect a six-story building 25 x 100 feet, the lower floors of which, it is understood, will be used for a retail flower store.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The dull week preceding the holiday leaves the market in unusually good shape. There has been enough business to carry off the rather moderate supply at fair, not fancy, figures. The striking feature of the week has been the continued scarcity of carnations and the strong supply of the Killarney roses. These two facts are mentioned together because of their bearing, one on the other. Good judges assert that the heavy supply of the Irish rose in the shorter grades will do much to make up for the shortcomings of the divine flower. It is an interesting situation because the asking price of carnations for Christmas is no greater than it was last year, despite the shortage. This is explained in two ways: First, that Killarney can often be used in place of carnations; second, there is a limit beyond which it is dangerous to push the price.

The general tone of the market is healthy, in direct contrast to last year at this time. Beauties and Richmond are high in price. So, also, are the novelty roses. The Killarney and My Maryland, on the other hand, are decidedly reasonable and in them there is heavy trading. Violets are in poor supply, as always before Christmas. Paper Whites and stevia are the refuge of the low priced orders. Cut poinsettias have been neglected, presumably for their potted sisters.

The demand for Christmas greens has been large. The wholesalers aim to get this class of stock out of the way by the close of the shortest day of the year. Their effort has been successful. Holly, boxwood, lycopodium and laurel wreathing have been shipped in large quantities, mistletoe in smaller lots. The quality generally has been good. Christmas trees are in rather limited supply.

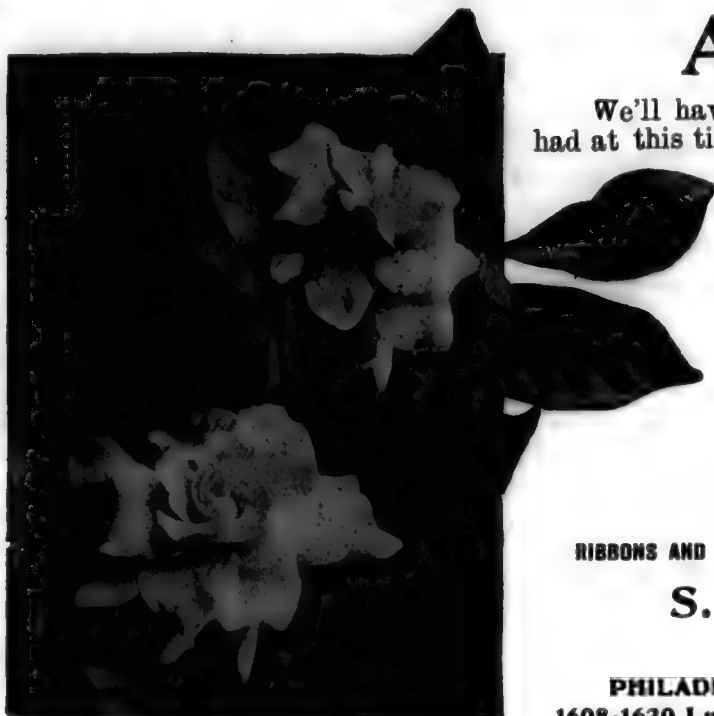

An Incident Abroad.

David Fuerstenberg, president of the Florex Gardens, went out of his way, while in Germany, to visit a florists' establishment of note. Upon his arrival there he was confronted by several signs forbidding admission to visitors under any pretext whatsoever. Undaunted, Mr. Fuerstenberg sent in his card. After a long delay he was ushered in with ceremony and shown all over the place. His host then asked him whether he was surprised at being admitted in spite of the signs outside. On being answered in the affirmative, the German florist explained that he had an American foreman who was conducting his place on the American plan, which he did not wish his neighbors to copy. When the card came in, the manager telephoned the name to the foreman and the answer came back instantly: "That's the fellow with the big house at North Wales; let him in." So Mr. Fuerstenberg was shown every courtesy and consulted on the American style of greenhouse that the German grower planned to erect.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Growers as well as storekeepers are busy preparing everything salable for the approaching Christmas rush. An immense stock of seasonable plants of all kinds, some of them grown here, others from out-of-town nurseries, is on hand, spick and span, ready to be disposed of. The demand for planted baskets, hampers and ferneries is increasing every year, and the retailers are showing an elegant display of them. As in former years, the bulk of the cut flowers handled over the holidays will be shipped from Chicago, because only limited quantities of roses, orchids and valley are grown here. Owing to the abominable, rainy weather, having had only a few sunny days during the last two weeks, the crop of narcissi and hyacinths fell short. Two carloads of Christmas trees arrived here from Michigan, consigned to two local florists, and were distributed among the different retailers. Up to this writing the sale for them has been fair. As a rule the purchasing of Christmas gifts from the florists is left for the last two days and, dry weather prevailing, all of the retailers look forward to doing the same splendid business as heretofore.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. have their entire large place filled with well grown plants for the Christmas and shipping trade.

P. A. Chopin has his new store and show houses in elegant shape and is delighted with the new venture.

Charles Eble's store is richly decorated with dyed oak and beech boughs and poinsettias and packed with fine flowering plants and baskets. He never fails to get his share of the trade.

Henry Cook reports a satisfactory business at his new store. His stock is always well grown.

C. W. Eichling made big preparations for the holidays and stated that the demand for high grade cut flowers is getting larger every year.

The Frank Floral Co. is ready to do a big business for Christmas.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. has its store richly decorated, a life-size reindeer harnessed to a sled loaded with flowers being the main attraction. A large stock of all kinds of seasonable baskets, plants, etc., fills the spacious store.

J. A. Newsham has an exceptionally fine lot of azaleas, orchids, etc., in bloom, besides splendid adiantums and other foliage plants. The sympathy of all the local florists is with him and his family on account of the recent death of his little daughter.

Frank Rieth, Jr., keeps his store always attractive. With a select stock on hand, he hopes to do this season as well as formerly.

U. J. Virgin, as always at Christmas, shows a big display of artistically made up hampers, foliage and flowering plants. He is well satisfied with his share of the flower business done here.

Fred. Ziegler, Jr., has a good trade established and keeps the stock on hand moving.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For the last week flowers have been arriving rather sparingly at the wholesale markets and the supply has hardly been equal to the demand. They are arriving more freely today, December 23, but the demand is excellent, and unless an avalanche of pickled flowers materialize on Christmas eve it looks at this time like a good, old-fashioned clean-up. Some of the leading retailers are devoting most of their energies to pot plants, in which they are doing a heavy trade, and are buying no more cut flowers at prevailing prices than are absolutely necessary.

Roses are arriving in good numbers, and without them the market would, indeed, be somewhat desolate. Prices show a good advance on colored varieties and little change on white. Mrs. Russell and American Beauty with large stems are quoted at $9 to $12 per dozen. The supply of the first named is, of course, quite inadequate to the demand. Never were grander Richmonds seen here for Christmas. The best are making $6 to $8 per dozen, with stems four to five and one-half feet long. Killarney Queen sells well, and so do Cardinal, Taft and Killarney.

Carnations are opening slowly and are bringing high prices, $4 to $8 per hundred, with fancies somewhat higher. Beacon, Scarlet Glow, St. Nicholas, Pink Delight and Gloriosa are in special demand. Single violets are in strong demand and the supply will be inadequate. Of valley, lilies, snapdragons, marguerites, sweet peas, etc., there is a fair supply. Freesias are more abundant than is usual at this season; so, also, are Paper Whites, Romans and Trumpet Majors. In cattleyas the price is $4 per dozen for C. Percivaliana and $6 to $9 for Trianae and late labiata. Gardenias bring splendid prices. Asparagus, adiantum and smilax are all in heavy demand. Greenery, such as laurel, boxwood, holly, ground pine, etc., is scarce and bringing much higher prices than usual. Some of the holly is well berried, but there is, as usual, much poor material.

Christmas is each year becoming more of a plant holiday, and the trade in plants almost overshadows the business done in cut flowers. The high prices of the latter turn many buyers of moderate means to plants, for which a small outlay gives better returns. The leading sellers in plants are azaleas, Otaheite oranges, ardisias, Cincinnati begonias, cyclamens, Primula obconica and Sinensis, ericas, poinsettias and ferns. Poinsettias are in great demand and are unusually well grown.

Various Notes.

F. J. Dolansky has a window containing thirty-six Cattleya Trianae in flower at Galvin's Back Bay store; they are finely bloomed and show that their culture is well understood. Mr. Dolansky has a splendid cut of gardenias, some with 18-inch to 24-inch stems, for the holidays.

Carbone, at his charmingly arranged Boylston street store, is this season doing an immense plant trade. His pink poinsettias are having quite a run. Their color is specially good under artificial light. A great business is done here in Italian and other ware, and all hands are kept hustling.

Joseph Margolis, of H. M. Robinson & Co., reports a marked scarcity in all lines of holiday greenery and wreathing, and wreaths are selling much higher. Marked activity is to be seen in all their departments.

Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, have a good Christmas crop of their carnations, White Wonder, Pink Delight, Beacon and White Enchantress. Two rose-pink seedlings, both from the same seed pod, are particularly good.

men plant of Cattleya Percivaliana from Charles Cooper, gardener to Miss Amy Lowell, of Brookline.

Thos. F. Galvin, Inc., has leased from Klein & Johnson, property at 561 Fifth avenue, New York, for twenty years from October 1, 1913, with two renewal privileges, each for twenty-one years. Upon the lot the lessees will erect a six-story building. The lease shows an annual net rental of $37,500.

The first through freight electric between Boston and Springfield were run December 23. There are thirty-five stations on the road and four cars each way daily. This service will be a great boon to florists in Wellesley, Natick, Framingham, Shrewsbury and other flower-growing centers. The rates are twenty-five per cent lower than those of the express company and the first train arrives in Boston at 6 a. m.

Penn's, on Bromfield street, is doing an immense plant trade. Poinsettias and cyclamens are the best sellers with them, followed by Cincinnati begonias, azaleas and berried plants.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, grows 25,000 carnations, all being sold by Geo. H. Noyes. He has a salmon sport from Winsor which is a great seller and will plant 10,000 of it next season, in a large new house, and introduce it. All of Mr. Howard's carnations were in fine crop for Christmas, Mrs. Ward, Winsor, Pink Delight, White Wonder and Beacon being in grand condition. A plan of growing carnations outdoors in benches built in sections about eight feet long and rolling them indoors has paid well, the plants showing an astonishing advantage over lifted ones.

Zinn's, on Park street, has lilacs and cypripediums of extra fine quality, and the store looks attractive.

Sidney Hoffman is doing a heavy Christmas trade at his big Massachusetts avenue store. He had a large decoration at the Hotel Somerset December 17.

The William E. Doyle Co., on Boylston street, reports business as good. They have a fine lot of Christmas plants and have had some good decorations to carry out of late.

Visitors last week included L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., and W. C. Rickards, representing C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

The meeting for the installation of officers of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held January 28, one week later than usual.

F. H. Houghton says that plant trade is booming with him. He is having a tremendous call for baskets of his own design filled with plants.

insect and fungous enemies, and the manner in which these diseases and pests can best be handled, cured or controlled. The study of fumigation, fertilization, the use of insecticides, the soil, the propagation and production of rare plants, in many branches, has been taken up by Uncle Sam's experts, because the S. A. F. brought to the attention of Uncle Sam the importance of our business in these United States and the standing that it holds in European countries. Our national society has also brought about the use of what are practically standard pots, also the better grading of plants and cut flowers.

The Convention Exhibitions.

Through the trade exhibitions, given in connection with the annual meetings of the S. A. F., it has stimulated the supply business until it is one of the big things of our country. The same is also true of the production of novelties in plants and choice and rare cut flowers. the dissemination of knowledge, which has been brought about by the combination of thought and study which is bound to arise when the best men of our business meet at the annual conventions of the S. A. F.

The national society has also been the means of bringing the individual members and sections of the country into closer and more friendly relationship.

The societies, both the national and the local, have also, to my mind, been partially responsible for the success of the trade papers of today, for with the increased knowledge, and the desire for greater knowledge, it became necessary to have some medium by which it could be quickly and constantly disseminated, and the increased success of the trade papers was the natural result.

Many other benefits resulting from the existence of the national society could be enumerated, but I fear I shall weary you.

The Local Societies.

Our state society has done and can do locally what the national society has been doing nationally.

When I first connected myself with the florists' business I found many instances where one florist, having a surplus of something, would rather let it go to waste than let his near-by competitor have it, always hoping that his competitor's customer would come to him and he thereby be the gainer. The idea of letting a competitor have the last of any stock was not to be thought of. This has all been changed, and to my mind the local society deserves the credit. This society has been the means of bringing together the best men in our business, and by closer association has shown each that the competitor is also a man, just as refined as himself, and that he is just as willing to live and let live.

Acquaintance of Competitors.

Why, years ago, one man would not want his competitor to find out where he was delivering stock, being afraid that he would try to steal his customer! The idea of letting a competitor deliver anything for you was not to be thought of, for he might do something to the plant or design, so as to make it unsatisfactory to the customer, and in that way gain a customer.

But, I am happy to say, the mingling together at these florists' meetings, the friendly discussion of ideas and the any stock that he may have on hand and has no orders for. We readily trust each other, not only with the delivering of orders, but in cases of necessity will call on a competitor to fill orders for us. I know, further, that it has even reached the point where a few even go so far as to notify their competitors when they are going to make wagon deliveries to some distant or out-of-the-way place, offering to take any other florist's work with them.

Our local society also has aided in promoting sociability among the members. It has taught its members that a difference of opinion does not mean that he who differs with us is wrong; rather that he has looked at the same question from a different viewpoint and experience. This coming together of many different minds has been the means of greatly extending our business, and for this condition I give the credit to the S. A. F. and our state society.

Everybody Lend a Hand.

Does it not, therefore, behoove us to bring every man or woman who has any connection with our business, be it as grower, store man, salesman or saleslady, bookkeeper or stenographer, into our state society? The uniting of these many different interests necessary to the development of our business, and discussion by people well versed in the different branches, is sure to help every member of our craft.

While many other points could be brought out and enlarged upon, I trust that these few suggestions and thoughts will cause you all to think about the possibilities of the S. A. F. and our own state society and will cause those of you who are not members of the S. A. F. to make application through your state vice-president, and that you will urge those with whom you come into touch and who are eligible to membership in our state society to join us and in that manner help the good thing along.

The Market.

Everyone seems to be in a cheerful frame of mind and is looking forward to an unusually merry Christmas. There are booths on both sides of the streets in all the principal parts of the city and a whole army of people are inhabiting them, selling fireworks, trinkets and Christmas decorations. From the amount of holly that has arrived during the last few days, one would be led to think there is no more left in the woods. Mistletoe is conspicuous by its almost entire absence. The quality of the decorative greens is better this year than usual, but a great deal of it will remain unsold when the holidays are over.

One not accustomed to this part of the country does not realize what Christmas means in the south. It is the one festival occasion of the year and lasts for a week at least. From the humblest negro cabin to the grandest residence in the west end, everyone must have decorations. The cemeteries are decorated at this time of year in a way that is almost wholly unknown in the north and west. The florists get most of this cemetery work and they are working night and day getting ready for deliveries. Loads of red cedar trees come down every pike these days and are offered on the streets for Christmas trees. The red cedar is the Christmas tree here and a pretty one it makes, too.

Carnations were never in as good supply as they are at present and the quality is as good as the quantity. There are a few small chrysanthemums yet on the market. Violets are the most plentiful they have been this season. Valley is selling at $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are not abundant, but are moving readily. There is a good supply of giganteum lilies. Orchids will be sold in good numbers at $18 per dozen. The cut of roses is little short of phenomenal, all things considered. There are few seconds, and the long stems are in the majority. The unusually favorable season is to blame for this.

Various Notes.

Geny Bros. cut 1,500 carnations one day last week and almost as many every other day. They are not wholesaling any of these. They have some made-up baskets that are quite attractive and should be good sellers. I was especially impressed with the quality of their Ward roses. Earlier in the season these were not coming so well, but now they are hard to beat for a yellow. They sell readily, as the novelty has not worn off in the least.

The Joy Floral Co. will have the largest supply of roses this week they have ever cut in the same length of time. Their Beauties and a double pink Killarney that originated with them are both of the first water. This Killarney does not fade in unfavorable weather and averages a grade longer in stem than the ordinary stock. The bud is much longer, with about a dozen more petals. Their window is a blaze of Christmas red, mostly in ruscus, preserved cypress fronds and immortelles. They were as busy as a hive of bees when I called on them the other day.

A call at the greenhouses of the Mount Olivet Cemetery Co. found the firm doing a brisk business in wreaths and other decorations for the graves. Their houses are looking well, though they have not enough room for their trade.

The new store of McIntyre Bros. is filled to overflowing for the holiday trade and they are getting their share of it, too. Their window is one of the prettiest I have seen for a long time.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week showed a supply of flowers that was only medium in size and a supply of greens that was almost too large. The southern ferneries have been rushing plumosus and Sprenger into the market at a merry rate; in fact, they have been shipping it in so fast that the market could hardly absorb it. In many cases the wholesalers had to direct their consignors to "let down" somewhat until further orders.

The way the cut stock has come into the market for the last few days shows that nearly all growers are trying to "hunch" a little on the retailers, so that when the big day comes they will be well fortified with at least a two days' cut in one. This holding back is all right if the flowers are still good and solid, but if, on the other hand, they come in soft, it has defeated its purpose for them. They can hardly be used by the conscientious retailer, who has the welfare of his trade at heart.

All that can be said of the Christmas business at this writing is that all indications point to a banner business. The supply of every seasonable flower will undoubtedly be better and larger than was hoped for a fortnight ago.

The season has been a good one for decorative material and accessories.

Prompt Attention Given to Out-of-town Orders

The holly was excellent and sold well. Wild smilax was used in larger quantities than ever before. Boxwood ran short and now the only available supply is the stock that arrives by express. This last mode of transportation has necessitated a rise in the price. The immortelle supply in town had a big crimp put into it by the last fortnight's demand.

Various Notes.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have for the last two weeks been using a 5-ton truck as well as their large platform wagon to rush their orders to the depots. The stock of Glory of Cincinnati, cyclamens and poinsettias was good and merited the demand it received. Mr. Peterson and his sons have excellent specimens of their new begonia, Melior, which they will disseminate shortly. Judging from the appearance of Melior by the side of Cincinnati, it is as far ahead of the latter as the latter was ahead of the old Gloire de Lorraine.

C. E. Critchell is now selling from his fifth car of southern smilax for the holiday business and at present he is fearful of this running short.

Mrs. P. J. Olinger, who was at Mr. Olinger's greenhouses at New Castle December 17, is very enthusiastic about the prospects of a large cut for the holidays and early January.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Taking all things into consideration, a day or two before Christmas, it would seem as though the holiday business of 1912 would aggregate as much as previous years and possibly a little more, regardless of the far-reaching spirit of unrest among the employees of the government. There has been a long stretch of dullness and many complaints have been heard, yet there is every reason to believe that as a whole the year was a satisfactory one. Merchants in other lines, if this may give any satisfaction, have also been complaining, but the end of the pre-Christmas rush found them smiling and happy over the results, and so with the florists. It may be that the spirit of Christmas had entered into the veins of all. The temperature has been around 60 degrees, making the weather ideal for the wearing of flowers.

market for the holidays, although in some lines there was not enough to meet all demands. Carnations, for instance, did not come in in quantities that would allow of all orders being filled. One grower put about 3,000 long-stemmed Beauties into the market.

From the number of potted plants sold it would look as though cyclamens and begonias will soon do to the azaleas what the sweet peas did to the bulbous stock and it is only a question of time when the former will have almost driven the azalea from the local market.

Various Notes.

During the Christmas rush several of the firms operated additional stores. J. H. Small & Sons put in a stock of plants, etc., at their old location at Fourteenth and G streets, N. W. All stores put on extra help and this was badly needed, for at times the rush was great. The Center Market presented an attractive appearance, the stalls having been turned into double-deckers for the display of holly wreaths and other reminders of Christmas, and the different florists there made good showings.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

ALREADY it develops that mixed gladiolus bulbs, and some of the named varieties, are scarce. America appears to be more plentiful than last year, but Augusta is short.

FIRE destroyed a corn elevator at Minneapolis, December 21, belonging to the Albert Dickinson Co. The loss is estimated in press reports at from $90,000 to $125,000.

A TENNESSEE correspondent states that a few cow peas are being moved at about $1.50 per bushel, but that there are beginning to be rumors of a short supply and holders are not anxious to sell.

MOST of the leading seed catalogues are going into the mail this week. Some sections of the south have already had one or two books and the response is reported to have been better than usual.

C. C. VALE, of New Carlisle, O., is carrying on a seed business in temporary quarters in a canning building near town, but will soon move into town and he is planning to erect a modern building for his own use next spring.

THE 1913 catalogue of H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta, was the first of the southern books to reach The Review. It came to hand December 21. The Hastings catalogue is printed and mailed at St. Augustine, Fla.

THERE has turned out to be a light crop of soy beans in the Tennessee district and the growers are holding for higher prices. Few had been moved prior to Christmas and the farmers were reported holding for $3 a bushel. The quality is excellent.

BURPEE'S Annual for 1913 came to hand December 21. It is in the usual form. The prices on the scarce items are interesting; some of them follow the wholesale list so closely that, to say the least, they give no opportunity for a charge of taking undue advantage of conditions.

E. E. STEWART, Rives Junction, Mich., has purchased a tract of 220 acres of rich farming land near Brooklyn, Mich., where he will continue his business of growing gladioli for the wholesale trade. He will build a large concrete storage house for the proper handling of the bulbs. His postoffice address after March 15 will be Brooklyn, Mich.

FRANK G. CUTHBERTSON, in a letter published by one of the British trade papers, denies the statement of an English grower who said that "sweet pea growers in California had not fully appreciated the importance of roguing the crops so as to get them true to type." Remarks: All the foregoing varieties are strictly winter-bloomers. The foliage is more rounded, but not so strong as by the late-flowering Spencers, the height six to ten feet under glass, three to five feet when grown outdoors. The flowers are just the same as the late flowering Spencers, with extra large, wavy flowers and exposed or open keel, bearing over fifty per cent four flowers to each stem and if raised under extra ideal condition many will bear five and six flowers. If sowed August 15 they will begin to bloom in sixty-five days. If sowed in October they will begin to bloom in ninety to 100 days, according to the weather. After they are about four feet high, with each foliage sprung one stem with extra strong and large flowers. They are just so productive and early as the common old winter sweet pea.—Ant. C. Zvolanek, originator.

John Young, Sec'y.

"The Best is the Cheapest" is a saying that most growers recognize as the truth regarding lily bulbs. It is generally understood to mean that the best cost more than the lower grades, but in speaking of Horseshoe Brand Bulbs it is a mistaken idea, for they cost no more than most other brands. This is because of the large volume of business done, which enables us to work on a smaller margin of profit than most firms can afford. The bulbs come from the most direct source possible, where they are produced by the best native Japanese growers of lily bulbs in the world. Besides the fact that the price is not higher, fall deliveries of advance orders are made from twelve different cities in the United States and Canada. This means a saving in freight of from $2.00 to $10.00 per 1000 bulbs—have you ever considered the freight you pay? Taking all things into consideration, there are a good many reasons why florists should buy Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs, and there are no reasons, except sentimental reasons, why they should not. You can't buy better bulbs, and you might get worse. The same price to everyone — no favorites. Send us your order now.

PURE SEED.

The Secretary of Agriculture takes to his department most of the credit for the improvement which is being made in the average quality of the seeds offered for planting. In his annual report, just issued, he said:

"Great progress has been made in the matter of securing good seed for the farmer. The early laboratory work inaugurated has been gradually extended until the present time, and the laboratory located in Washington, together with the five branch laboratories maintained in connection with the state agricultural colleges and experiment stations, has tested more than 120,000 samples of seeds for purity or germination or both.

"This work, continued from year to year, has resulted in a much better

NIAGARA

One of the wonders of the GLADIOLUS world.

In type the variety resembles "America," but the flowers appear to be somewhat larger, measuring 4½ inches across. In color the flowers are a delightful cream shade with the two lower inside petals or segments blending to canary yellow. The flower spike is very erect and stout and is wrapped with broad, dark green foliage. The variety is evidently destined to lead in the cream colored varieties.

understanding of the nature and value of pure seeds and has added much to the upbuilding of agriculture. As a result of the information contained in publications on adulterated seeds the sale of adulterated alfalfa and clover seed has practically ceased, and the quantity of other adulterated forage-plant seed on the market is now small in comparison with what it was when these publications were undertaken.

"Among the results to which the work of this laboratory and those of the state experiment stations have contributed is an awakened interest in better seeds on the part of farmers. This is evidenced by the steady increase in the proportion of high-grade seeds on the market each year. Seedsmen are now taking an active interest in seed testing. They are themselves learning to test seeds, and many firms have fitted up seed-testing laboratories of their own.

"The seed-importation act passed at the last session of Congress will prevent the few unscrupulous seed dealers from bringing into the United States low-grade forage-plant seeds which do not find a sale in foreign countries, but which have previously been imported into the United States in considerable quantities.

"During the last year the seed-testing laboratories have been continued. The work has been carried on along lines similar to that of previous years. The investigational work has been divided between studies on physiology of germination and the critical examination of closely related seeds with a view to their easy recognition. Forage-plant seeds, including redtop and hairy vetch, have been examined for the presence of adulterants. Samples of seeds submitted for the purpose of analysis have been examined and reports on their quality have been made to the persons sending the samples. Branch laboratories have been opened in cooperation with the agricultural experiment stations in California and Louisiana, and those in Oregon, Missouri and Indiana have been continued."

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Hayward Floral Co., 216 West Sixth street, has been running some wonderfully effective advertisements in the local dailies. They are what is known as designed advertisements, consisting of a drawing instead of type, and have occupied about nine inches across three columns. The effect on the business has been apparent.

THE PANAMA-PACIFIC ROSE.

Florists throughout the world are to be asked to create a new rose to be named in honor of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Director of Exhibits Asher Carter Baker has authorized George C. Roeding, chief of the department of horticulture, to make the announcement that the exposition will offer a prize of $1,000 for the creation of a new rose for this purpose.

Mr. Roeding, in discussing the announcement, said: "This ought to be one of the great features of our horticultural display. It is possible, with our favorable climatic conditions, to plant roses far in advance of the opening of the exposition. Nothing would add so much to the attractiveness of our outdoor display during the height of the exposition as a large plot of roses loaded with bloom."

VALLEJO, CAL.

D. Gruettner & Son have completed another greenhouse, 30x150, and added extensively to their nursery department. Their downtown retail store is now in larger and more commodious quarters at 331 Georgia street.

J. Markie, of San Francisco, has opened a retail establishment here.

Several large growers are contemplating coming here. The shipping facilities—three lines of steamers and railroads—are unexcelled. San Francisco, the flower market center, is only twenty-eight miles distant by boat. One hour and thirty minutes in transit! This section has long been overlooked, but is coming to the fore now.

R. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Plenty of business and only a limited stock appears to be the forecast for Christmas. This refers quite as much to outdoor stock as indoor and especially to carnations. The cold nights have checked their development and the orders already taken will not be more than half filled. Indoor roses are good, better than have ever been seen in local stock. It is the lack of good outdoor flowers that will be most felt. The retail stores are all well filled with Christmas plants, berried stock and cut flowers and present a lively appearance. There is considerable improvement in baskets this year, several retailers having done remarkably well along this line. This is a healthy sign and looks like waking up to the fact that the public has to be considered. Berried plants are not too plentiful, a few skimmias, English hollies and a small quantity of ardisias being about all that are shown. Poinsettias are about the largest offering in potted plants. They are extra dwarf, well flowered and fresh. Azaleas are better than they at first promised to be, but still not up to previous years, and there is absolutely no bulbous stock to be had in plants. Why growers continually overlook the many pretty little plants that could be grown for holiday business is certainly a hard question to answer. Bulbs are cheap enough, the culture is easy and the results absolutely certain, yet every holiday shows more plainly the need of such stock.

Northern holly appeared in moderate quantity and of extra good quality. Several kinds of evergreen oak have also been pressed into service and answer finely for making up into wreaths. Such stock, mostly gathered from the northern woods, is infinitely better than either long distance holly or local stock, which, of course, is not holly at all, but quite a different shrub. Christmas trees appeared by thousands in a night and, as almost every corner grocery is handling them, the profit will probably not be large.

Various Notes.

Hubert Morton, brother of C. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, opened a retail store at Long Beach, December 17, under the name of Morton's Flower Shop. Mr. Morton made many friends here during the time he was running the Meserve ranch at Signal Hill and all who know him predict a most successful outcome.

I think there were never better roses shown in Los Angeles than those now

J. W. Wolters has a grand Christmas stock. The cyclamens, from the north, with which he furnished his south window, are splendid specimens. Decorations keep the staff busy.

The Los Angeles Flower Market has already booked orders for nearly a million asparagus seeds for the coming season's delivery. As much of this seed is going to customers who bought seed here last year, it looks as though California's seeds were of some value, in spite of the roasting interested eastern men give them. That there have been many frauds perpetrated by unprincipled dealers cannot be denied, but when seed is purchased from firms of repute there is no risk, for they have a reputation to keep up that is worth more than the few dollars the seed would bring. Christmas orders are heavy here, especially in holly, and those for New Year's are already mounting up.

In connection with the movement for the teaching of botany and kindred subjects in the city schools, about fifty school teachers recently visited the growing establishments of Howard & Smith and Dieterich & Turner, at Montebello. A pleasant and most instructive tour was reported and all expressed themselves as delighted with the trip and the many things they saw.

A project is on foot at Redondo Beach to purchase the carnation gardens for a public park and a bond issue of $30,000 has, it is believed, been sanctioned for the purpose. The gardens are probably the oldest commercial establishment near Los Angeles and to turn them to this purpose will be a good thing for this rising and beautiful beach town.

Duncan Murdoch, long known as one of the best Scotch gardeners in this section and late of Englewood, N. J., is working on a large real estate proposition at Beverley Canyon, near this city. If all the plans of the firm carry, Mr.

Murdoch will have ten years' work in cutting up and beautifying the acreage, and there is no better man for the work. (Duncan says it with two r's, a la Harry Lauder.)

The Christmas decorations at the store of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. were much admired and reflect great credit on Mr. Roberts and his capable corps of assistants. Large palms and an immense amount of holly and wreathing were used. Mr. Roberts also received many compliments on his tasteful decorations at the Hoffman Cafe, December 14, when about forty members of the Germain Improvement Association met for their annual dinner. The occasion also marked the farewell attendance of J. Rennison, one of the firm's most energetic and capable outdoor representatives, who left next day

The Market.

The closeness of Christmas seems to have stimulated business in the flower trade; everyone is full of work and sales are brisk. Stock is fairly abundant, but is being kept well cleaned up. Roses are in good shape and are selling briskly, the flowers and foliage showing a marked improvement over recent offerings. Carnations are abundant, but the demand leaves no surplus and appearances point to a shortage in all varieties for Christmas. Poinsettias are more in evidence than in former years, the quality in most cases being excellent, and, while there has not been much sale for them so far, they lend a tone of brightness to the windows that no other flower produces. Baskets of artificial flowers, ruscus, statice, etc., are liberally offered. Chrysanthemums are scarce and bring high prices.

The sale for holly, mistletoe and other Christmas greens is good. Large supplies of fine cyclamens, primulas and other pot plants are in readiness for the usual Christmas demand.

Various Notes.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club December 17, several members who had not been there for months being present, and two new members were taken in. It Relations Between Growers and Retailers," and "Chrysanthemum Culture." The club is doing good work and deserves more support from retailers and growers than it has hitherto received.

Andrew Matthiesen has a fine crop of carnations at his place at Brighton. One house of Beacon is in heavy crop, just right for Christmas. He has recently installed a hauling machine to convey the slab wood used as fuel up from the lake. It works satisfactorily and is much cheaper than teaming.

The Butler Florists opened a new store on Third avenue to take care of their Christmas trade this week.

A new location for a flower store has been found in the First avenue entrance to the Hofbrau Cafe. It is in charge of J. Stiles.

The controversy about the peddling of violets on the streets has been taken up by the local dailies, but as the city ordinance positively forbids anything of the sort, they are merely plowing the sands of the seashore. The proprietor of one of the papers was especially prominent in supporting one of the peddlers and his rancor in being thwarted has evidently raised his ire against the Florists' Club.

the Hollywood Gardens at the Second avenue store. The Christmas cut of carnations at the Hollywood plant will be from 8,000 to 10,000 blooms.

D. R. Peterson, late of Portland, Ore., is now assisting Mrs. L. W. McCoy at her Third avenue store. Mrs. McCoy will use an extra store for Christmas trade, on the corner of Third and Madison streets.

Julius Schnapp, lately with the Hollywood Gardens, has accepted a position in the store of the Tonseth Floral Co., Portland.

Miss Wagner, lately of the Crescent Flower Store, is assisting at the Woodlawn Flower Shop for the Christmas trade.

T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

With the Christmas rush just ahead of us, all florists are taxing their energies and skill to accomplish in a few days what would seem several weeks' work to an outsider. Everything is in readiness and business is coming in nicely. From early observation, business will exceed former years to a large degree. Poinsettias, which are the best sellers, are plentiful and of good quality. Begonias are the best in many years and find favor among the customers. Cyclamens, primroses, ericas and Otaheite oranges also go to make elegant window displays. Roses are in good crop. Richmonds of unusual quality, Brides, Maids, Killarneys, Hillingdons and Aaron Wards will be in sufficient quantities to go around. Carnations will about equal the demand. The shipping trade calls for heavy quantities of cut flowers of all varieties. Mums are almost off the market; only Maud Dean will be available and it commands good prices. Violets, orchids and valley will be scarce. Holly, mistletoe, wreathing and decorative greens are plentiful, but command good prices. Only the berried English and variegated varieties of holly can be secured. Wild holly is almost unknown in this section. All the leading stores have rented additional rooms to take care of the surplus, also as a wrapping and delivering department. Where space is limited, it facilitates matters considerably. Roman hyacinths in pots as well as cut flowers are to be had in limited amounts. Paper Whites and stevia also are on the market.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are only one week in advance of Christmas at this writing and everything has assumed a holiday air. The weather has turned quite warm again and things are favorable for plenty of stock of all kinds. From general appearances we can expect enough to satisfy everyone. This is due in a great measure to the delightful weather we have had for the last month. There is not an oversupply, however, of roses, except the shorter stock. Carnations are good, and cheap as well. Valley, Romans, narcissi, violets and other stock have not advanced in price, except in a few instances, and these have been moderate changes. With the pot stock in sight for Christmas, it seems that there will be rather a scarcity of good poinsettias in pans. Several of our largest growers did not have good success with them this season.

Cyclamens are everywhere and they are the best ever seen here. Azaleas are not quite so full and well shaped as could be wished. Begonias are good but not in large supply. Romans and valley in pots help to make a showing. Ferns and palms are moving well. Ericas and begonias are seen in small lots. Mixed baskets and pans seem as though they will be as popular as ever this year. There are plenty of shipping orders for the country and this branch of the trade is becoming one of the most important with a few of our wholesale dealers.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE peony growers in general report a record demand for roots during 1912 and look forward to even heavier business in 1913.

C. E. BROWNE, formerly importer of horticultural tools at Theodore, Ala., is now with the Glen St. Mary Nurseries, of Glen St. Mary, Fla.

THE firm of Lord & Lord has been incorporated at Dover, Del., with a capital stock of $40,000, to do a general real estate and nursery business.

FRED W. ROYDEN is now manager of the Hoyt Bros.' nursery, at Scotch Grove, Ia., and will live in the residence formerly occupied by Ben Hoyt.

M. LEENDERS & Co., Steil-Tegelen, Holland, are this season distributing a new crimson hybrid tea rose called Mevrouw Dora van Tets. A descriptive list printed in four languages has been sent out.

THE Harmony Nurseries have been incorporated at Evans City, Pa., with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are B. W. Smith and C. H. Smith, of Pittsburgh, and H. L. Blind, of Evans City.

R. K. THOMPSON, who has been engaged in orchard extension work near Stevensville, Mont., for the last three years, has removed to Roswell, N. M., where he will take charge of the development of a large orchard tract for California capitalists.

E. Y. TEAS & SON, Centerville, Ind., announce that because of the advanced age and feeble health of E. Y. Teas, the senior partner, and of his desire to retire from an active business life, they have closed out their entire line of nursery and florists' stock. F. E. Teas, the junior partner, will continue in a similar line, giving especial attention to growing gladioli for the wholesale trade.

Such remedies as whale oil soap, one pound to five gallons of water, Aphine, Imperial soap spray, Ivory soap, Scalecide at the rate of 100 parts of water to one of Scalecide, or any of the nicotine extracts, will be effective. A winter spray after the foliage has fallen should also be given, using for this one of the soluble oil solutions or lime sulphur. CO-OPERATION AMONG GROWERS.

An important step toward coöperation among fruit growers was taken at the recent meeting of the Iowa Horticultural Society in Des Moines, in the organization of the Iowa Fruit Growers' Association. Its object for the present is merely the coöperative buying of orchard supplies. Coöperation in selling was discussed, but this was left for future development and will be undertaken only when the demand for it comes.

The project was proposed incidentally at the horticultural meeting by

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

to take up a position with the Arizona Seed Co., of Phoenix, Ariz. Mr. Renison has had great success in his work since coming here and all regret his leaving. He was the recipient of many eulogistic speeches and a handsome bill roll, suitably inscribed. A large floral piece with the Germain slogan "Germain's Seeds Germinate" formed the center of the decorations, which were carried out in English holly, poinsettias and other Christmas subjects. M. L. Germain, Mr. Meyberg and Mr. Ford all worked hard to make the affair a success and everyone enjoyed himself to the limit. G. Googans made an excellent toastmaster and chairman and, though he had been suffering from rheumatism for several days previously, he evidently was able to forget it for a time.

Robert Schenk, lately of San Francisco and previously of Chicago, is now at Morris Goldenson's. Mr. Goldenson's Christmas windows look fine and he has been making quite a display of orchids of late.

At the Los Angeles Evergreen and Cut Flower Supply Market some elegant wreaths made out of the native ilexes, with berries of the Carolina holly, were recently displayed. Tony Tassano had to take an extra store on Broadway for the rush of orders.

Murata & Co. have added supplies to their line. Business here has nearly doubled since last season. A large amount of stock has been sold for the Tournament of Roses, at Pasadena, New Year's day.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

DETROIT.The Market.

Usually there is a lull in business before the Christmas rush commences, but this year seems to have been an exception. The demand for cut flowers has been heavy and there has been a general shortage of stock of all descriptions, white roses being the only exception. Carnations have been remarkably scarce all this fall and this probably is a reason for the heavy demand for other stock.

From present indications the supply of flowers for Christmas trade will be far short of the demand and plants will have become still more popular. The market is well supplied with plants and the retailer converts cut flower buyers into plant buyers, feeling that by this course he will make friends as well as add to his sales. One of the plants with which the market was well stocked was the ardisia. The lasting qualities of this plant will make it more popular from year to year. Poinsettia plants were plentiful, but in many instances devoid of foliage. Azaleas were good, but not any too plentiful. Cyclamens are becoming more and more popular. Begonias sell, but there is always a kick coming. Boston ferns, although nothing new, started to sell early and were sold by the hundreds.

Red ruscus, boxwood, dogwood berries, prepared ferns, statice and artificial poinsettias were disposed of in quantities far ahead of former years, due no doubt to the skill displayed in the arrangement. Holly was a disappointment. The supply was enough, but the quality so poor that the sale suffered. Better mistletoe has also been seen.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's advertised Ardisia crenulata as the Christmas plant and sold large numbers. One of the large windows was banked almost entirely with this plant.

Walter Taepke had his whole store appropriately decorated, and business opened up well.

wide and, with the exception of a narrow walk down the center, it was one solid mass of plants before the rush began.

Carnations!

A word to the grower of carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this, gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We have 150,000 cuttings ready for DECEMBER delivery, and we shall have 200,000 for JANUARY.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore . . . $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family; extremely free; the earliest scarlet to bloom; continues to the close of the season in fine color. Brings a big Christmas crop; won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

That good pot plants are demanding more attention each year is easily shown at this holiday season. The stores are full of azaleas, begonias, heather, araucarias, ardisias, poinsettias, etc., of quality. The Christmas azaleas never were better. Some excellent Petricks are retailing at from $8 to $12 each, and well worth it. The scarcity of red carnations and red roses on this market may be the reason that cut poinsettias are selling so readily. More and better poinsettias were grown this year than ever before and at this writing they are practically all sold on advance orders. Killarneys are fine and plentiful in the long, choice stock, but scarce in the medium grades. Valley cleans up on sight. Violets are coming in from the east in good shape. Some early Proserpine tulips are seen; fine flowers but short stems. Stevia, the Christmas stand-by for boxes, is scarce. An early fall brought this in during November this year and it has been used up rapidly. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A. Graham & Son, on Euclid avenue, have a fine lot of poinsettias in pans, with foliage down to the pot.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, O., are in with a fine lot of azaleas, begonias, etc.

C. F. Bartels, of North Olmsted, says he will have Freesia Purity in early January.

A meeting was held Monday, December 16, in the Florists' Club rooms, to find ways and means to fight the state boiler law, which compels steam users to have only licensed firemen in charge of boilers of thirty horse-power or over. Only thirty-five firms were represented, but a committee was appointed with power to act in gaining some relief to the florists who are affected by the law.

The Florists' Club will start its annual midwinter bowling tournament in January. Everybody welcome. If you want to get on a team, hand your name to the secretary, on or before Monday, January 13, as the teams will be made up at that time. Come on in—lots of fun and prizes—you don't have to be a 200 bowler to shine in this league. There will be lots of fellows that bowl worse than you do.

Eight prizes will be given to the customers holding the largest value in transferable certificates. The first prize will be a handsome Cote piano, valued at $350. The Cote piano is a high grade instrument and is guaranteed for ten years. It is on display at the firm's store, and on Saturday evenings it is played, so as to give contestants a clear idea of its merits. The other seven prizes vary in value from $4 to $20.

New American Beauty Geranium

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 the New American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on this wonderful new Geranium for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. It originated from a novelty collection and has stood the test now nearly three years.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color—

1. In brilliancy of color.
2. In size of its large blooms.
3. In earliness of bloom.
4. In constancy of bloom.
5. In vigor, strength and stocky plants.
6. In propagating quality.
7. In number of large clusters of blooms.
8. In selling quality.
9. In a wonderful ability to retain its color in cool or the hottest weather.
10. In a Geranium that has come to stay as a money maker.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is semi-double, of the purest American Beauty color. It is so distinct that no difference can be detected in the color of an American Beauty Rose. The only Geranium of its color ever introduced. It flowers freely the entire season. It grows compact, medium dwarf, of stately shape with lustrous green foliage, slightly corrugated, with a brownish circle. It produces gigantic flower heads very freely the entire season. We claim it to have larger flower heads than any other variety of its kind. The individual blooms measure $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches across and have as many as eight fully opened, gigantic flower spikes and several half open and more in bud, in eight-inch pots.

All orders are filled in rotation, so place your orders early with cash accompanying. Stock ready for shipment after January 1st, 1913. Price to the trade from $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pots, 50c each, \$5.00 per dozen, \$30.00 per 100, \$275.00 per 1000; from 3-inch pots, \$1.00 each, \$10.00 per dozen, \$75.00 per 100, \$700.00 per 1000. PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The weather is just right for shoppers, with about the right amount of chill to make flowers look right. The retail shops are looking fine. We cannot see much that is really new, but better taste is displayed each year in arranging plant baskets and the various kinds of artificial wreaths and baskets. There are all kinds of wreaths, including ruscus, boxwood and statice, with all the variations. Small artificial Christmas trees with small cones and red candles are attractive. The retailers have had a splendid week, there being much more than the usual demand for cut flowers for the week before Christmas, when the trade usually lets down, but there has been no trouble getting all the good stock wanted excepting carnations, which continue scarce.

The wholesalers have had a good week, handling quantities of stock and cleaning up every day. Boxwood got scarce during the week, but the dealers filled all orders placed in advance. The fellows who waited were the ones who hunted, but there is still some coming in that will help them out. In the green goods market good holly and holly wreaths are scarce and laurel has doubled in price in the yards. Wild smilax shippers are evidently trying to put the smilax market in the same shape the holly market has been for years. No one here will order holly. They wait and buy it in the yards delivered for less than the dealers ordinarily pay for it. Wild smilax could be bought December 21, good, fresh stock, right off the car, from the commission men at $3.50 per case, and if it should not move readily might sell for less. Christmas prospects among the wholesale men are bright at present. The only trouble looked for is a shortage of carnations, but roses are fine and will be in good crop.

Various Notes.

Samuel McClements was on the sick list last week.

Ben Elliott has sold everything he had ready for Christmas, so took a few days off with a case of the grip, but is out again.

"Billy" Lowe, the green goods man, is on the job as usual, with Christmas trees and all the side lines, and is doing a fine business. Hoo-Hoo.

Tuxedo Park, N. Y.—Patrick Glynn, who for a number of years has been head gardener for A. Monell, continues in that position, reported recent additions to the staff there being of assistants to Mr. Glynn.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Holyoke and Northampton held its first annual meeting at the greenhouses of Reginald S. Carey, South Hadley. A new staff of officers was elected to serve during the coming year. Professor E. J. Canning, of Smith College, was elected president; D. J. Gallivan, of this city, vice-president, and Professor James Whiting, of the State College, secretary. Professor Kinne, of Mount Holyoke, G. H. Sinclair and George Strungel, of this city, were elected members of the executive committee. Afterward there was a talk by James Rollins on "Methods of Gardening in England."

Honorable mention was given to Mr. Graves, of Northampton, for a new variety of carnation, and G. H. Sinclair, of this city, received certificates of merit for two plants of the orchid group.

The society has had a prosperous year and its members extend an invitation to all practical men engaged in any branch of the profession to unite with them. It has a membership of about forty. At the last meeting one new member was admitted and two others were nominated.

The next meeting will be held at the Smith College conservatories Tuesday evening, January 14.

WATERBURY, CONN.

George T. Ryan, who formerly worked for J. Newman & Sons, Boston, has been established here a little over two years and has worked up an excellent business. He has recently been doing some strong advertising in the local papers and reports it has increased his trade about one-third.

Albert Nodine has recently finished a greenhouse and will devote his time to growing bedding stock.

A Mr. Hanson, formerly of Oakville, Conn., is just finishing a house on Hamilton avenue, and also will grow bedding stock.

Newport, Ky.—Charles Pfeiffer's Sons is the name under which the business established many years ago is being conducted. The store is at 809 Monmouth street, with greenhouses at Fort Thomas.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When In Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION.

NORTHPORT.

Color, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W.
 Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather. The growth is wonderfully free and continuous and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We have for immediate delivery A1 rooted cuttings of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Greenhouse Heating.

If your coal bunkers are not full, fill them at once. The days of sharp cold, deep snows and impeded transportation are close at hand. By all means, make certain of your fuel.

THERE are those in the coal trade who think the recent Supreme Court decision in the anthracite coal roads case will have the effect of lower prices next summer, and lower prices for anthracite will result in lower prices for the smokeless bituminous coals so largely used in the greenhouse trade.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

BOILER SHOP POETS.

Today we received quite a novel correspondence from one of our customers in mailing us his check in payment of our bill for repairs; he writes as follows:

Through years of use my boiler got
To leaking for a spell,
And then I had a happy thought;
I went and saw Kroeschell.

They came with tools
And fixed the boiler well,
And now the thing boils hot
As the boilers boil in hell.

The trouble of it is
The money that was mine, is his.

C. A. M.

To the above the following reply was made:

We thank you for your check, C. A.;
Enjoyed your verses much; and, say,
You'd better "can" the rake and hoe
And into writing verses go.

A man who wields the "quill" as you
Is sure a poet through and through,
But unlike poets, as they go,
You are quite practical and know
When boiler troubles come your way
To call upon Kroeschell will pay;
That is, you pay; but then you know
That Kroeschell Bros. need the "dough."
Here's your receipt, my dear old poet.
We wish that everyone should know it.

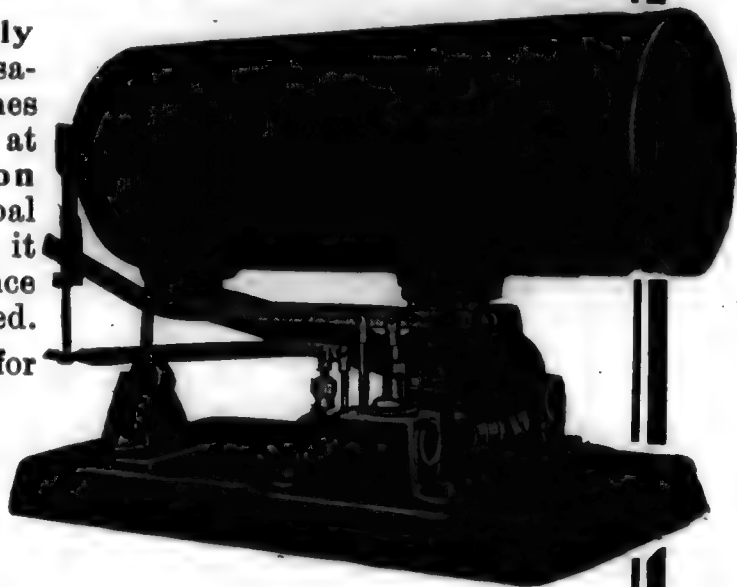

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS

PIPING IN NORTHERN OHIO.

I should like to ask a question on hot water heating. How many 1¼-inch pipes will be needed in a house 20x100, with a shed at the east end and a show house at the west front? Will two 2-inch mains be sufficient to supply the rest of the pipes? Which system would give the better results, with the boiler set in a pit or on the level ground? What size of pipe would you recommend, 1-inch or 1¼-inch? I could use either size.

R. H.

For a house of the size mentioned it will be best to use an open tank system, with the heater in a cellar or pit. Use 2½-inch pipe for the flows and 2-inch for the returns. Of the former, three will be required, one of which can be upon each wall plate and the other under the ridge. For the returns, use three coils of three pipes each, which can be located under the flows with which they are connected.

If a mercury generator, or any of the other closed systems, is used, it would be possible to heat the house to 60 degrees by means of three 2-inch flow pipes and twelve 1¼-inch returns, but this system would not be as economical of fuel and would be less reliable than the open system already described. There would, of course, be considerable saving in the cost of installation and if other arrangements cannot be read-

THE GLASS TRADE.

Florists would not, as a rule, object to the current prices of window glass were they stable, but there are those in other lines who do not accept the assurances of the glass trade as to the reasons for the violent fluctuations of the last few years, maintaining that the present prices, about fifty per cent higher than the low prices of a year ago, are the result of manipulation. It is well understood that the American Window Glass Co., the largest manufacturer, is not a party to any agreement, but that the company, naturally wishing to get as much as it legitimately can for its product, follows the market set by others. The market, it is alleged, is made by concerted action of the manufacturers whose product is sold by a concern called the Johnston Brokerage Co., of Pittsburgh, said to be organized on the lines of the old Imperial Window Glass Co., which was dissolved at the instance of the Department of Justice. This concern now substantially controls the output of the following companies:

PENNSYLVANIA—		Pots.
Eldred Window Glass Co., Punxsutawney...	33
Federated Window Glass Co., Point Marion	36
Jennette Window Glass Co., Point Marion	36
Smethport Glass Co., Smethport...	36
Consolidated Window Glass Co., Hazelhurst	36
Allegheny Window Glass Co., Port Allegheny	24
Point Marion Window Glass Co., Pt. Marion	24
Kerrin Glass Co., Eldred...	30
OHIO—
Licking Window Glass Co., Utica...	30
Camp Glass Co., Mt. Vernon...	54
Utica Window Glass Co., Utica...	48
WEST VIRGINIA—
Fairmont Window Glass Co., Fairmont...	36
Crescent Window Glass Co., Weston...	48
Dunkirk Window Glass Co., So. Charleston...	36
Clarksburg Glass Co., Clarksburg...	36
Ideal Window Glass Co., West Union...	24
Independent Window Glass Co., Sistersville...	24
Lafayette Window Glass Co., Clarksburg...	36
Modern Window Glass Co., Salem...	36
Salem Co-op. Window Glass Co., Salem...	24
Tuna Glass Co., Clarksburg...	46
West Fork Glass Co., Clarksburg...	36

The plants thus controlled by the brokerage company operate a large percentage of the total number of pots in the United States. Glass trade interests assert that present prices are no more than living prices, but antagonistic interests say the situation is such as to give rise to a strong demand for a removal of the tariff on window glass, which is now practically prohibitive on all of the coarser grades, and this idea will undoubtedly be put before the Ways and Means Committee at an early date. Unless it can be done, the consumers will point out, there will be continued danger of the development of combinations like the Imperial Window Glass Co. and the present "brokerage" arrangement.

Give Your Plants All the Sun

You can do so by simply using the SUNLIGHT DOUBLE-GLASS SASHES on your hot-beds and cold-frames. A 1/4-inch layer of dry air between the layers of glass affords ample protection. No mats or other covering ever needed.

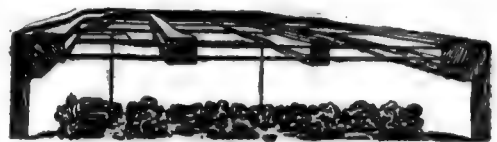

They let in all the light and all the heat that the sun's rays carry. But they never permit the stored heat to escape or the outside cold to enter.

With these sashes half the labor and cost are saved, and far better and earlier plants secured. They give you flowers and vegetables when they are luxuriant.

Many thousands giving perfect service.

GET THESE TWO BOOKS—One is our FREE Catalogue; the other is Prof. Massey's Hand-Book of Cold-frames and Hot-beds, sent for 4 cents in stamps.

Wizard Brand Manure is especially useful to the florist in winter, when the crude, rough manure supply is wet, frozen and hard to get.

SHEEP or CATTLE MANURE PULVERIZED or SHREDDED

A kind for every use and in most convenient, effective form. Saves labor, is ready for instant use when most needed and can be depended upon.

One hundred pounds in a bag equals a whole wagon load of stable manure.

Don't fail to specify WIZARD BRAND when you order and you'll get the best. Your supply house can furnish it if you insist, or we ship direct promptly.

Lawrence, Mass.—Thornton Bros. deny the truth of a rumor that they are planning to retire from the retail flower trade. They say they have no intention of withdrawing, either from the flower or seed business, but are spending thousands of dollars in preparing for future developments.

Cleveland, O.—Miss Belle Anderson, manager of the flower store of Fred W. Griffin, on Euclid avenue, recently accomplished the arrest of a bogus physician who had swindled a number of east end florists. A man representing himself as Dr. Mitchell telephoned to her for a bunch of roses and requested that the messenger be supplied with the change for $10. She notified the police and secured the services of two officers. Then she sent a "dummy" package to the make-believe doctor, and the two policemen were at hand to do the rest.

I have used the Imperial Plant Food, both in Powder and Biscuit form, and have always found it safe and reliable, as well as very marked in its effects on all classes of plants on which it has been used. For the commercial florist or private gardener who needs a really high-grade and quick-acting fertilizer, there is nothing superior to the Imperial Plant Food. Many skilled growers have been using it for years, and I have yet to meet one who does not commend it.

HARTFORD, CONN.
The Market.

Last week the weather was cloudy and quite mild. The absence of hard frost, when so much shipping is going on, is quite a help to both wholesalers and retailers. Immense quantities of potted stock are daily coming into the market and everybody is preparing for an extra heavy trade. Begonias, all sizes, are in big demand, also cyclamens and ardisias. Primulas are scarce, but there are plenty of poinsettias and foliage plants to make up for this deficiency. Cut flowers are in good supply, excepting carnations. Roses are selling well, Richmond and Killarney bringing the best prices. American Beauties are of better quality than they have been for some time, but the supply is on the short side. There is a good demand for sweet peas and violets. Valley is scarce, as are orchids. Greens of all kinds are in heavy demand.

Various Notes.

The Bon Ton Flower Shop opened December 14. Page Potter and Herman Hollander, formerly of the Quality Flower Shop, are the proprietors.

Frank W. Richardson, of East Hartford, has torn down one of his greenhouses and a Lord & Burnham house 20 x 90 has been erected in its place.

Edward Welch, Jr., is improving slowly after the accident he had last month, but is not yet able to give an account of how he met with his injuries.

W. H. Atkins, of Burnside, is cutting some extra good carnations, but the supply is not large enough to fill all his orders.

W. Thompson, of West Hartford, is cutting some fine violets and sweet peas, which find a ready market.

W. S. C.

Marinette, Wis.—It is reported that George Vatter was hit recently by a Northwestern switching engine. The extent of his injuries is not stated, but he is expected to recover.

Watertown, Wis.—Mr. and Mrs. Stuebe, who succeeded L. Lotz & Co. in 1909, are now conducting the business under the name of the Stuebe Floral Co. The name Lotz & Co. was retained until the present season.

...NEWS NOTES...

Wilkesburg, Pa.—Charles C. Wesley has opened a retail flower store in the Colonial building.

Johnstown, Pa.—E. Fryer, for many years in the greenhouse business here, has retired and is in Mercy hospital.

Lynn, Mass.—The Pine Grove Floral Corporation has been formed here, with a capital of $10,000, by Reuben G. York, Ellen D. York and Frederick Southworth.

Paris, Tex.—J. W. Goree has opened an uptown office and salesroom on the west side of the square. Besides his range of greenhouses, he has extensive grounds for outside planting.

Alvin, Tex.—Beginning with January, 1913, W. L. Heller, of the Heller & Lomanitz Jasmine & Floral Co., will take personal charge of that firm's jasmine plantation. This jasmine plantation, which covers ten acres, is probably the largest one-block jasmine farm in the country.

Broadalbin, N. Y.—William K. Smith has just completed three new greenhouses, one of them 26x175, another 32x125, and the third 32x60. With this addition, he now has a total of nearly 30,000 square feet of glass. He also has a store at Gloversville and is doing a first-class business.

Spirit Lake, Ia.—Judson Klein, proprietor of the Spirit Lake Greenhouses, has arranged for the moving of his glass from his father's farm to his property in town. Mr. Klein has 4,000 square feet of glass and has been in greenhouse work at Spirit Lake for three years. While moving his glass to town he will add another house to his range.

For the Grower Who Looks Ahead

YOU'LL not deny our claim that the man who looks ahead farthest gets ahead quickest.

To wake up some day and wish you had built your flower factory of the most modern, shade-free, enduring construction isn't going to be pleasant. A few years ago there was such a difference of opinion as to whether it was not cheaper to build cheap and often, rather than spend more and build enduringly. But now it were as reasonable to argue that water is not wet as that the best type of Iron Frame construction is not the one to build.

This is the "concrete age"—the age when the railroads and every form of industry are building for permanency.

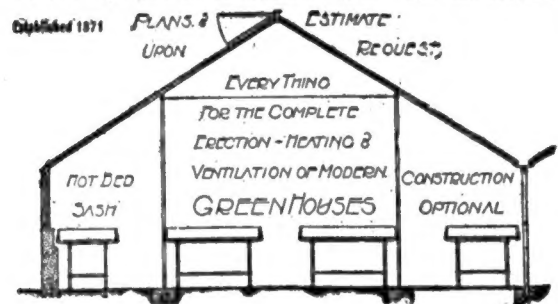

There are certain reasonable reasons why our Iron Frame houses are the houses of permanency for you to build. Let us give you the reasons and send you our catalogue.

SPECIAL NOTICE

For 1913 we have arranged to take care of all our regular customers and all the new ones that finally decide that they can't be happy without Moninger materials. Increased facilities, more stock, more help, a larger office and a more efficient organization all the way through. We are ready for you, so get started early.

One new thing next year will be the Moninger refrigerating outfits. It's not new either, but has now undergone the final test and is ready to go on the market.

Then you are soon to hear about that wonderful iron paint for heating systems and all iron work. A really wonderful combination that has been in preparation almost five years. You will want some of this paint right off. We have ordered 10,000 gallons for the first six months and will be ready to deliver about January 15th.

1913 is going to be a big year. Get started early and reap the benefit.

During 1912 it was our pleasure to do more business than we ever did before and our customers are entirely responsible for it. Right here, Mr. Customer, we want to thank you for every dollar you spent with us. Come again when you need anything, for we appreciate your trade and will treat you fair and square.

Our watering systems were put on the market this year and some of our friends now have their pump and engine troubles out of the way forever. Better figure on getting a Moninger outfit next time you buy.

The new flat rafter house came out this season. It is the best house we make and we think the best that can be made by anybody.

Yes, it was a good year all around and our customers are entitled to the credit.

Continued success to you, Mr. Customer.
